DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me, and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

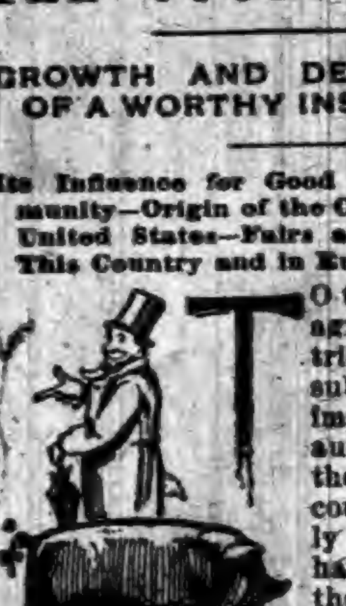
THE COUNTY FAIR.

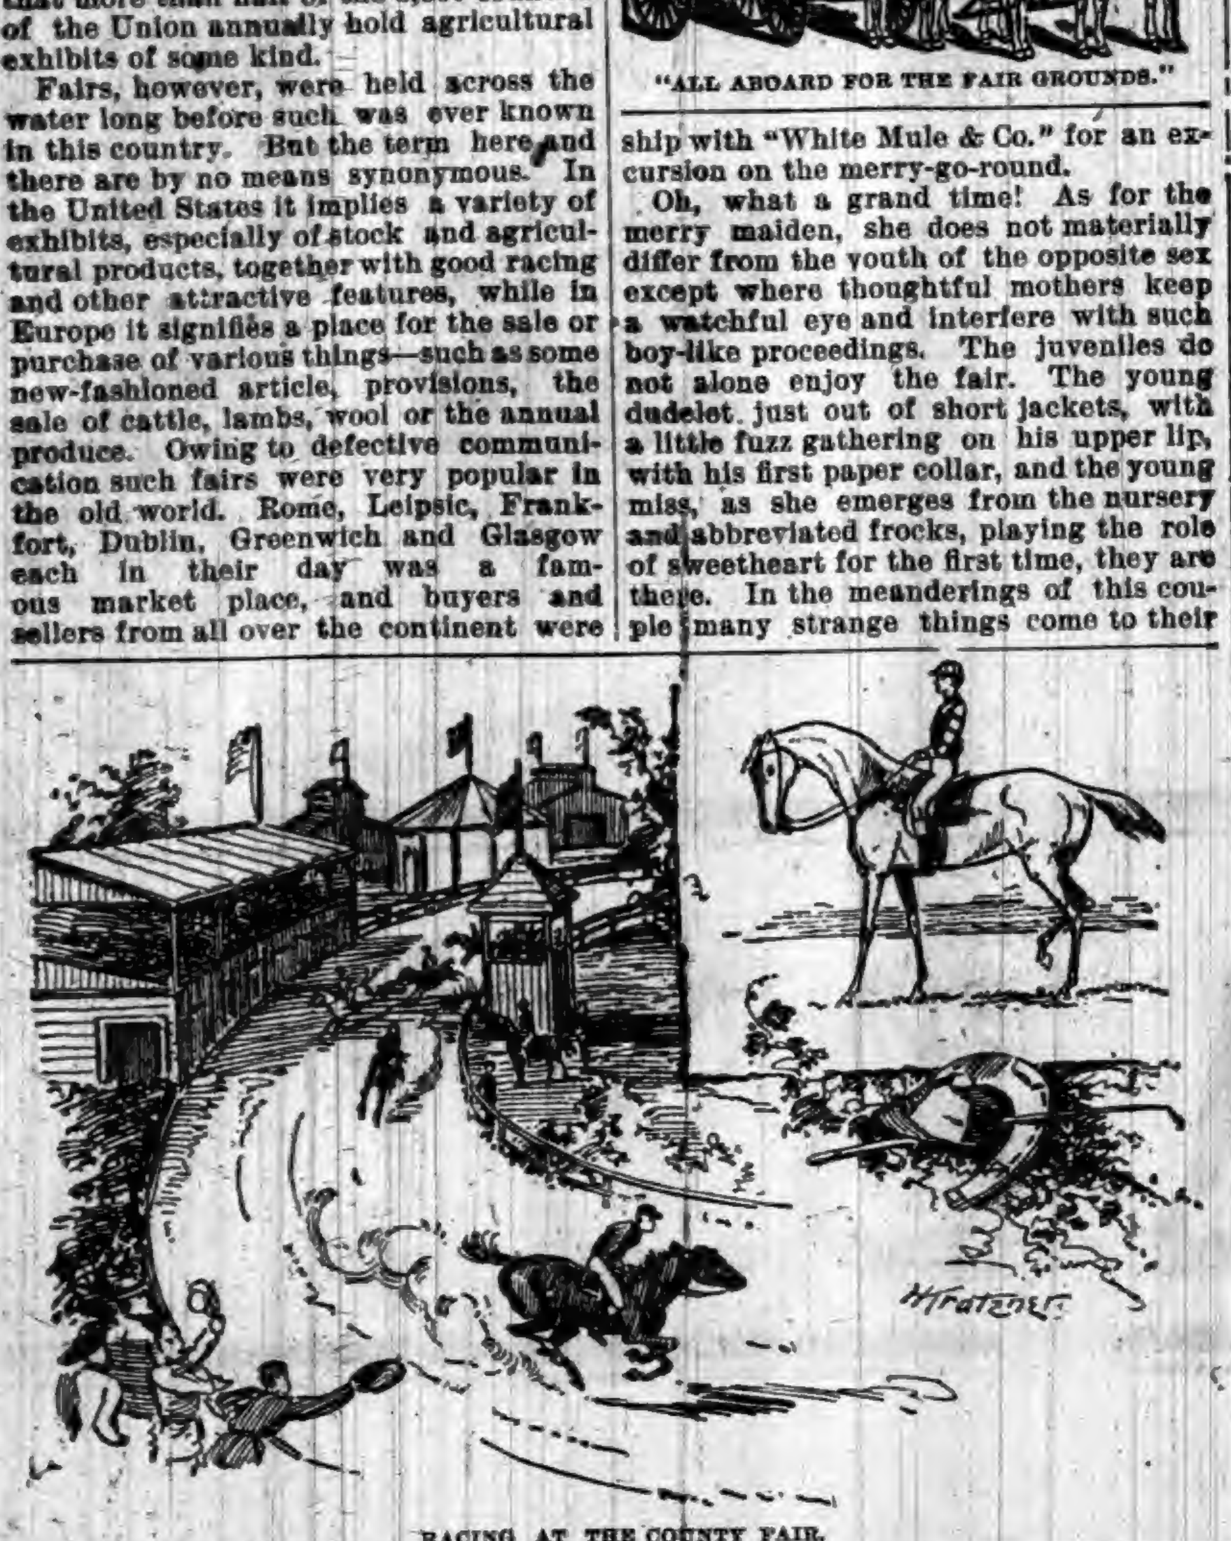
GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT OF A WORTHY INSTITUTION.

Its Influence for Good Upon the Community—Origin of the County Fair in the United States—Fairs as Conducted in This Country and in Europe.

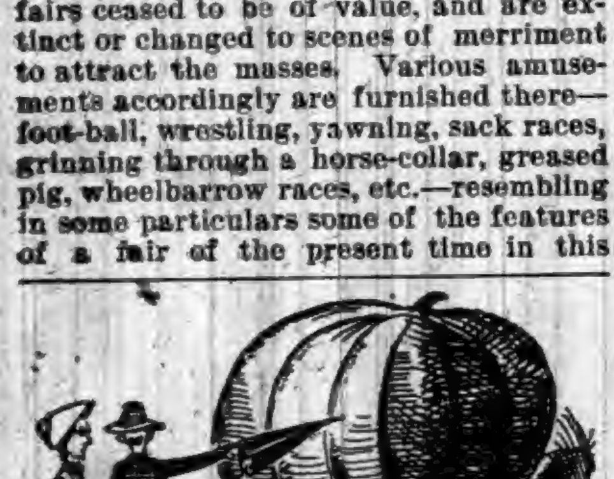


TO the people in the agricultural districts there are few subjects of more importance, in the autumn season of the year, than the county fair. Scarcely seventy years have rolled by since the idea was originated at Albany, N. Y., by a prosperous merchant named Elkanah Watson. Rapidly has it grown in popularity until to-day statistics show that more than half of the 3,500 counties of the Union annually hold agricultural exhibits of some kind.

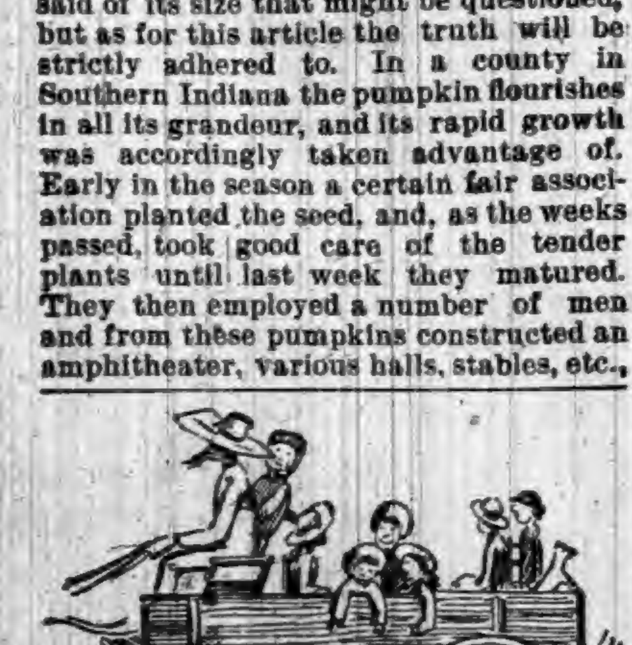
Fairs, however, were held across the water long before such was ever known in this country. But the term here and there are by no means synonymous. In the United States it implies a variety of exhibits, especially of stock and agricultural products, together with good racing and other attractive features, while in Europe it signifies a place for the sale or purchase of various things—such as some new-fashioned article, provisions, the sale of cattle, lambs, wool or the annual produce. Owing to defective communication such fairs were very popular in the old world. Rome, Leipsic, Frankfort, Dublin, Greenwich and Glasgow each in their day was a famous market place, and buyers and sellers from all over the continent were frequent visitors. Gradually have those fairs ceased to be of value, and are extinct or changed to scenes of merriment to attract the masses. Various amusements accordingly are furnished there—foot-ball, wrestling, yawning, sack races, grinning through a horse-collar, greased pig, wheelbarrow races, etc.—resembling in some particulars some of the features of a fair of the present time in this country. Many have been the changes wrought in half a century. People of this age see and enjoy things that to our forefathers would have been improbable and visionary. Numerous are the hardy pioneers who can recall the first attempt at anything like a fair in their county. Perhaps one yoke of cattle, a donkey, a span of mules, a mare and a colt was the sum total of the stock show, while the other things on exhibition would not furnish a small load for an ordinary overland peddler. So radical has been the change that a comparison is useless. To-day, with commodious buildings, extensive grounds and fine race tracks, we are well supplied with all the modern conveniences. A spirit of rivalry has aroused the hitherto latent enthusiasm of many a farmer and his household, and as autumn approaches the result of a summer's labor is quite evident on observing the fattened cattle, hogs and sheep, the fine display of turkeys, geese, ducks, chickens, and the blooded draught, trotting or road horses. The machinery, culinary and art departments each contribute considerably toward making the fair a success. With an unlimited supply of fruits and cereals the programme is about completed. A passing notice, however, is due the time-honored pumpkin, and referring to it we do so in all reverence. In speaking of the traditional pumpkin all are aware of the fact that this magnificent vegetable has been often slandered and many things said of its size that might be questioned, but as for this article the truth will be strictly adhered to. In a county in Southern Indiana the pumpkin flourishes in all its grandeur, and its rapid growth was accordingly taken advantage of. Early in the season a certain fair association planted the seed, and, as the weeks passed, took good care of the tender plants until last week they matured. They then employed a number of men and from these pumpkins constructed an amphitheater, various halls, stables, etc., and besides will have surplus enough to furnish feed for the stock gratis.



RACING AT THE COUNTY FAIR.



"THE TRADITIONAL PUMPKIN."

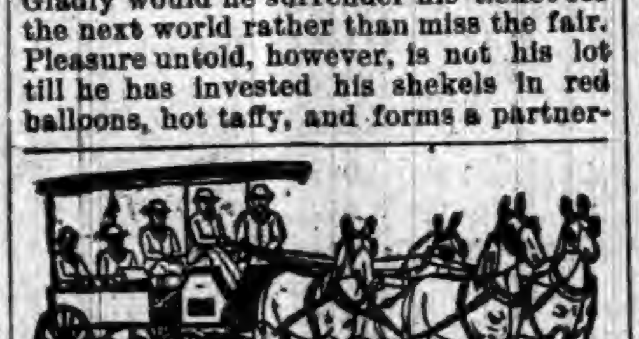


COUNTRY FOLK GOING TO THE FAIR.

No other attraction than the fair can cause the rural people to attend so nearly en masse. The old, the young, the rich, the poor prepare to turn from the busy cares of life and enjoy themselves. The interest in the county fair continues to increase year by year. Divers reasons can be assigned for the associations reaching this successful stage, among which are efficient officers, prohibiting gambling and drinking, and last, but not least, the people taking an interest and offering liberal patronage. Competition can in no way be better encouraged than by a prosperous fair. The county can conceive no means to better advertise her resources. Find a county with a poor county fair and you find a locality that does not extend a cordial welcome to capital or labor.

The gala day arrives, and the farmer, giving his horses an extra rubbing, dons his best bib and tucker, and, with his family dressed in their Sunday raiment, and with a big, well-filled lunch basket, is soon in the family conveyance and off to the fair.

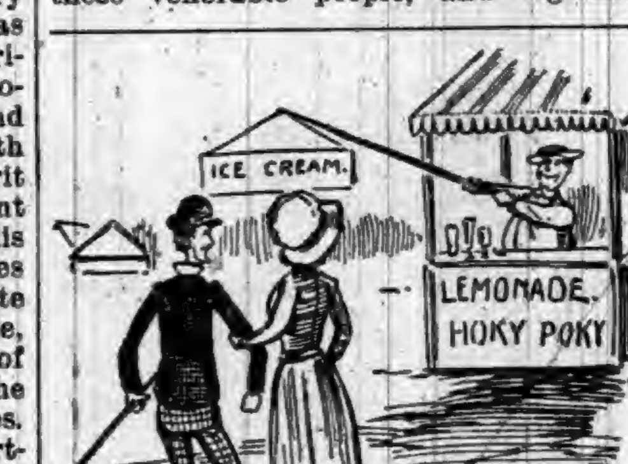
The journey is made, and the fun begins. Each pays his money and takes his choice. Amusements are there to suit the wants of all, regardless of age, race, creed, or color. For the verdant youth who for the first time is released from his mother's apron strings, and is permitted to roam at his own sweet will, many are the things that will tickle his fancy. He covets everything he sees. Gladly would he surrender his ticket for the next world rather than miss the fair. Pleasure untold, however, is not his lot till he has invested his shekels in red balloons, hot taffy, and forms a partnership with "White Mule & Co." for an excursion on the merry-go-round.



"ALL ABOARD FOR THE FAIR GROUNDS."

Oh, what a grand time! As for the merry maiden, she does not materially differ from the youth of the opposite sex except where thoughtful mothers keep a watchful eye and interfere with such boy-like proceedings. The juveniles do not alone enjoy the fair. The young dudelet, just out of short jackets, with a little fuzz gathering on his upper lip, with his first paper collar, and the young miss, as she emerges from the nursery and abbreviated frocks, playing the role of sweetheart for the first time, they are there. In the meanderings of this couple many strange things come to their vision. Arm in arm, promenading as gracefully as two muscovy ducks, they are taking in the fair when cruelly and unsuspectingly the young escort is brought face to face with a variety of sportive signs that are calculated to make his pocketbook feel very hungry. During the day this couple offer an excellent target for the taffy and lemonade venders, who courteously extend them an invitation to stop, examine and invest. Does he invest? His exchequer is getting low, but Sal gives him an affectionate wink and his substance is wasted on hoky-poky, circus lemonade, popcorn and many other things found at a well-regulated fair. Eventually the day draws to a close, the sun begins to set behind a distant stock pen, the bullfrog in the pool commences his evening warble, the pollywogs in their native puddles prepare themselves for the shades of night, and the youthful couple reluctantly take their departure.

Another kind of pleasure awaits the older people. To them the things so much prized by the children are of minor importance; they have come to see the people. Friends are met who have long been absent. Comments on the crops and fair are indulged in. The success or failure, the marriage or death, of an acquaintance or relative is freely discussed. A prominent feature of many fairs in recent years is the "Old Settlers' Reunion." A general good time is had. Good speakers are obtained to address these venerable people, and together with many reminiscences constitute a programme that is quite interesting. None present more highly appreciate the fair than those who by reason of their own exertion have done so much toward bringing the county toward its present state of perfection. Most of these have spent their allotted time here, and Father Time is fast leaving his impress on their once strong but now delicate frame, and the day will soon come when such gatherings will not be honored by their presence.



SIMPLE BUT SUGGESTIVE.

Perfection in county fairs as in many other ventures has not yet been attained. But does this signify they are not a success? We appreciate the varieties of taste and refrain from making suggestions, but believe that improvements could be made in even the best of our county fairs. Already such rapid advancements have been made as to surpass the expectations of the most sanguine. Let the good work go on until the people of every county are so aroused and impressed as to be stimulated to more earnest endeavors toward making their fair an ideal one and a booming success.

HIRAM W. THOMAS.

Cornering the Old Lady on the Milk Question.

"Judging from the flavor of this milk, I should say it was of the vintage of '76," remarked a Harlem girl who enjoys the distinction of being what is known as a sweet girl graduate.

"You may know a good deal, Sarah, but you seem to have neglected to learn that milk doesn't belong to vintage. Vintage refers to something that is taken from the vine."

"Why, mother," returned the girl, didn't you know that milk was taken from a vine?"

"I didn't know anything of the kind," said the mother.

"But it's true," insisted Sarah.

"Oh, nonsense!" interjected materfamilias, "what vine?"

"Bovine!" replied the girl, and the old lady was so flustered that she put pepper on her Charlotte Russe.

Never Mixed Business.

A man with a box on his shoulder was making his way along Chambers street the other day, when it fell to the walk. After two or three efforts to replace it he appealed to a man in a doorway with:

"Give me a lift, please?"

"Can't do it," was the prompt reply.

"And why not?"

"Because I never mix business. I am a plumber, and the man next door is in the elevator business. It's for him to give you a lift."

The man with the box thought for a moment, grinned in a good-natured way, and by an extra grunt reshouldered the box and passed on.—New York Sun.

The Way Made Clear.

One of the most serious obstacles to success in the way of man is planted right in the middle of the road to health. How to restore and to maintain a regular habit of body and digestion is too often a source of needless and, unhappily, of vain inquiry. It is not necessary to inveigh against drastic purgatives. They who have used them continuously know the consequence. A remedy which unites the action of a regulating medicine for the bowels with that of a tonic both for those organs, the liver and the stomach, is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, sanctioned by the best medical authority, and receiving daily the indorsement of our fellow-countrymen. With this effectual, though gentle, laxative at hand, it is possible to defy those changes of temperature productive of constipation, as well as constitutional attacks of biliousness, which beset even people naturally healthy. Malaria, dyspepsia, rheumatism, and kidney troubles are remedied and prevented by the Bitters.

White Swelling

"In 1887, my son, 7 years old, had a white swelling come on his right leg below the knee, which contracted the muscles so that his leg was drawn up at right angles. I considered him a confirmed cripple. Hood's Sarsaparilla woke up his appetite, and soon pieces of bone came from the sore. The discharge decreased, the swelling went down, the leg straightened out, and in a few months he had perfect use of his leg. He now runs everywhere, and apparently is as well as ever." JOHN L. A LEVEL HEAD.

The Advantage of Presence of Mind in an Emergency.

During the late strike on the New York Central Railroad, the militia were ordered to be in readiness in case of a riot, but they were not called out.

In an interview Gov. Hill said the troops were not to be called upon except in case of an emergency. The emergency had not arisen, therefore they would not be ordered out. He remarked that this was the first great strike with which he had had experience, and he did not propose to lose his head; the only point at which there had then been any serious trouble was at Syracuse, and there a deputy sheriff had lost his head and precipitated an encounter.

The strike continued several weeks, and there was riotous action at various points along the road, but the civil authorities were able to cope with it without calling on the militia.

The test of a man's real ability comes when an emergency arises which makes a hasty call on his good judgment and discretion. The man who retains his presence of mind, maintains his equipoise and exercises sound discretion at such critical junctures, is to be relied on and will be put to the front.

Men with level heads have the staying qualities which do not falter in the face of danger. Otis A. Cole, of Kinsman, O., June 10, 1890, writes: "In the fall of 1888 I was feeling very ill. I consulted a doctor and he said I had Bright's disease of the kidneys and that he would not stand in my shoes for the State of Ohio." But he did not lose courage or give up; he says: "I saw the testimonial of Mr. John Coleman, 100 Gregory St., New Haven, Conn., and I wrote to him. In due time I received an answer, stating that the testimonial he gave was genuine and not overdrawn in any particular. I took a good many bottles of Warner's Safe Cure; have not taken any for one year."

Gov. Hill is accounted a very successful man; he is cool and calculating and belongs to the class that do not lose their heads when emergencies arise.

German Coinage.

The German East African Company has just had coined a new lot of metal money for the German colonies. The silver pieces are of about the size and value of an Austrian gulden, approximately forty cents. The coat of arms consists of a lion and a bust of the German Emperor in the uniform of the Guraissier Guards. The copper coins are worth about one and one-third cents each, and are inscribed with Arabian characters. Italy, too, has instituted a new coinage for her African possessions. The silver pieces are worth a little less than a dollar each, and bear the face of King Humbert and a statement of the value in Italian and Arabian. The bronze coins represent a value of two cents or one cent each.

Leaving All Hatred Behind.

An immoderate drinker about to die, asked his wife to bring him a glass of water.

"Water!" she exclaimed, in amazement, "did I understand you to ask for water?"

"Yes," said he faintly, "before leaving this world I would wish to reconcile myself with the object of my chief hatred."

This Is Meant for You.

It has been truly said that half the world does not know how the other half lives. Comparatively few of us have perfect health, owing to the impure condition of our blood. But we rub along from day to day, with scarcely a thought, unless forced to our attention, of the thousands all about us who are suffering from scrofula, salt rheum, and other serious blood disorders, and whose agonies can only be imagined. The marked success of Hood's Sarsaparilla for these troubles, as shown in our advertising columns frequently, certainly seems to justify urging the use of this excellent medicine by all who know that their blood is disordered. Every claim in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla is fully backed up by what the medicine has done and is still doing, and when its proprietors urge its merits and its use upon all who suffer from impure blood, in great or small degrees, they certainly mean to include you.

"Well! Well!"

That's the way you feel after one or two of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have done their work. You feel well, instead of bilious and constipated; your sick headache, dizziness and indigestion are gone. It's done mildly and easily, too. You don't have to feel worse before you feel better. That is the trouble with the huge, old-fashioned pill. These are small, sugar-coated, easiest to take. One little Pellet's a laxative, three to four are cathartic. They regulate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels—quickly, but thoroughly. They're the cheapest pill, sold by druggists, because you only pay for the good you get. They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, every time, or your money is returned. That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on.

which means strictly, that the pain-stricken seek a prompt relief with no return of the pain, and this, they say, St. Jacobs Oil will give. This is its excellence.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. BUTLER, IND., Oct. 11, 1890.

EDITOR COURIER:

Governments, both state and national occasionally commit grave errors in passing impracticable laws, or such as serve the interests of the few at the expense of the general public. One of these I have previously stated in the Press, was the enfranchising the great mass of ignorant liberated slaves. These form a great bone of contention between the dominant parties, both using all their efforts to receive and control this element for partisan purposes.

If the reapportionment under the new census, or the newly admitted states are strongly in favor of the now dominant party, then this negro element in politics will be allowed to drift in its own course. But if the parties after the apportionment retain their present close relation in contest for control of the government, then these ignorant mortals will continue to be factors in our political compaigns. If this element could be taken out, even for a specified time, by education or some property qualifications under state or other laws, the race problem would adjust itself with far less friction. In its bearing, this negro question in politics is local, only as before stated, when elections are close, and each party would strain every nerve to gain the victory. Politics in our day is a scramble for power and patronage regardless of the national welfare.

In looking back the past seventeen years, and seeing the financial distress that the repeal of the silver law was instrumental in causing, we wonder why our statesmen should have been so short-sighted, as by this one act alone perhaps more injury was done the farmers than any other for years, more especially wheat growers. We played into the English capitalist, who could come to this country buy our debased silver coin or bullion at seventy cents on the dollar, re-coin into rupees and take these to India and buy wheat at low rates. The result was the English capitalist made thirty cents on the dollar in re-coining, and we as competitors in the English market with India were compelled to sell our surplus wheat at the same rates. Again while this contraction in our currency was going on our population was increasing at the rate of nearly a million and a half per year. Money being the circulating medium, this being diminished while the country was growing the inevitable result was financial starvation.

The silver law passed by the late session of congress, was no doubt brought about by the pressure of public opinion, which is calling for relief. We already feel the effects of an increase in the currency. A continued increase up to the maximum of money that can be used in business, will help in restoring a healthy tone to our industries. Some enthusiasts claim all the increase in the price of farm products to the rise in silver, but it is evident that part of the advanced prices must be attributed to the failure or partial failure of crops. The writer is of the opinion that the McKinley law is another of the errors of congress, even with its restricted reciprocity proviso. I would like to see an explanation of how it will benefit farmers or manufacturers. It is said it will open up a broader market for our surplus products. Will the south American republics pay us more for our manufactures than they will for English, German or French goods of same quality? Will they give us more for our flour or wheat than they will for Russian or India wheat? If not where do we get any benefit. What is the difference to us if we have to compete in the world's market, whether it be in Europe or South America? Possibly this will open up a field for agricultural implements. We are told that increasing our tariff will encourage our home manufacturers to shut out competition of importations and cut down revenue receipts. There is one way by which these things may be accomplished, that is, by our manufacturers and dealers selling for less than importers of foreign goods. For example we will say, if foreign manufactures can sell us a suit of clothes under free trade for ten dollars, the tariff on these are 50 per cent, making the suit say fifteen dollars, (we will for illustration merely add the tariff, leaving out profits, insurance, etc., of merchants.) If our home manufacturers charge fifteen dollars for a suit such as this, it is plain that importations will continue to come the same as before, the person who buys the clothes pays the extra 5 dollars, and not the foreigner. If our manufacturers and merchants want to control our home market let them sell for less than the foreigners can, quality considered, let them sell at the price they have been selling or less, and leave the burden of the increased tariff to the importations.

We will suppose the average wage worker out of his earnings is able to buy a suit of clothes costing ten dollars, if the price is raised to fifteen dollars, instead of buying a new suit each year he can only buy two suits in three years. Thus it will be seen that this high tariff cuts both ways. Instead of encouraging our home market it clogs it by restricting consumption. The best way would seem then, for our interests in keeping our home markets, is not in increasing the price of our own goods to ourselves by increasing as the tariff is increased. We gain nothing, but rather lose by the increase in cost and less demand for our products. Respectfully Yours,

JOHN LOWE.

A Query.

Why is it that under our government no such thing as an income tax can now be? It is supposed that under a government deriving all its power from the consent of the governed, whatever legislative action the people desire they can have. Of course, measures may be advocated which are not known to be desired by more than a minority, while a majority may be opposed; but the case we have now to consider is not one of that kind. We once had an income tax which gave great satisfaction to the majority of our people, to all our industrial classes, scarcely opposed except by a class that could not number one per cent of our entire population. Now how is it that legislation which our people almost unanimously would be glad to have, cannot be had because there is a class opposed to it, whose numbers would not exceed one to a hundred in favor of it? The only conceivable reason why not, can only be one that is clearly obvious: The class opposed are those who are known as the millionaires. They don't like to pay taxes. It is to them a thing very distasteful. The theory appears to be that the men who perform all the useful labor—do all the agricultural, manufacturing and mechanical work—those whose labor has produced every dollar of the wealth that the millionaires possess, should also have the privilege of paying the great bulk of all taxes required for the support of government. No one can deny that the facts in this connection are as we have herein represented: It may suggest to our readers some matter for reflection; but we will here and now add no comment.

The Kouse Trial.

The trial of John Kouse for stabbing P. F. Ryan, began in court Monday forenoon, before Judge Powers, with Presecutor Bratton and C. E. Emanuel for the state, and W. H. Dills and J. E. Rose for defendant. The forenoon was occupied in securing a jury, but they succeeded in keeping on eight of the regular panel. The following are the jury, the last four on the list being the new men:

James Cool, Fred Bunge, Jos. Kelham, Eugene Carper, A. Christoffel, J. G. Hamilton, Fred Bartels, Adam Rickey, Morris Widney, P. D. Ginder, Joseph Sewell and W. F. Bloodhart. There are twelve good men, and if the accused does not have a fair trial, it will be no fault of theirs. The first witness called, was P. F. Ryan, the man who was stabbed. He stated the matter about as we published it at the time, and so we give the substance of what was said by other witnesses—those who saw the affray. The next called was John Pipes. He was working at the band saw mill at the time. Was at the north side of mill near the dock track, Ryan and Kouse, were having loud talk, about some logs the latter had hauled. He heard Ryan tell Kouse to get his pay for these logs, but not to haul any more. Kouse said "You are a son-of-a-b—h," and Ryan struck him. Appeared to hit him on forehead, Kouse staggered back, then went for Ryan striking at the latter, Ryan called out for help, and that Kouse was cutting him to pieces, and ran away, Kouse after him. They ran around to north of building. Witness had hurried up, when the fight began. When he reached them Kouse had his arms about Ryan, from behind. Witness pulled him off. Did not think Blany helped pull him off. Dr. Matheny was called. (Much sparring from lawyers, the defense trying to keep out some of his testimony and prosecution wanting to hear more.) In substance, the doctor stated, a team from the mill had come for him in a hurry. Started right off, on a trot, then on a run. Found Ryan very weak from loss of blood, was not bleeding externally, much prostrated, could talk only a few words at a time, pulse at wrist hardly felt, and extremities cold. Got to Ryan in 20 minutes or so, after he was stabbed. Dressed wound, found a cut in lower part of small intestine, cut across about half off. It seemed as if knife had been turned in the wound, not a straight stab. Blade must have been at least 1½ inches long. On cross examination said Ryan's struggle, and running, then walking to the office might have weakened him somewhat, wound was not torn, but cut. (Here court adjourned to 8 a. m Tuesday.)

Tuesday, 8 a. m. Judge decided he could not admit Ryan's wound in evidence and as to another question, as to whether Ryan had had trouble with other employes, would hear arguments. Race, or class jealousy might be shown perhaps, but not individual cases. Dr. Swarts, was then called. Has been physician and surgeon 30 years. Buggy came for him and he went to Ryan in great haste. Was lying in east room of Nicky & Gandy office, very weak, breathed hard, cold sweat, little or no pulse, wound was in abdomen a little below and to right of navel, was 1½ inches in length outside and about 8 inches inside. Must have been made with sharp knife, must haue had a turning or drawing of the knife after it was in. Staid till Ryan was taken home. Such a wound was liable to be fatal, especially in such hot weather. The quarrel and struggle would make the shock worse. On cross-examination. Wound was nearly straight across the abdomen. Gangrene is likely to set in, such weather, but death more likely to occur from the wound itself. Doctor gave the lawyers many pointers.

Oscar Elson called. Resides in northwest part of Auburn, Kouse lives next door. Had just got home from railroad on which he is employed. Came about 5 p. m.; saw deputy sheriff, and others including some Nickey & Gandy men, looking about Kouse's premises. As they did not find him they went away. Witness at suggestion of Mrs. Kouse, went out to search. Went to cornfield about ½ mile north. Saw Kouse there. He was whittling with his knife. Asked him if he knew what he had done. He said yes. He had had a quarrel with Ryan about scaling some logs, and Ryan struck him. Then in defending himself, as he claimed, he had stabbed Ryan with his pocket knife, with the small blade. He said Ryan had an ax in his hand and he feared would strike him. I told Kouse he had better give himself up. He went with me to his house, stopped about five minute and then started down town. Geo Weamer and Frank Zimmorman also told him better to give himself up. He went down town the back way at my suggestion as there were many people on Main street, and I feared violence. Many gathered at the jail when Kouse went in. Kouse had given me the knife when at the cornfield, (Here he produced the knife—a common pocket knife, which was given to Bratton.)

E. A Watson called. Was at the elevator north of track when saw the men quarreling. Could not see who was with them. Soon after saw them near the north side of mill struggling, Kouse holding Ryan, and the latter trying to get away. I ran over that way, and met Ryan coming across the railroad near depot. Was on sort of a trot, was holding his hands over his bowels. He said, "Colonel, I am cut," and went on up to the office. Here the state rested and defense called Frank Londy of Busco. Mr. Loudy is a member of town board. Had known Ryan 15 years. Ryan's character is good Here the defense stopped him, saying they had not consulted the Busco witnesses. All these were taken into another room, and on returning, John Blany was called. He had told Kouse he was short some logs he had hauled, and on that day, Aug. 2, he went to the mill to see about it, Kouse went along He found one of his loads of that week, scaled and another not scaled, and the third he could not find. When Ryan went with them to find logs I said, "there are my logs." Ryan said the logs were not piled right and they must pile them better, or stop hauling, and told Kouse to come to the office and get his money, and called Kouse a yahoo. Kouse said he would as soon be a yahoo as an Irish son-of a-b—h. Ryan struck back at him with back of hand, staggering Kouse. Kouse tried to get hold of him, but Ryan ran. They passed behind some timber and when I got to them, Ryan had an ax in his hands and Kouse was behind, with his arms around Ryan, seemingly to keep him from striking. I caught the ax in one hand and Kouse in the other, and threw ax away and then got Kouse away, Pipes came up and helped me. Kouse and I then went up town. Some one told him not to go now to the office for his pay as the men would kill him. As we went up Jackson street, near Nick Ensley's he showed me a cut on his head. It was bleeding. K. and I had been hauling together so as to help one another. Did not see any knife during scuffle, but Kouse was biting Ryan's arm, while holding him from behind. I did not tell Pipes to let them alone. Isaac Hague justice, was called to tell what Pipes had testified to on the first examination, but he had lost his notes and could not well remember. J. W. Johnson, A. M. Richards, F. A. Small, Charles R esch, Wesley Miser, G. H. Oberholtzer, E. Bruot, Henry Sherlock, W. H. Wolf, James Eber and others were called by defense to show that Kouse is a peaceable man. All were asked if they had heard that Kouse had been arrested for getting whisky for A. Watson, and put into jail. Also as to a mumber of fights, and an assault on a woman at the Junction. Most of them had not heard of these. John Treesh tesified that Ryan had told him that if he had reached the ax sooner this trial would not have been in court.

Kouse, the defendant, was then put on the stand. He said the quarrel began when Ryan said, "that is a h—l of a place to unload logs." I said I could not do better. We disputed and he told me to go off. I said I wanted my pay. Ryan called me a d——d Dutch bastard, and I called him a flannel mouthed Irish son-of a-b——h Then he struck me with his fist, I staggered back and he followed part way, saying "Now I have you where I want you. Then he turned and ran toward where the ax was, and I followed about ten feet behind. overtook him just as he got to the ax. He raised it with both hands to strike me, when I stabbed him. Knife was in my left hand and I caught the ax with my right. Knife dropped and we struggled for the ax and I got him around the body, one arm over his right and other under his left arm. He let go ax with right hand, and grabbed my throat. But I held him, biting his right arm, each was kicking the other. Stabbed only once. Had it in my hand whittling since I left home. When Blany and Pipes separated us, Blany picked up the knife and gave it to me. Ryan went to office. Blany and I went to Stamets' grocery, then across on to Jackson street. Crowd began to follow talking loud. Blany went back to talk with them. I kept on, when I got into cornfield I looked at knife. It had no blood. I was not behind Ryan, when holding him. Did not saw or slash in wound, just gave him straight stab, and Ryan jerked back. (He here took knife and showed how he did it). After some other unimportant testimony, both sides rested. Pleading began, Emanuel first for prosecution, and at five adjourned to 8 a. m. next day. Rose for the defense spoke Wednesday morning, as Judge Dawson had not been able to assist. Mr. Dills made the third plea, and Mr. Bratton then closed for the state. All the speeches were earnest and able. The jury retired. At about five in the afternoon, they brought in a verdict of guilty, and made the punishment two years, and $10 fine. The jury were then excused till next Monday. (It should be noted that Ryan had testified he was stabbed at the time he struck Kouse. But Kouse said, it was not till after Ryan had got to the ax and had it drawn. It also appeared that a book in Ryan's pocket over the right breast had received a stab, going half through, but neither knew, or seemed to know, when this was done.)

AN OLD MURDER BROUGHT TO LIGHT.

A Steamer Blows Up—'Twill Be Gresham—The Lottery Law—An Arkansas Town Burned—Snow in the South—The Dreaded La Grippe Again—An Indian Outbreak Imminent.

MURDER WILL OUT!

Death-Bed Confession Brings to Light an Old Murder.

About the year 1874 or 1875 a stock buyer named Jamison, from Ohio, made his appearance in Brown County, Ind., and was known to carry big sums of money with him. He stopped at the residence of one John Curry for the night and seems not to have been seen or heard of afterwards. His mysterious disappearance at the time created considerable stir and talk, as Curry bore an unsavory reputation and was suspected of many lesser crimes. The matter of Jamison's disappearance soon blew over, however, and has been buried in profound silence ever since until a few days ago, when Wm. P. Taggart, who was brought to death's door, revealed the terrible secret which had been weighing on him for years. Just about ten minutes before his death he stated to those about him that he and Curry and another man had murdered Jamison for his money, and did secure $1,800 cash off his person.

Curry has been dead some six years, and the whereabouts of the other man, if still living, are not stated. Taggart was a man who drank lots of whisky, but was never suspected, and stood reasonably well with his neighbors. He was well known in that part of the country, and at that time was worth considerable money. He is well connected, and the matter of the revelation has been kept very quiet, but has crept out.

It Will be Gresham.

For all that the public knows to the contrary the selection of Judge Gresham to the Supreme Bench is still in abeyance. There is scarcely a doubt, however, that the place has been offered to the distinguished jurist, as advices from the National Capital indicate. The chief item of confirmation just brought forth came from there and was to the effect that ex-Congressman Jno. H. Baker, one of the best known Republicans in the Hoosier State, left for home after holding a prolonged consultation with the President. When asked by a friend what the object of his visit was, he revealed the particulars of the projected deal. The slate as agreed by the officials is Gresham for the Supreme Court, District Judge Woods, of Indiana, to succeed him on the Circuit bench, and ex-Congressman Baker to step into the place now occupied by Judge Woods.

Ohio Legislature.

The House of Ohio Reprentatives passed the Soncrat bill and so solved the question of Cincinnati Government, for which the extra session of the Ohio Legislature was called by Gov. Campbell. The bill provides that the present Board of Public Affairs shall be abolished and a new one appointed by the Mayor of Cincinnati. The board thus appointed will serve until next April, when their successors will be elected by the people. The Legislature adjurned sine die.

Exploded Her Boilers.

W. H. Brown's tow-boat, "Alex. Swift" exploded her boilers while steaming up the Monongahela River, opposite Glenwood. The crew, eight in number, miraculously escaped the shock of the explosion and swam to the shore. The "Alex. Swift" was one of the largest tow-boats on the river, and was returning from her first trip since she was completely overhauled. The boat is a complete wreck. It was valued at about $30,000.

Hennessey's Slayers.

The preliminary examination of the accused in the Hennessey assassination case at New Orleans was postponed indefinitely on motion of the District Attorney. The prisoners were remanded without bail. Two more folding guns were found by the street gangs in the vicinity of the killing; they were no doubt used by the assassins.

Dusky Fanatics.

The Indian Bureau has received from Agent McLaughlin at the Standing Rock Indian Agency a report upon the prospective outbreak among the Sioux in consequence of the promised coming of the "new Messiah." Sitting Bull is taking advantage of their religious frenzy to arouse them against the whites.

La Grippe in Brooklyn.

The citizens of Brooklyn are uneasy, least the dreaded "grippe" of last winter had reappeared. Several reputable physicians say they have many cases on their hands and that the disease is without doubt the grippe. The symptoms are identical with those of the Russian visitor.

Snow on Green Leaves.

Reports from Knoxville, Tenn., say that a considerable quantity of snow fell in the mountains. Two to four inches are reported at Cranberry. This is about two or three weeks earlier than usual for snow in the mountains. In some places snow has fallen on green leaves.

Philadelphia to Be Recounted.

Mayor Fitler has decided to have a recount of Philadelphia's population,

The Lottery Law.

Attorney General Miller has sent out to the United States Marshals and District Attorneys throughout the country copies of a circular letter directing their attention to the provisions of the recent lottery act, and instructing them to "spare no effort in its enforcement."

An Arkansas Town Burned.

At Eureka Springs, Ark., fire consumed property valued at $200,000. There was no loss of life. The Perry House, Springfield House, Ohio House and thirty-five other business and dwelling houses were destroyed.

The Cincinnati Board Muddle.

Contrary to general expectation an application was made in the Cincinnati Courts for an injunction to restrain Mayor Mosby from appointing members of the board of city affairs, authorized by the act of Legislature. Application was made to Judge Hull, of the Superior Court, by Louis Reemelin, William Montgomery and Ed Donham, of the Board of Public Improvements, which was authorized by the same act. The ground of the legislation is that the act of the Legislature was illegal and void because it is unconstitutional in being a special act conferring corporate powers, in that it limits the selection of members to the two leading political parties. A temporary order was issued.

Mayor Mosby said that he would go ahead and appoint Messrs. Thomas G. Smith and T. W. Graydon, Republicans, and Messrs. Gustav Tafel and May Fechheimer, Democrats.

FIERY FLAMES.

A Terrible Conflagration in Mobile—$650,000 in Property Burned.

A fire which started in a shingle mill, at Mobile, Ala., resulted in the most disastrous conflagration that city has had since the war. The fire began in a shingle mill and factory near the river front, just outside the northern boundary of the city limit. A strong wind was blowing and the flames soon communicated to the cotton warehouses which line the river front, from Beauregard street to their northern boundary, southward six blocks, and from the river front westward to Manolia street, three blocks. From the shingle mill to Goodman's warehouse on the block bounded by Front, Beauregard, Water and Lipscomb streets, the distance is six hundred yards, and almost as soon as smoke was seen issuing from the dock the cotton blazed up. In Goodman's was stored 900 bales of cotton, and sparks from this cotton carried by the wind next communicated the flames to Brown's warehouse on Lipscomb and Water streets, running back to Manolia street to the southwest to the Mobile Oil Mill, which was next south, on each side of Front street, and to the wharf front of the Mobile and Birmingham Railway Company, which was on the water front from Beauregard to Lipscomb streets. The inflammable character of the material fed the flames and the great gale of wind blowing caused the fire to spread with lightning-like rapidity and it looked as if the fire would spread from end to end of the water front of the city. Below Mobile oil mills in that company's slip were two steamers, the Jewell and Mary Elizabeth, and also the steamer Hebe S., the tug Margaret Lienhard and the Government snagboat Warrior. The loss will aggregate $650,000.

ANOTHER BAD ONE.

Thirty People Injured in a Railroad Wreck.

Thirty people were seriously injured by the wrecking of train No. 5, the through Santa Fe vestibule Denver express at Wakarusa, Kan. The train was running at a high rate of speed and left the track at a curve. The tender, express, mail and baggage cars and three Pullman vestibule cars all left the track. The chair car, sleeper and tourist cars were all thrown on their sides, and the track was torn up for 400 feet. The following persons were injured, many of them seriously:

W. F. Jones, mail agent, Kansas City, pinned between cars and injured internally. J. W. Fadley, mail agent, Kansas City, internally injured. Harry Stone, mail agent, Kansas City, head bruised. Mrs. Ella Steele, New York City, hurt in the head. E. L. Terry, express messenger, Kansas City, badly injured in spine. L. J. Johnson, baggage agent, Kansas City, leg hurt. Henry Lindsey, Topeka, bruised inside, jaw hurt. Mattie O'Connell, Chicago, head and back injured. Mrs. Dr. Beaslee, Telluride, Col., bruised, teeth knocked out. E. N. Brasle, same place, contusion. Mrs. Geo. Turley, Fresno, Cal., back cut. Mrs. J. M. C. Farnand, Terrell Hill, Ohio, head cut. S. Sylvester, Milton, Cal., knee injured. C. F. Farrington, Lishon, Ill., collar bone dislocated. J. J. Buckley, brakeman, back hurt. Elizabeth Babbit, Oakland, Cal., arm injured. Mrs. W. J. McClure, Kansas City, arm dislocated. Mr. T. W. White, Oakland, Cal., F. A. Faic, Albequerque, N. M., George F. Reppy, Denver, Solon E. Rose, Albequerque, Carl B. Hankins, Aspen, Col., W. J. Jones, Kansas City, J. A. Coulter, Colorado Springs.

DESPERATE DUEL.

One of the Antagonists Dead and the Other Dying.

A desperate duel to the death was fought near Danielsville, Ga., in which William Sanders, a prominent planter, was killed, and William Martin, his neighbor, was fatally wounded. For some time there has been bad blood between the men. Each had appeared in court as witness against the other and several times serious difficulties have taken place between them. The trouble culminated in a duel. Martin lives a quarter of a mile from Sanders and is a tenant on a plantation of Sanders' sons. Sanders heard shooting in the direction of Martin's house, and looking out saw his own hogs running. He at once concluded that Martin was shooting at them. Martin having been prosecuted on a charge of that kind before. So Sanders took his gun and started to Martin's.

When asked what he meant by shooting at the hogs Martin said he would shoot him (Sanders) too if he bothered him, and after a few more words the men began firing. Martin emptied his double-barreled gun and five-shooter at Sanders. Four shots took effect. Any one of them would have been fatal.

Sanders shot at Martin five times, three from a pistol and too from a gun. Three of these took effect. Martin will die.

GOT A BIG HAUL.

Three Bandits Board a Train and Rob the Employes and Passengers.

As the south bound train on the Santa Fe pulled out of Socorro, N. M., three men were seen to step on board. After the train had passed San Antonio, these strangers entered the Pullman sleeper and locked the doors, then drew their guns on the porter and conductor and relieved them of their surplus cash. Then they introduced themselves to the passengers, going through the most of them and making quite a haul. They jumped from the train on the Basque de Apache grant, taking to the hills. It is estimated that they got $1,500. The officers of the road have offered a reward of $1,000 for their arrest. Parties of deputies have started in different directions, and it is thought that it will be impossible for them to escape.

Was it a Mafia Murder.

A cold-blooded shooting that will end in murder took place at Steubenville, O. Frank Cruse met Frank Galto in Pittsburgh. Cruse offered Galto work if he would go to Steubenville with him. Galto accepted, but when he met Cruse in the city the latter turned suddenly to Galto and said: "Frank, you did a dirty thing to me once, now I'll kill you." Cruse then pulled out a revolver and shot Galto three times and fled, leaving him for dead. Galto will die. Cruse's motive for shooting could not have been robbery, as Galto had $34 in his boots. Both men are Italians. Cruse belongs to the Mafia, which had sworn to kill Galto. The police are hunting Cruse, who is supposed to be hiding in Steubenville.

A Horrible Hoosier Cutting.

At Rome City, Ind, Lum Kane, a farmer, was drinking in the hotel saloon, when John and Jim Piatt entered. The trio exchanged words, then blows and finally a rough and tumble fight followed. John Piatt caught Kane about the waist, clutching the man's arm in the vice-like grip and while thus at the mercy of his foes, Jim Piatt whipped out an ugly knife, and thrusting it into Kane's mouth he pulled first to the right and then to the left, splitting the man's cheeks from ear to ear. He then cut Kane's nose off and inflicted several body wounds besides. At the approach of a constable, Piatt fled, threatening death to any man who followed him. Kane is mortally wounded and public indignation is aroused at the atrocity of the crime.

A Conflicting Decision.

In his instructions to the grand jury at Bloomfield, Iowa, Judge Leggett said that under the decision of the United States Supreme Court it was not a crime to sell liquors imported from another State in the original packages until the Wilson bill was passed by Congress and became a law. Judge Leggett declares that the action of the United States Courts in other States on this subject was not binding on the courts of Iowa, and that until the question was finally settled by the higher courts it is the duty of the grand jury to consider the law valid and to enforce it against all violators.

Mafia Murder.

While hauling in driftwood in the morning at Kennery; fourteen miles above New Orleans, some men drew in a sack containing the head of an Italian. There were marks of strangulation around the neck. It was evidently a murder, and is supposed to have been by the order of the Mafia to keep an important witness from testimony in the Hennessey assassination case, or by the vandetta. The officials are investigating the matter thoroughly with a view to ascertaining the name and occupation of the murdered man and his connections, if any, with the principals now in jail.

Swift Vengeance.

At Sullivan, Ind., Ed Houck went home drunk and began to abuse his wife, who was ill in bed, threatening to kill her with a hatchet. While he was standing over the bed where she lay four masked men entered the room, took him out and, presumably, with the same hatchet, beat his head into a jelly, part of the brains coming out. He cannot live long. No clew is yet known as to who did the deed, no one seeing them except Houck's wife, who cannot describe them very accurately. The officers are looking after the matter, but are unable to get anything tangible as yet.

Temperance Tiff.

The State Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held at Stockton, Cal., refused to adopt a resolution indorsing Miss Frances E. Willard, but compromised by passing a resolution supporting the work of the national organization presided over by Miss Willard. The ruction grew out of the question of party prohibition which Miss Willard so strongly advocates at all times, and which has led to the formation in some states of a non-partisan W. T. C. A.

Horribly Mangled.

While Mary Thomas, aged, twenty-seven, employed by the Pittsburg Printing Company, at Harrisburg Pa., was feeding a high speed press, her clothing became entangled in a six-inch pulley. The wheel was making about 175 revolutions per minute and before it could be stopped Miss Thomas was horribly bruised, receiving fatal injuries. Her head, arms and shoulders were battered against a box with each revolution. She was removed to the hospital, but cannot survive.

Blown to Atoms.

One of the fulminate departments of the Union Metallic Cartridge Company at Bridgeport Conn., was blown up with terrific force causing great consternation among the 600 employes in the main factory. George Baker and his son, Frederick Baker, were employed in the department at the time. A moment before the explosion the son became frightened and fled from the place. The father was blown to atoms, his body being scattered in every direction.

Fifteen Buildings Burned.

Fire broke out in Morley's boot and shoe store at Andover, O., and spread rapidly, The town had no fire apparatus and an engine was sent from Jefferson. The fire was extinguished, but not until fifteen buildings, including the postoffice, had been completely destroyed. All were business places. The cause of the fire is unknown, and estimates of the loss and insurance not yet obtained.

Queer Proceedings.

B. F. Wisener, of Ohio, was found dead in Oakland, Cal. Wisner's brother immediately started from Barnesville, O., to claim the remains, but that did not deter Public Administrator Stanley from filing an application for letters on the estate. Considerable comment is made on the action of the Public Administrator in trying to seize the property of the dead man.

Buffalo Boodlers.

Indictments were presented by the grand jury against fourteen of the largest contractors in Buffalo, N. Y. They are all charged with conspiring to defraud the city by submitting extortionate bids for constructing a sewer.

Big Blaze—Twelve Horses Burned.

Peter Rebold's undertaking establishment in Fairmount, O., was destroyed by fire. Twelve horses were burned to death. Loss, $12,000.

Steam Fitters Strike.

Three hundred steam fitters and their helpers struck at Chicago. They ask an increase of wages from 15 to 20 per cent.

—A. N. Grant, a prominent attorney, of Kokomo, has been placed under bonds of $1,000 on complaint of Alvin Martin. Grant sold Martin land in Carroll County, and it was discovered that there was an incumbrance of $1,000 upon it. Kokomo people wont believe that Grant was guilty of any wrong intentions.

—A couple of hunters committed a cruel outrage at a cut near Howell's Station. They disputed the passage with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Osterman, who were in a carriage. After they had passed one of the wretches fired after them and wounded Mrs. Osterman.

—The Circuit Court of Bartholomew County set aside the will of Mrs. Bolton, which involved the title to five hundred acres of real estate, worth $40,000. It was the intention of Mrs. Bolton to place the title to the land in her two granddaughters, but the will was so poorly worded that it would not stand.

WHO GOT THE MONEY?

CHARGES IN REGARD TO THE JOHNSTOWN FUND.

It Is Said that Over a Million Dollars Subscribed to Help the Sufferers from the Great Flood of 1889 Never Reached the People for Whom It Was Intended—Charges of Jobbery and Corruption.

[New York dispatch.]

Under a Johnstown, Pa., date the Herald prints a five-column expose of the manner in which the charity fund of $5,000,000 for the relief of the flood sufferers was placed at the mercy of contractors and supervisors, clerks and employes. Following are the leading paragraphs in the Herald's expose:

The great flood at Johnstown, Pa., occurred May 31, 1889. It involved the loss of upward of 3,000 human lives and the destruction of $9,000,000 in value of individual property. It left 25,000 survivors homeless and temporarily destitute, many of them crippled or prostrated by exposure and suffering.

The sympathy of the civilized world was aroused by this frightful calamity, and within a few days nearly $5,000,000 was contributed in money for the relief of these unfortunates, besides other millions in provisions, clothing, and general supplies. Three million six hundred and sixty-four thousand six hundred and twenty-seven dollars and seventy-seven cents of this magnificent contribution was given as a general fund, to be distributed without limitation or restriction for the immediate relief of the sufferers.

Of this vast sum the afflicted people were permitted to receive but $2,225,857 in money. The remaining sum of $1,438,750.77 was variously alienated in passing from the donors to the intended beneficiaries. Nearly $150,000 of it was appropriated by the State Government. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars was appropriated without authority, to relieve distress in other parts of the State. Seventy-five thousand dollars was appropriated to build elegant permanent bridges a year and a half after the disaster to replace temporary ones previously provided from this charity fund. Forty thousand dollars went to purchase new steam fire engines for the municipality. Thirty thousand dollars was expended during the present year in exhuming the buried victims of the flood, gathering them from the several burial places in the valley and reburying them in a grand cemetery; and other thousands are to be paid for a monument already ordered. Forty thousand dollars was set apart to establish a permanent hospital after all the injured by the flood had been discharged from medical or surgical care. An undetermined or unannounced sum is appropriated to defray the cost of writing and publishing a history of the great calamity, upon which a professor in the University of Pennsylvania is now engaged.

Other thousands were squandered among contractors, superintendents, overseers and clerks.

The record is one replete with evidences of maladministration, political corruption, robbery and jobbery well calculated to heap disgrace upon the State of Pennsylvania and discourage a similar demonstration of public generosity should an occasion for its display ever again unfortunately occur.

The Herald then proceeds to show that the fund of $3,664,627 was increased to $4,211,069 by contributions from railroads, churches, secret societies, etc., to say nothing of food, clothing, lumber, medicine and other necessaries. The article continues:

Following are the contributions of a few of the great cities: New York contributed $622,976; Philadelphia, $486,606; Pittsburg contributed $255,569; Boston contributed $150,763; Chicago contributed $180,573.

And now as to the disposition of the money. No attempt will be made to show the disbursement of what may be called the private funds—those contributed through the churches, the fraternal societies, the railroad companies, and the Cambria Iron Company, and other similar agencies, but will deal only with what may be termed the public funds—those contributed for general relief. These, as already shown, amounted to $3,664,627. That money was contributed from the four quarters of the globe for the relief of human suffering and distress. Not one penny of it was given to the great State of Pennsylvania to aid it in discharging an unusually onerous duty. Nor was any part of it given to aid in building bridges, to equip a fire department, or to improve its public parks. None of it was intended by its donors to build monuments or to endow hospitals for the benefit of sufferers by possible future calamities. It was no part of the business or duty of those who undertook its disbursements to criticise the liberality of the donors and assume that the amount contributed was greater than the intended recipients needed or could safely be intrusted with. Their duty began and ended with an equitable distribution of the money among the sufferers.

Twelve days after the horrible tragedy and when it became manifest that an immense sum of money would be contributed for the relief of the sufferers, Gov. Beaver created a commission to acquire control of this fund and manage its disbursement. It had no representation from the New York committee and none from the Conemaugh Valley, where the distress existed. This fund of $3,269,167 passed under the Commissioners' control. The books show that but $2,225,877 ever reached the hands of the sufferers of the Conemaugh Valley for whose relief alone it was given. This astounding statement, taken directly from official sources, shows an apparent alienation of $1,043,310 of the money.

Among the first acts of the State Commission, and before it had appropriated one dollar for the Johnstown sufferers, whose distress alone had called out the remarkable liberality of the country and the world, was to appropriate a lump sum of $250,000 from the general fund for the relief of the sufferers in the eastern part of the State—in the Susquehanna and Juniata Valleys. The money was never given for that purpose.

The next material item going to make up this great shortage is money expended for supplies. The Commissary General of Pennsylvania, who personally superintended the distribution of food supplies after the State took charge, in his official report estimated the money value of the provisions and the clothing donated at $1,250,000, and yet with such a showing Mr. Kremer reports the disbursements of the commission for supplies as $61,533.86. And added to this Mr. Kremer reports a further expenditure of $43,031, which he says was for labor in handling supplies and the hire of teams in transporting them. In addition to this the local Finance Committee charges $5,515 expended from its funds for supplies, making a total of $110,980 charged to this account.

The next item of disbursement the commission reports is for "buildings, rent, and labor on buildings, $179,033." This opens up one of the greatest scandals of the administration of this trust, regarding which the correspondent has ample data to establish the most flagrant jobbery and robbery.

Paid for the burial of the dead and for the removal of the dead to "Grand View," including the purchase of the plot and the appropriation made for improving the ground, and for purchasing headstones, $30,485.

This item the Herald criticises as wrongful, because the victims were all decently buried in the first place. This money was used in exhuming the bodies, recoffining them, transporting them to a swell cemetery, and there reinterring them in newly purchased grounds, placing a heavy marble stone at the head of each grave, to be followed by the erection of a costly monument—all this while widows and other survivors were suffering.

Pertinent Paragraphs.

Mr. Pattison, Democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, has spoken in fifty-seven of the sixty-seven counties of the State.

Henry Distin, manufacturer of musical instruments for bands, and the head of the Distin factory at Williamsport, says there are 15,000 brass bands in this country, with 150,000 performers.

Henry W. Sage has added $200,000 to his previous gift of $60,000 for the establishment of a Department of Philosophy in Cornell University. This makes over $1,000,000 which he has given to this institution.

LAKE FRONT SITE PLAN.

WHERE THE WORLD'S FAIR WILL BE HELD.

Forty-four Acres of the Lake Will Be Filled In and Forty-five Will Be Built on Piling—Work to Be Done by July 31, 1891.

[Chicago dispatch.]

Specifications have been prepared for filling and piling the lake front for the World's Fair. The executive committee spent two hours discussing the details of the work. A number of contractors awaited the result of the committee's action, and about a hundred copies of the specifications were made for the bidders.

The filling required to be done will be east of the Illinois Central Railroad, between the north line of Van Buren street and the south line of Park Row, both lines being extended east for a distance of 2,600 feet. A line connecting the outer ends of these projected lines will be the eastern boundary of the portion to be filled. The area will be about forty-four acres, and will be inclosed by a revetment or shore protection 4,360 feet in length.

The area to be piled is about forty-five acres and lies on two sides of the filled territory—north and east—and is L-shaped in general outline. Between the center line of Monroe and the north line of Van Buren street the piling is to extend east from the Illinois Central right of way 850 feet, and from Van Buren street to Park Row the piling is to be 250 feet wide. The piled area is to be protected by rows of piles tied together by heavy timbers.

The contractor for the filling will be required to have the revetment completed and the whole area stipulated for filling filled up to a height of six feet above city datum on or before April 15, 1891, and the whole work of filling on or before July 31, 1891.

That part of the piling between Monroe and Van Buren streets is required to be done by April 1, 1891, and the remainder of the work must be done by July 31.

Treasurer Seeberger said that since the directory had decided to fill and pile the lake front there had been a noticeable increase in the collections, and that a better feeling prevailed among the subscribers. Some of them had been holding off because the work was not rapid enough. Now they were satisfied and coming forward with their payments. The Treasurer has $890,000 in bank to the credit of the corporation.

"Who shall solicit exhibits? is the question that is forcing itself on the attention of all concerned in the interests of the fair," said a Commissioner. "While the commission has the power of absolute control of the Exposition, Congress has not provided it with funds to pay the necessary expenses. There is a vast difference between the authority of the commission to act and its financial ability to perform, owing to the meager sum placed at its disposal by Congress. It makes no difference how much 'authority' the commission may have, the moment it ceases to have the necessary funds to pay current expenses that moment it becomes powerless to go ahead. This Exposition is not like a Government contract, which so soon as the appropriation is expended can wait until Congress meets again. This work must be pushed night and day without any let-up.

"The Chicago Board has undertaken to furnish a site and expend $10,000,000 in buildings and other accommodations. Thus it may be seen both ends of the fair have been provided for. The Government has furnished the bosses and Chicago the capital to erect the buildings, but who is to furnish the exhibits or procure them seems to have been left out of the calculation. The ten or eleven bureaus proposed by Director General Davis to attend to these matters will cost at least $10,000 each, some of them much more, and of course it is out of the question to pay this expense from the present Government appropriation. It must be evident that this work, to be done effectively, must be done through bureaus, as proposed by Mr. Davis, and under his special supervision. It looks as if Congress created a great national commission without making provision to enable it to perform the duties required. No doubt this will be remedied when Congress meets again, but in the meantime 'who will collect the exhibits' and pay the necessary expenses is a question for the numerous 'conference' committees to solve."

Mr. Davis will probably appoint Vice President Bryan Chief of the Foreign Bureau. The appointment of Mr. Bryan will make him an officer of the National Commission, which has charge of the foreign exhibits. Mr. Bryan is an exceptional linguist for an American, speaking five or six European languages. He is a courteous and polished gentleman, a scholar, and a business man of large capacity. He is a first-class lawyer withal, and is eminently fitted for the place.

Some of the Commissioners are veering around to the original position of the local board respecting the site.

"The main buildings," said one of them, "ought to be on Jackson Park. I'd like to see Washington Park used for the overflow and as the camping ground of Indian villages and special exhibits. As much of the money as can be so used ought to be put into permanent improvements. I think the position of the South Park Board in this matter was right. Jackson Park, it seems to me, could easily be made the location of the main exhibition. The view would be the finest in the world—nothing like it anywhere. It would be convenient, and could be reached by water and have a water connection with the Lake Front."

J. Herva Jones, of Rockford, Ill., proposes to reproduce "Old Faithful," the largest geyser in the Yellowstone basin. He thinks the recurrent explosions can be reproduced by means of compressed air.

WHAT ANSWER?

BY MRS. J. V. H. KOONS.

Adown thro' the ages comes sounding the cry,
The question unanswered that "If a man die
Shall he live again?" Who can tell? Who can tell?
We know not, hope only that all will be well.
If back to its elements passes the clay
That shelters the spirit for only a day,
Why may not the soul, as the body, return
To its elements too? But what do we learn
By questioning over and looking thro' tears
To a past full of idols and blood-embalmed years?
Though sweet lines of poesy run here and there,
Like sunbeams of gold, thro' a cold, leaden air;
Though sweet, mournful music from days that are dead
Still fall on the ear, healing hearts that have bled?
Though 'tis sweet to believe in the legends of old,
To see trees of life bend with apples of gold,
To bask in the tropics 'neath olive and palm
Where the kind words of Jesus, to the world, fell like balm.
Though sweet to the heart are the dreams of our youth,
The present is with us, full of stern, arctic truth,
Full of new revelations for each new-born day,
And teacher and learner must both work and pray
For new light and more light—once candles would do—
And truths then discovered will ever be true.
But the error must perish, thus sayeth the Lord;
Though keen pangs are suffered in severing the cord.
"The ethics of Jesus, broad, soon narrowed down
To village theologies." Christian and clown,
Through sad years of miscegenation and night,
Have loosened their hold on the anchor of right,
Have builded a babel from whose crumbling tower
Shall be to humanity given new power,
And men shall go forth and shall labor alone,
And bread shall be given instead of a stone.
God's truth in the heart made alive then shall be
From doctrines and dogmas the world shall be free
To do right and live right the soul's highest good,
"By their fruits shall ye know them," this grand brotherhood,
Who work in God's vineyard with hope fixed above,
To Him alone looking for life thro' His love.

DOROTHEA INGRAM.

A Story of Early Colonial Days.

BY CHARLES C. HAHN.

CHAPTER XII.

A WILD, WET NIGHT.

THE harsh sentence was carried out at once, and the poor young woman was compelled to suffer an indignity that has left a lasting stain upon the character of our Puritan ancestors.

The cruel treatment which his wife received decided Egbert to remove from Sagnauck—either to some other place in the colony or to his home in old England. The latter place was chosen for him within a few days by an unexpected letter from his father. Egbert's elder brother had been killed while hunting, and the father wrote to recall the younger son, who would now be the next Lord of Oswold.

But before Egbert Ingram could arrange to leave Sagnauck other events were shaping themselves to keep him longer in the place of his wife's persecution. The inhuman sentence of the Puritan judges had brought on a low fever, and before a week had passed Dorothea Ingram was insane. Her insanity was of a mild form, and the vagarics which filled her mind were of the most elusive kind.

Some days dark ghostly clouds swept over her and in the wall of darkness around, queer forms intermingled with each other, fantastic shapes, distorted faces of men and women. These would appear and fade and others come. At times some woodland scene would appear as plain as if she were looking out of her cabin window at the forests which surrounded her home; the waves of the ocean beat in her imagination and tall towering castles built themselves and disappeared before her eyes.

But at all times a light cloud seemed to float before her eyes, a cloud which she was ever trying to penetrate and which was so thin that she was ever in hopes of finding what was behind it. Sometimes the cloud passed away and then some other object appeared. Now it was Egbert, now the minister, and sometimes Mark Hillary. At length the beclouded intellect was able to understand what the object of its desire was. Hidden by cloud or by the perplexing appearance of other forms was the figure of her mother, whom she could not remember but whose portrait she had worn on her breast all her life.

Once did she see the vision, through clouds and darkness, and the gentle influence of her spirit mother brought a soothing peace, and Dorothea sank into an untroubled, childish sleep. After that, although the filmy mist hung over her still, the vision never entirely faded. She felt that the fair form was hovering over her and the consciousness brought her rest.

During Dorothea's illness, her husband never left the cabin, and yet the two were never in need. Every morning, when he arose, Egbert found by his cabin door some article of game, a fish from the river, or a piece of venison. This soon became known to the busy gossips of the village, and every effort was made to learn from what source he received them. Failing in this they, fell back upon the old theory that Dorothea was being protected by that unknown person to whom the minister had referred on the day of the trial.

Mr. Granville was not slow to hear these tales. In fact he took pains to inquire daily concerning the young couple, and stored away every possible story or theory as more evidence against the poor woman. Every incident in Dorothea's life was now a theme for suspicion with him. He remembered when she had given way to anger and knew now that she had been under the influence of the devil; her friends had been won by evil charms; her insanity was the working of devils in her mind, and the food with which she was fed came from her Master.

About this time Mr. Granville received medical advice concerning his children, and was bidden to take them for long walks in the open air. He followed the physician's advice conscientiously, but he had become such a monomaniac that each walk always led him and his two daughters by Dorothea's home. One day, as they were passing, they heard a faint cry within the cabin, a cry so faint and yet so peculiar that the three stopped, and Achsah said:

"Papa, did you hear the kitty?"

The father looked at his daughter, and seeing in her face the signs of her peculiar nervous fits, turned and hastened home with her. All day long she lay prostrate upon her couch, the minister kneeling by her side and praying.

When it became known that a child had been born to Egbert and Dorothea, the minister lost no time in relating the circumstances of Achsah's illness, and before evening all the gossips in the village had made excuses to call upon the young mother and see the baby that cried like a cat. Children came to the window, looked in and then ran away as from a haunted place.

After a few days Dorothea's insanity returned, and it was thought best to remove the child from her. A month passed, during which she lay upon her bed, uttering the vagaries which came to her beclouded mind. At last her memory and her reason returned, and she asked for her babe as if it had been absent but an hour. This was toward evening, and, after receiving the child into her arms, she lay for an hour in deep silence, as if absorbed in thought; but not a motion was made she did not see, and at times, when the babe gave utterance to a low cry, the mother would raise herself upon her elbow and gaze upon it with painful intensity. She refused all offers of food, and now and then, as the twilight deepened, hummed a drowsy tune in the babe's ears or whispered to it in sweet and soothing words.

After a time the babe fell asleep and Egbert sat down by the open door. The twilight passed into evening. The wind began to moan dismally through the forest, and the rain began to patter on the cabin roof.

The moaning changed to wailing and then to roaring, and the wind swept the increasing rain against the window. The day was done and a wet, wild night had set in. Egbert sat for a while and listened to the dreary music, then barred the door, and leaning back in his chair, fell asleep.

The brief period of Dorothea's sanity had passed away and the cloud upon her mind began to settle with the falling of the night. The roaring wind, the sweeping rain, the beating upon the roof and the child at her side, became, all alike, creatures of her imagination. Looking upward, through the mist, she saw her mother and was a child again herself.

The sound of the wind and the rain passed away; but, as she gazed, the vision faded and, instead of the peace-brooding form of her mother, appeared the child, which to her distorted imagination, seemed to rise, as did those other phantoms months before, merely to hide from her the one face she wished to see. She changed her position on the bed, but the infant still appeared. She tried to brush away the face with her hand, but could not reach it.

She could now hear the roaring of the wind again and see the warring branches of the trees outside the cabin window. The wind and the rain and the trees spoke to her. They were real. They would help her. Had not all her life been passed in intercourse with them, and had not her father taught her their secrets?

All else were mere phantoms. She was a child again, and this was her father's cabin! What was that strange man doing in the great chair by the table, and whose was this babe which was lying by her side? Her past life was almost wholly a blank, but a blank blotted by the faint recollection of a life-long persecution. What could the child be but some evil sprite left to worry her? And the wind and the rain told her to kill it.

Once more she looked upward, but could see nothing but a baby face above her in the mist. She turned her head upon the pillow and saw the little sleeper by her side. She watched it for a moment and then, as a serpent creeps through the bushes in search of its prey, she passed her hand slowly over the child. As she did so, the wind seemed to die away and the rain ceased to fall upon the roof.

She paused, and a low moan came through the tree-tops in the forest. It came like a moan from that blot in her past life, a moan grief-burdened and growing faint with despair.

It strengthened her purpose and she touched the baby hand. It clasped her fingers convulsively, which caused her to look intently upon the little face. It was the same which, a few moments before had appeared in the mist above her.

Still, with a faint dawning of intelligence, and perhaps of maternal feeling, she paused to wonder if it might not be a real child. But at that moment the babe awakened and gave a faint cry which, even to the mother, seemed like the cry of a cat.

There was no more doubt! The child belonged to the evil one who was still pursuing her.

A fresh gust of wind came up with its long sough gathered from the depth of the woods, and her brain was influenced by it. Again her hand, which had been withdrawn when the baby's finger's clutched it, was stretched out and this time touched the infant's head. Her eyes were burning with excitement, but with nerves steady and hand firm as iron, she passed her fingers down the little sleeper's face to its throat and felt the warm beating from its heart.

Ah! a fine wild night it was, and the wind came roaring and wailing through the dashing rain, and beneath the dark storm cloud. A roll of thunder and out in the forest a tree had been shivered with the lightning's stroke! A hush for an instant and then the storm broke forth afresh. The hand was resting on the infant's throat. The fingers closed. No gasp! No sound! But the little hands tugged at the great one which was taking its life away! The baby breast heaved with quick throes and the legs were drawn up convulsively. The struggle ceased, and the soft baby eyes slowly deadened into a senseless gaze.

That instant another roll of thunder passed over head, the whole village was illuminated by the flash of lightning and a bolt from heaven struck the minister's house.

Then the peal rumbled on among the clouds until it died away in the distance.

As if satisfied with the work that had been done, the wind died away and the rain ceased falling. Dorothea Ingram took it as an intimation that she had conquered, and fell asleep.

A lonely wanderer seeking the village, and approaching Hillary's cabin just at that time, said next morning that it was surrounded by a halo of fire and that he saw strange-looking devils in the light.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE HOUSE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

In the last chapter mention was made of a belated traveler who, approaching the village through the woods, saw the Hillary cabin surrounded by unholy light, and also saw in the light a wall of demons dancing around it. They were of fantastic shape, and yet here and there were voluptuous limbs which would have been a temptation for St. Anthony. Appearing here and there like an oft-recurring thread in a loom, appeared a rounded arm or a delicately curved leg, the shadow of the outline of a woman's breast and above in the darkness a woman's face. These would pass in a circle around the cabin, and in their place would appear the shriveled forms of hags, and the fiendish faces of demons. All wore themselves into a supple dance in which voluptuous forms and devilish shapes were curiously intermingled. It was a veritable dance of the evil one and his victims. The sight struck the traveler with awe, and he stopped beneath an elm tree which grew by the brook to watch it. For a full minute the light lasted and then the stranger continued his journey.

Just as he approached the cabin he heard a roll of thunder and saw a flash of lightning. As he emerged from the forest and wended his way down the village street he saw that a house at the other end was ablaze with fire. With a cry of "fire" he sprang forward and ran with all speed to the burning house. The villagers, awakened by the cry, left their comfortable beds and followed. The house to which their steps were directed was the parsonage, and it had been struck by lightning.

When the stranger arrived he found that the minister and his family had rushed from their burning home, and that the former was already busy saving the most valuable of his possessions. The wife with her two children stood shivering beneath a tree, from which great drops of water fell now and then, gazing with agonizing looks upon their home, but seemingly unable to lend a helping hand.

Even in his haste to reach and assist the minister, who was making quick visits to the house, the stranger noticed that the mother pressed one child more closely to her side than the other. It was Achsah, who had been torn from her bed where she had been suffering from her nervousness, but now not a trace of her disorder appeared. She looked like one just brought back to life. There were traces of ill-health in her face, but her countenance had undergone a change. The old querulous look had disappeared and in its place a look of returning health had come. Her recent illness had been cured in an instant, and she stood beneath the dripping tree stronger than she had been for years.

Either by the flash of lightning or by the tragedy in the cabin in the woods, she had been cured, and, strange as it was, her attacks never occurred again.

For an hour the pioneers worked dragging out the minister's furniture, and then stood around while the last beams of the unhappy home fell into the coals below and were consumed. Day had not yet begun to break when the homeless family was taken to neighboring houses and the village returned to their beds. In the confusion the stranger was not noticed, and none missed him when he disappeared from the crowd.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE FINGER OF GOD.

When the first rays of morning light broke through the forest, which circled around Sagnauck, the next morning, they sent dim lines of light between the trunks of trees along the water-soaked ground. Little grass grew in those dark depths; only here and there a fringe about a tree or a cluster midway between, where the sun shone. But the dark earth was rich, and here and there, a sky-tinted flower grew, with deeper colors and more delicate tints than those which bloomed beneath the sun.

The rays of light which were gradually penetrating the forest from the eastward, and casting faint shadows on each side, were here and there obstructed by fallen trees which broke the light and cast shapeless shadows in its pathway. At first, and this was not long after Dorothea had strangled her babe, the rays of light which were going straight upward for the sun beneath the eastern horizon merely made gray the darkness between and beneath the great trees. Gradually the light increased and gray paths grew between the trees, bordered by shadows on either side. The sun rose higher and the brook was enlivened by its rays, and danced in morning glee. How gayly the water dashed over an obtruding stone and how merrily it rushed around an obstructing bank. The birds, too, were waking up and rendering distant chirps through the woods. For, was not the whole world merry again? The sun had risen, and the brook and the birds were free.

The light shining through the woods was broad at the entrance, but gradually tapered to a point like a great white finger stretching along the ground. It was like the finger of God pointing from the line between heaven and earth, through the woods to Sagnauck.

In Hillary's cabin there was a finger of light, too. The baby fingers were still and stiff, and the cruel hand which had stilled them was at rest in sleep. Egbert, too, was still sleeping in his chair by the table when the rising sun sent its rays through the forest.

Whose finger was it that was pointing?

Through the cabin window came the first faint rays of the morning. A light the breadth of the window fell upon the sill and cast a faint gleam upon the floor. The sleepers slept on. Slowly the light grew stronger and crept across the floor. Inch by inch it moved, until it had reached the floor beneath the bed upon which Dorothea and the dead babe lay. A pause. Then a faint light touched the bed. Good God! What does it mean?

Gradually but surely the light grew stronger, and as it did so the finger rose inch by inch upon the bed and pointed across the coarse counterpane to where the dead babe lay.

The sun was risen. The day had come, and the long white finger of God was pointing directly through the cabin window to the bed, and the tip of the finger rested on the throat of the murdered child.

When Egbert awoke, the sun was shining brightly in at the cabin window and the finger had been absorbed into the broad light of day. He arose and glanced around the room, sleepily. Dorothea was lying quietly upon the bed; but the child attracted his attention. Its neck was stretched out upon the pillow, long and lank. It required only a glance for Ingram to understand what had been done.

"O, Dorothea! O, God!" he cried "what shall I do? O, Dorothea, Dorothea, what have you done?"

While Egbert was still bending over the dead babe, a neighbor knocked at the door. He hesitated for a moment and then opened it. The visitor was a woman who lived next to them and who had come at break of day to tell them of the minister's misfortune and to offer her service to Dorothea. But no sooner had she looked in at the open door and seen the dead babe on the pillows than she turned and ran toward the village, crying, "Murder! Murder!"

The sun was now shining bright and clear about the cabin. The storm was over, and a new day had arisen upon Sagnauck.

The woman ran the whole length of the village street, and her cry was heard in every home. At the sound, men and women hastened from their brief sleep and ran toward Hillary's cabin, to which she pointed them. It needed no words for them to believe that there was some sad mystery there. On they went, down the woodland path, one by one, without ceremony and entered the room. Within half an hour it was filled with friends and foes.

Prominent among the latter was the minister, who anxiously moved about and tried, with his authority, to quell the excitement. By his side was the constable and after it was evident to all that a murder had been committed, the two busied themselves opening drawers, prying into nooks and corners, lifting loose planks from the floor and making inquiries of others. It was a godsend to the minister. Heaven, in his belief, had sent relief.

During all this tumult Dorothea sat upon the bed looking wildly about. Through the cabin door, now wide open, in the morning light, she could see others coming, men, women and children, walking, shouting, pointing toward the open door. Rude men gathered about her bed and asked harsh questions, while half-dressed women excitedly cried over the little body which, a day before, they had said looked like a cat. At length the minister drew near the bed and said:

"I tell you the day of vengeance has come. The persecutor of my children has been pointed out to you. I have accused Dorothea Ingram of witchcraft, and to this sin another has been added. She has murdered her babe. Last night my house was struck by lightning, and I believe it was at the same hour in which this crime was committed."

The wanderer in the forest, who, unobserved, had entered the cabin, spoke up and said:

"Reverend sir, it was at the same hour."

CHAPTER XV.

THE TRIAL OF A WITCH.

The little body of the murdered babe was buried in a hollow near Dorothea's home, and within three days the unhappy woman was taken to Salem by armed guard, there to answer the double charge of murder and witchcraft. For the crime which she had committed was so terrible that not one person in Sagnauck, save her husband and her adopted parents, now entertained a doubt of her guilt.

When the little party arrived in Salem Dorothea was at once consigned to jail, and when once there, her condition became so precarious that it was feared she would never leave it even to answer to the double charge against her.

Mr. Granville, unmindful of the fact that she might be summoned to a higher bar of justice, devoted his time to a careful arrangement of his evidence against her.

The witch fever was just then at its height in New England, and the news that a notorious young witch was to be tried in Salem now spread through the country and multitudes flocked to the city.

Besides Egbert and Dr. Lennox, there was a third friend who visited the jail daily. It was an old man dressed as an Indian and so thoroughly disguised that no one would have suspected that he was white. True he never gained admittance, but he was always observed loitering around the prison door whenever either Egbert or the Doctor were visiting the prisoner.

The day set for the trial at length arrived, and Dorothea, still far from well, was led before the magistrate. A formal charge of witchcraft and of murder were read, and, by the advice of counsel, to both she pleaded not guilty. These preliminaries being over, the evidence of her league with the devil was begun.

The Rev. Henry Granville was the first witness and minutely he traced the history of Dorothea and her father, and of the strange affliction of his daughter, Achsah. Other members of the settlement were sworn also and bore witness to many strange actions of the accused, but the chief evidence against her was divided into two heads—her persecution Achsah and her mysterious visitor who had provided for her at her marriage and during her illness. Both facts were supposed to be clearly proven by the testimony.

But when the defense began and Dr. Lennox was put upon the stand, even Mr. Granville was able to see that the first part of his testimony would fall to the ground. The Doctor stated that he had made a careful study of Achsah's trouble and that he was confident that she was suffering from a nervous disease, not often met with in the new world, but which was not uncommon in the old. He pointed out that her most violent attacks had always occurred during a thunder-storm, and drew the deduction that her physical nature was unusually sensitive to the electric currents. To this he added his belief that an inherited antipathy to Hillary had been fostered and exaggerated until his presence really did have an evil effect upon the child, but that this effect was due to anything which Hillary did, he stoutly denied.

Double Impressions.

We often hear of people who are "color blind," and are apt to pity them, while there are others who are particularly sensitive to slight differences of color. There are still other cases, illustrative of the strong influence of colors upon certain minds, which are now attracting considerable attention from scientists. In Germany, particularly, eminent psychologists are making a study of the subject.

Nussbaum was among the first to draw notice to such cases, which are called "double impressions or perceptions." He was not a musical man, and could not, from the sound, distinguish between an "A" and a "G" struck on the piano or another instrument.

But the tone affected him not only as a sound; at the same time he received an impression of color; if this impression was sufficiently distinct he could, by the simple exercise of his memory, easily recognize the tone the next time he heard it. This he did in many cases, although at times the impression was too faint to be distinguished.

His brother, who had a musical ear, nevertheless received this impression of color, in even a greater degree; it accompanied many sounds, aside from musical ones. The sound of wagon wheels was accompanied by the impression of gray color. A musical chord gave a gradually widening mass of mixed tints, and during a musical performance, especially upon the piano, he received frequent impressions of flashes of different colors.

There are other forms of "double impressions," when the senses of taste, smell, and feeling are accompanied by impressions, received more or less distinctly, of color. Fechner, a celebrated psychologist, is making a special study of this subject. He has sent papers, asking for examples of this kind, to many places, and one association alone has sent him over four hundred cases.—Youth's Companion.

Likely to Happen.

The world is said to be growing wiser and better with a steadily increasing ratio, and yet an occasional hole in the toe of a sock will be likely to create more or less discomfort and ill-feeling for some time to come.—Ram's Horn.

THE foremost professsor of hypnotism in Paris, Dr. Luys, claims for a new method of fascination that no person can resist it. Instead of losing force by the usual process, the operator places a stand in the middle of a group of patients, and sets upon it a revolving apparatus of bits of colored glass such as is used for snaring larks, the patients being instructed to fix their eyes upon it. The effect on men, Dr. Luys declares, is exactly the same as on birds. "On men the rotation of brilliant surfaces produces in predisposed subjects a peculiar state of retina, and subsequently of the whole nervous system, accompanied with anæsthesia, immobility of the muscles, 'suggestionability'—in short, the ensemble of phenomena constituting 'fascination.'" The operation takes from five to thirty minutes.

Everybody comes right to Auburn to get the returns, and generally they meet at the COURIER office. It would be a great favor to inquirers, as well as to the COURIER to have as much of the vote as possible, sent right here, at the first chance. Please do not forget it.

WHAT workingman in Indiana has had his wages raised? Prices of what we buy have been raised on all of us.

VOORHEES voted against the McKinley steal. Then help to keep him in the senate by giving a vote for Freeman Kelley and Dr. Norman Teal.

NOTHING is easier than to vote the straight ticket. Persons to instruct voters will be at every poll. There will be no difficulty about voting under the new law.

NO VOTER loses his vote on account of a failure to register. The registry law is dead. Residence and the right to vote are now under the old law, just as it has always been.

JUDGE MCCLELLAN voted against the McKinley steal and for the soldiers' pensions. He has got through more private pension bills and helped more soldiers to get their pensions than any member we ever had before. Show your appreciation by giving him the biggest majority the district ever gave.

REPUBLICANS are getting scared at the rapid increase in prices, caused by their action in passing the McKinley bill. G. W. Dorsey, candidate for congress in Nebraska telegraphed to Matt. Quay, the republican national chairman, Oct. 20, saying: "Have manufacturers quote lower prices, and deny that the McKinley bill raises prices. If this is not done, it will cost us thousands of votes in Nebraska."

Alliance Resolutions.

At the county meeting of the Farmers' Alliance at Auburn last Thursday, they considered what course should be taken in regard to politics, and passed the following resolution:

RESOLVED: By the members of the Farmers' Alliance, of DeKalb county, that we as members of the Alliance, will not be bound by past party affiliations, but will support men only of known integrity and honesty, and that each member be allowed to use his individual judgment in the selection of the same.

U. S Marshals.

Republicans over this congressional district have offered a deliberate insult on the honesty of the people by claiming that we cannot have an honest election without these extra officials. In order to get them, certain resident republicans among them we understand are our republican candidates, have had to make affidavit that they "believe we cannot have a free and fair election" unless these ornamental United States marshals are appointed and stand at the polls to watch our people. There has never been a time when the people of this county could not have a fair election, as far as the election boards were concerned. They always had, as now, one democratic and one republican clerk, and one of each party for judge. The tickets were honestly counted and honest returns made. But now come up Ben. Harrison's heelers, and with unsurpassed gall, tell us, they cannot trust us unless, they, the bosses of the McKinley party stand over us and watch us. Every self respecting democrat and republican should show his manhood by resenting such an insult. Democrats have confidence in the people, and have not asked for United States marshals, and will not ask for them unless compelled to do so in self defense.

The Dispatch's Ideas.

The Dispatch is guileless above all others. It publishes a list of men who say they have not raised prices of the goods "as yet" Certainly some have not "as yet." But they don't say they will not. The chances are they will raise prices after election.

* * *

They quote Bradstreet and Dun & Co., as saying "the volume of trade is increasing." Of course it increases in size when a $10 coat is raised in price to $15. The purchaser at least, finds the "volume of business increasing." The same authority is also quoted as saying, "smaller receipts of grain and beef in Chicago," and "St. Louis merchants are adjusting themselves to the new tariff conditions." Here is an admission in the very article the Dispatch quotes, that the COURIER was right in saying last week that prices were advancing and everything getting dearer.

* * *

Republicans have worked hard to pass a law making things higher priced, and the Dispatch first defends this and then tries to deny it And then it brings out one firm that has raised the wages of its men, who make buttons, 15 to 20 per cent. How generous these button men are, especially when the additional tariff that we must now pay will amount to more than the entire sum they will pay their men. In other words, the extra money they will wring from the people through this republican law, is so great that we, the people, could afford to hire all their men, pay them more than they are getting and then let them sit idle, while we bought our buttons abroad, if they could come in free of duty. Surely, the workmen would not object to this, but their employers would get the millions they now wring from the people. The government gets no money under the new law, for the buttons are made here, and the law merely enables the manufacturers to sell at bigger profits. The Dispatch may believe it right for the government to help one man rob another, but we don't.

Our Candidates.

All our people know them, as the COURIER gave an account of each, just after the various nominations. Besides, many of them were well known before.

JUDGE McCLELLAN will receive a much better vote even than before, for the people are agreed we never had a better member in the house.

FREEMAN KELLEY stands high in the estimation of all honest men, and will be sent back with a better majority than before and the satisfaction of knowing the people appreciate his services.

DR. NORMAN TEAL, for joint representative, is a gentleman and a scholar, and will be a legislator of more than average ability. We believe the people will see to it that he is elected.

JOSEPH BUTLER for prosecutor will be a great improvement. He is a good farmer as well as a lawyer, and will make a liberal and intelligent officer.

HON. D. D. MOODY is too well known to need any extended review. He has served the people three terms in the legislature, and his knowledge of law proceedings will give him many advantages over his competitor, who is utterly ignorant in such matters. Mr. Moody can do the work himself. Lackey will be obliged to have another do it.

H. N. COFFINBERRY will bring to the auditor's office large experience and decided executive ability, and as the office is one of the most important in the county, no thinking man who cares for the welfare of the county will hesitate a moment as to which to support, him or his competitor. His competitor is just beginning to serve a term of four years, as trustee of his township, and is therefore provided for, for several years to come. When he ends this term, he will have held this office ten years and three months. Mr. Coffinberry never asked for an office before. The railroads pay many thousands of dollars in taxes each year, and employ a vast number of men in this county. They now offer us their highest officer to serve as a county officer. We believe the people realize that he should have it.

REUBEN SAWVEL, for treasurer, is an honest and conscientious man, a farmer and church member, is well educated, and will make as good an officer as we ever had. We have faith in the good sense of the people, and believe he will go in with a big vote.

SAMUEL WILLIAMS, for recorder, is as good a man as can be found. We have the word of a number of ex-soldiers that they will stand by him. It will be a sensible thing for them to do, and we hope to see him go in with flying colors.

PHIL PLUM for sheriff is just the man. He has been careful and honest, and should have a bigger vote than before. He also was in the service, and we know of no more appropriate thing than for all old soldiers to assist him. Give him a rousing vote. When you have a good sheriff, keep him.

L. D. MISER is a farmer and mechanic. The office he seeks is not a very paying one. But he should have just as good a vote. Remember, the man and the office are to be considered, and not the amount of pay in it.

SURVEYOR HOOK has been an honest, painstaking officer, and has done his duty well by the people and the county. We think our people cannot afford to put a new and untried man into this important office, where the Dispatch insists he would make the office $6,000 to $8,000 more expensive the first year than Mr. Hook would. The people can't afford to make a change.

G. I. PATTERSON for commissioner in the southwest district is a tried and true public servant. We don't know of any reason why he should be put out and a republican put in. As we have often said, republican commissioners have not managed the county's affairs as well as democrats have done it. Don't go back on those who have served the people well. Keep him in.

JAMES HENDERSON is a man against whom no one can say a word. He is every inch a fit man for the place. We trust he will have a rousing majority. As we said at first, it is for the interest of the people to keep the county in the hands of democrats. Voters should think of these things and vote for the benefit of the county, and therefore for the benefit of themselves, for the county's interests are their interests.

DeKalb County Teachers' Association.

The DeKalb county teachers' association met at Auburn, in the High School room Oct. 11, 1890, at 10:15 a. m. the president, Prof. Coe, having called the association to order, proceeded with the program. The music was omitted and the first exercise of the day was a very excellent paper, "Moral Qualifications of the Teacher," which was interesting as well as instructive and was prepared and read by Miss Lizzie Maxwell, after which was a very interesting discussion. T. J. Baxter then put the following motion before the association: That the paper of Miss Maxwells' should be published in two or more of the county papers, which motion carried. E. H. Fisher then gave his ideas concerning, "Proper or Improper Punishment," which proved to be quite original and entertaining. This was followed by a lengthy discussion. On motion the association then adjourned to meet at 1:15 p. m.

The association met pursuance to adjournment. W. D. Smith opened the exercises by a paper showing deep thought and an extensive conception of his subject, which should not fail to arouse a deeper interest and a finer appreciation of "The advantage of a teachers' association." He was followed by Mr. Krontz. who spoke concering "Employment of Teachers." His paper was one of interest and after the reading of same he satisfactory answered all questions pertaining thereto. Then a male quartet furnished some excellent music after which Miss Topping read a paper on "Kindergarten work in district and graded schools," which was received with great enthusiasm and earnestness, and after a discussion of the same the program for the next meeting was read, following which a motion was made and carried for the amendment of the motion made in the forenoon. Such motion to read, "All papers read to be published in Auburn COURIER and Dispatch." The association then adjourned to meet at Waterloo Jan. 10, 1891.

FLORENCE HOLLOPETER, Sec'y.

Stamp, Brothers, Stamp.

(The COURIER's version of it.)

Stamp, brothers, stamp with care,
Stamp in the center of the little square
In front of "Democratic ticket," where
The rooster crows with his head in air.
Be sure and place your stamp right there,
Or else you may fall into a snare
And make a mistake that'll make you swear.
Stamp, brothers, stamp with care;
But not in the presence of the inspectaire.
Stamp in secret and stamp on the square;
Stamp, brothers, stamp with care,
Stamp for the party that deals on the square,
Stamp out McKinley that raises the tariff on all that you eat or wear,
Stamp them out, brothers, stamp with care,
Stamp out monopoly, stamp out the trust,
Stamp for the right, stamp for the just,
Stamp for the ticket where McClellan stands,
Where Kelley and Dr. Teal join hands,
Where Butler and Moody will not be "hurried,"
And H. J. Crooks will be "Coffin-buried."
Stamp, brothers, stamp with care,
For the name of Reuben Sawvel's there,
And Samuel Williams, and square Phil Plum,
And Coroner Miser, he counts some.
Stamp, brothers, stamp with care,
And see that J. M. Hook gets there,
And Patterson, who's done what's fair,
And Henderson are both made "commission-aire."
Stamp, brothers, stamp with care,
Stamp for the good of our land so fair,
Stamp as democrats; stamp with care,
Stamp on the fourth of Novembaire,
And our candidates will all get there.

DUTIES OF INSPECTORS.

Comprehensive Epitome of the Code of Rules Governing These Offices.

T. J. Immel, of Logansport, who (according to the Pharos) has probably had as much experience on election boards as perhaps any man in Northern Indiana, has studied the new election law carefully, and gives the duties of the election inspectors.

DUTIES OF INSPECTORS OF ELECTIONS.

1. Go three days before election and get ballots and boxes. See page 41.
2. Have all your officers at the polls by six o'clock.
3. Post instruction card as follows; one of each card in each booth, and one of each card at outer end of chute, and three of each state and local ballots in and about the polls. See page 42.
4. Then read to the board section 57 and 58.
5. Then administer oath to the judges; then to the clerks. Sec. 7 and 8, pages 28 and 29.
6. Open and inspect the ballot boxes in presence of the judges; close and give key to the judge opposite in politics.
7. Open ballots without breaking seals; give to the clerk opposite in politics twenty-five ballots each of state and local, see that each clerk puts his initials on the left lower corner, and for every ballot cast pass one state and one local ballot to the clerk; give stamp to the clerk in harmony with politics with the inspector.
8. Open the polls by calling aloud to the voters.

Admit the voters.

9. Count all ballots not voted, make a record of them on the tally sheet, and burn them. All disputed ballots keep sealed up and return to county clerk.
10. Proceed to count ballots. See page 49.
11. Count local ballots. See page 49.
12. Count, make record and burn all voted tickets.
13. After closing the count the result must be recorded on the tally sheet, and a certificate made of the number of votes for each candidate over the signature of all the members of the board, a copy of which must be delivered to each member of the board. See section 52.
14. Put one tally sheet, one poll book and affidavit in paper bag and seal up and return to clerk.
15. Seal up all disputed ballots and return them with poll book to clerk.
16. Give one tally sheet and one poll book to one of the judges, who shall return them to the canvasing board.

Who Pays the Tax.

[Columbia City Post.]

There is not a business man in Columbia City, who has not received a circular letter setting forth the increase in prices on the various articles retailed by him since the McKinley bill went into effect. Dealers in dry goods, boots and shoes, clothing, carpets, drugs, glassware, queensware, sugars, cigars, tobacco, rubber goods, hosiery, and in fact everything included in this new bill, have been notified of the increase, and business men are bound to suffer to a greater or less extent until prices are once more settled and established. While all business men with whom we have talked will not admit that the bill materially affects the price of goods, they nevertheless know that somebody has to pay the price of increase. Some of them reluctantly admit that they must stand the increase for the present themselves, and nearly all of them say they expect to sell off their present stock at old prices When they buy new goods, however, they say that the consumer will have to pay the increase. One business man says it means a loss to him of $60 a year on one brand of cigars. He cannot increase the retail price of the cigar nor can he afford to replace the cigar with an inferior article, for by so doing he would lose his customers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

J. S. Jackman's new residence will be a beauty.

B. L. Duncan, R. M. Lockhart and Dr. Darby are putting down cement walks quite extensively.

The hunters are off to the northern woods of Michigan. Venison will soon be plenty in this market.

Over fifty persons have been subpoenaed as witnesses in the Maud Boyer Williams case from this place.

For a short time, Speer & Co will sell you five and give you one bar of the celebrated Dingman soap for 25 cents.

Miss Ida Blair goes next week to Appleton, Wisconsin, where she will make a visit with Miss Lucinda Daniels, a former resident of Waterloo.

Miss Flora A Speer will represent the Christian Endeavor society of Otterbein university, as delegate to the state convention at Findlay, Ohio, on Friday of this week.

Mrs. B. F. Kennedy and Miss Ida Blair were among the guests invited to meet the ladies of the L. L. C. at Auburn, Tuesday. They speak of it as a pleasant meeting.

Rev. S. P. Klotz administered the rite of baptism by immersion to five persons last Saturday, at the creek north of town. They were new members, lately added to the church in Smithfield.

The second anniversary of the W. O. M. society that was celebrated by the young ladies of Waterloo, at the home of Miss Maggie Dittman, was a success, in spite of the ungentlemanly conduct and bogus letters written to the invited guests of Auburn and Butler by some of the young "gentlemen" of Waterloo.

On last Saturday, at the baptismal meeting at the U. B. church, Mr. Levi Myers and family, of Smithfield, were in attendance, and his young son hitched the team to a hitching post near the church, owned by R. J. Fisk. While all were in the church at service, the team was loosed from the post and taken down and put in Koon's livery stable, where Mr. Myers, besides the trouble of hunting for his team, was obliged to pay a fee for getting them out of the barn. Such acts of meanness need no comment. If a man does not want teams tied to a hitching post, he should either take it up or put a card on it to that effect.

SUMMIT.

Mr. Mike Fredrick, of Hudson, was on our streets Monday.

Nathan Elliott went to Auburn last Saturday, on business.

John Markley is working for our agent and learning telegraphy.

Miss Nettie Grambling went to visit her sister, Mrs. Orlando, this week.

Miss Lou Lower, of Butler, visited Oren Albright and wife, last Sunday.

Mrs. Mell Lacy visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Grambling, last Monday.

Mr. Reese and wife, of Butler, visited their daughter, Mrs. Warren Boyer, a few days last week.

Henry Lawson and wife and Miss Ida Patrick, of Ohio, visited Mrs. L.'s brother, J. S. McDougle, at Pleasant Lake, last Sunday.

Married, on Wednesday, Oct. 22, by Rev. H. M. Lamport, of Auburn, Mr. Edward Hoffman, of this place, and Miss Etta Knepper, of Auburn. May peace and happiness attend their pathway through life, is the wish of their many friends in this place.

LEO.

Levi Dresback, of Maysville, was in town this week.

C. J. Schlatter and family, of Missouri, have moved to Leo.

Mr. V. H. Muller has purchased a gravel pit of James VanCamp.

The public schools of Cedar Creek will commence for the winter term, Oct. 3d, 1890.

John Shambeck was married last Sunday. Typhoid fever was the cause of his death.

Dr. McCone, of Chicago, whose father lives in Kent township, was in town last week, looking up a location.

Miranda and Raymond Melick, of Etna Green, Ind., mother and nephew of Mrs. Rev. Ashcraft, visited at the Methodist parsonage last week.

Abner Carnahan and Salonia Frederick were married at Mrs. Lizzie Schlatter's last Thursday evening, Rev. Homer C. Ashcraft officiating.

WHAT ANSWER?

BY MRS. J. V. H. KOONS.

Adown thro' the ages comes sounding the cry,
The question unanswered that "If a man die
Shall he live again?" Who can tell? Who can tell?
We know not, hope only that all will be well.
If back to its elements passes the clay
That shelters the spirit for only a day,
Why may not the soul, as the body, return
To its elements too? But what do we learn
By questioning over and looking thro' tears
To a past full of idols and blood-embalmed years?
Though sweet lines of poesy run here and there,
Like sunbeams of gold, thro' a cold, leaden air;
Though sweet, mournful music from days that are dead
Still fall on the ear, healing hearts that have bled?
Though 'tis sweet to believe in the legends of old,
To see trees of life bend with apples of gold,
To bask in the tropics 'neath olive and palm
Where the kind words of Jesus, to the world, fell like balm,
Though sweet to the heart are the dreams of our youth,
The present is with us, full of stern, arctic truth,
Full of new revelations for each new-born day,
And teacher and learner must both work and pray
For new light and more light—once candles would do—
And truths then discovered will ever be true.
But the error must perish, thus sayeth the Lord;
Though keen pangs are suffered in severing the cord.
"The ethics of Jesus, broad, soon narrowed down
To village theologies," Christian and clown,
Through sad years of miscegenation and night,
Have loosened their hold on the anchor of right,
Have builded a babel from whose crumbling tower
Shall be to humanity given new power,
And men shall go forth and shall labor alone,
And bread shall be given instead of a stone.
God's truth in the heart made alive then shall be
From doctrines and dogmas the world shall be free
To do right and live right the soul's highest good,
"By their fruits shall ke know them," this grand brotherhood,
Who work in God's vineyard with hope fixed above,
To Him alone looking for life thro' His love,

DOROTHEA INGRAM.

A Story of Early Colonial Days.

BY CHARLES C. HAHN.

CHAPTER XII.

A WILD, WET NIGHT.

THE harsh sentence was carried out at once, and the poor young woman was compelled to suffer an indignity that has left a lasting stain upon the character of our Puritan ancestors.

The cruel treatment which his wife received decided Egbert to remove from Sagnauck—either to some other place in the colony or to his home in old England. The latter place was chosen for him within a few days by an unexpected letter from his father. Egbert's elder brother had been killed while hunting, and the father wrote to recall the younger son, who would now be the next Lord of Oswold.

But before Egbert Ingram could arrange to leave Sagnauck other events were shaping themselves to keep him longer in the place of his wife's persecution. The inhuman sentence of the Puritan judges had brought on a low fever, and before a week had passed Dorothea Ingram was insane. Her insanity was of a mild form, and the vagaries which filled her mind were of the most elusive kind.

Some days dark ghostly clouds swept over her and in the wall of darkness around, queer forms intermingled with each other, fantastic shapes, distorted faces of men and women. These would appear and fade and others come. At times some woodland scene would appear as plain as if she were looking out of her cabin window at the forests which surrounded her home; the waves of the ocean beat in her imagination and tall towering castles built themselves and disappeared before her eyes.

But at all times a light cloud seemed to float before her eyes, a cloud which she was ever trying to penetrate and which was so thin that she was ever in hopes of finding what was behind it. Sometimes the cloud passed away and then some other object appeared. Now it was Egbert, now the minister, and sometimes Mark Hillary. At length the beclouded intellect was able to understand what the object of its desire was. Hidden by cloud or by the perplexing appearance of other forms was the figure of her mother, whom she could not remember but whose portrait she had worn on her breast all her life.

Once did she see the vision, through clouds and darkness, and the gentle influence of her spirit mother brought a soothing peace, and Dorothea sank into an untroubled, childish sleep. After that, although the filmy mist hung over her still, the vision never entirely faded. She felt that the fair form was hovering over her and the consciousness brought her rest.

During Dorothea's illness, her husband never left the cabin, and yet the two were never in need. Every morning, when he arose, Egbert found by his cabin door some article of game, a fish from the river, or a piece of venison. This soon became known to the busy gossips of the village, and every effort was made to learn from what source he received them. Failing in this they, fell back upon the old theory that Dorothea was being protected by that unknown person to whom the minister had referred on the day of the trial.

Mr. Granville was not slow to hear these tales. In fact he took pains to inquire daily concerning the young couple, and stored away every possible story or theory as more evidence against the poor woman. Every incident in Dorothea's life was now a theme for suspicion with him. He remembered when she had given way to anger and knew now that she had been under the influence of the devil; her friends had been won by evil charms; her insanity was the working of devils in her mind, and the food with which she was fed came from her Master.

About this time Mr. Granville received medical advice concerning his children, and was bidden to take them for long walks in the open air. He followed the physician's advice conscientiously, but he had become such a monomaniac that each walk always led him and his two daughters by Dorothea's home. One day, as they were passing, they heard a faint cry within the cabin, a cry so faint and yet so peculiar that the three stopped, and Achsah said:

"Papa, did you hear the kitty?"

The father looked at his daughter, and seeing in her face the signs of her peculiar nervous fits, turned and hastened home with her. All day long she lay prostrate upon her couch, the minister kneeling by her side and praying.

When it became known that a child had been born to Egbert and Dorothea, the minister lost no time in relating the circumstances of Achsah's illness, and before evening all the gossips in the village had made excuses to call upon the young mother and see the baby that cried like a cat. Children came to the window, looked in and then ran away as from a haunted place.

After a few days Dorothea's insanity returned, and it was thought best to remove the child from her. A month passed, during which she lay upon her bed, uttering the vagaries which came to her beclouded mind. At last her memory and her reason returned, and she asked for her babe as if it had been absent but an hour. This was toward evening, and, after receiving the child into her arms, she lay for an hour in deep silence, as if absorbed in thought; but not a motion was made she did not see, and at times, when the babe gave utterance to a low cry, the mother would raise herself upon her elbow and gaze upon it with painful intensity. She refused all offers of food, and now and then, as the twilight deepened, hummed a drowsy tune in the babe's ears or whispered to it in sweet and soothing words.

After a time the babe fell asleep and Egbert sat down by the open door. The twilight passed into evening. The wind began to moan dismally through the forest, and the rain began to patter on the cabin roof.

The moaning changed to wailing and then to roaring, and the wind swept the increasing rain against the window. The day was done and a wet, wild night had set in. Egbert sat for a while and listened to the dreary music, then barred the door, and leaning back in his chair, fell asleep.

The brief period of Dorothea's sanity had passed away and the cloud upon her mind began to settle with the falling of the night. The roaring wind, the sweeping rain, the beating upon the roof and the child at her side, became, all alike, creatures of her imagination. Looking upward, through the mist, she saw her mother and was a child again herself.

The sound of the wind and the rain passed away; but, as she gazed, the vision faded and, instead of the peace-brooding form of her mother, appeared the child, which to her distorted imagination, seemed to rise, as did those other phantoms months before, merely to hide from her the one face she wished to see. She changed her position on the bed, but the infant still appeared. She tried to brush away the face with her hand, but could not reach it.

She could now hear the roaring of the wind again and see the warring branches of the trees outside the cabin window. The wind and the rain and the trees spoke to her. They were real. They would help her. Had not all her life been passed in intercourse with them, and had not her father taught her their secrets?

All else were mere phantoms. She was a child again, and this was her father's cabin! What was that strange man doing in the great chair by the table, and whose was this babe which was lying by her side? Her past life was almost wholly a blank, but a blank blotted by the faint recollection of a lifelong persecution. What could the child be but some evil sprite left to worry her? And the wind and the rain told her to kill it.

Once more she looked upward, but could see nothing but a baby face above her in the mist. She turned her head upon the pillow and saw the little sleeper by her side. She watched it for a moment and then, as a serpent creeps through the bushes in search of its prey, she passed her hand slowly over the child. As she did so, the wind seemed to die away and the rain ceased to fall upon the roof.

She paused, and a low moan came through the tree-tops in the forest. It came like a moan from that blot in her past life, a moan grief-burdened and growing faint with despair.

It strengthened her purpose and she touched the baby hand. It clasped her fingers convulsively, which caused her to look intently upon the little face. It was the same which, a few moments before had appeared in the mist above her.

Still, with a faint dawning of intelligence, and perhaps of maternal feeling, she paused to wonder if it might not be a real child. But at that moment the babe awakened and gave a faint cry which, even to the mother, seemed like the cry of a cat.

There was no more doubt! The child belonged to the evil one who was still pursuing her.

A fresh gust of wind came up with its long sough gathered from the depth of the woods, and her brain was influenced by it. Again her hand, which had been withdrawn when the baby's finger's clutched it, was stretched out and this time touched the infant's head. Her eyes were burning with excitement, but with nerves steady and hand firm as iron, she passed her fingers down the little sleeper's face to its throat and felt the warm beating from its heart.

Ah! a fine wild night it was, and the wind came roaring and wailing through the dashing rain, and beneath the dark storm cloud. A roll of thunder and out in the forest a tree had been shivered with the lightning's stroke! A hush for an instant and then the storm broke forth afresh. The hand was resting on the infant's throat. The fingers closed. No gasp! No sound! But the little hands tugged at the great one which was taking its life away! The baby breast heaved with quick throes and the legs were drawn up convulsively. The struggle ceased, and the soft baby eyes slowly deadened into a senseless gaze.

That instant another roll of thunder passed over head, the whole village was illuminated by the flash of lightning and a bolt from heaven struck the minister's house.

Then the peal rumbled on among the clouds until it died away in the distance.

As if satisfied with the work that had been done, the wind died away and the rain ceased falling. Dorothea Ingram took it as an intimation that she had conquered, and fell asleep.

A lonely wanderer seeking the village, and approaching Hillary's cabin just at that time, said next morning that it was surrounded by a halo of fire and that he saw strange-looking devils in the light.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE HOUSE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

In the last chapter mention was made of a belated traveler who, approaching the village through the woods, saw the Hillary cabin surrounded by unholy light, and also saw in the light a wall of demons dancing around it. They were of fantastic shape, and yet here and there were voluptuous limbs which would have been a temptation for St. Anthony. Appearing here and there like an oft-recurring thread in a loom, appeared a rounded arm or a delicately curved leg, the shadow of the outline of a woman's breast and above in the darkness a woman's face. These would pass in a circle around the cabin, and in their place would appear the shriveled forms of hags, and the fiendish faces of demons. All wore themselves into a supple dance in which voluptuous forms and devilish shapes were curiously intermingled. It was a veritable dance of the evil one and his victims. The sight struck the traveler with awe, and he stopped beneath an elm tree which grew by the brook to watch it. For a full minute the light lasted and then the stranger continued his journey.

Just as he approached the cabin he heard a roll of thunder and saw a flash of lightning. As he emerged from the forest and wended his way down the village street he saw that a house at the other end was ablaze with fire. With a cry of "fire" he sprang forward and ran with all speed to the burning house. The villagers, awakened by the cry, left their comfortable beds and followed. The house to which their steps were directed was the parsonage, and it had been struck by lightning.

When the stranger arrived he found that the minister and his family had rushed from their burning home, and that the former was already busy saving the most valuable of his possessions. The wife with her two children stood shivering beneath a tree, from which great drops of water fell now and then, gazing with agonizing looks upon their home, but seemingly unable to lend a helping hand.

Even in his haste to reach and assist the minister, who was making quick visits to the house, the stranger noticed that the mother pressed one child more closely to her side than the other. It was Achsah, who had been torn from her bed where she had been suffering from her nervousness, but now not a trace of her disorder appeared. She looked like one just brought back to life. There were traces of ill-health in her face, but her countenance had undergone a change. The old querulous look had disappeared and in its place a look of returning health had come. Her recent illness had been cured in an instant, and she stood beneath the dripping tree stronger than she had been for years.

Either by the flash of lightning or by the tragedy in the cabin in the woods, she had been cured, and, strange as it was, her attacks never occurred again.

For an hour the pioneers worked dragging out the minister's furniture, and then stood around while the last beams of the unhappy home fell into the coals below and were consumed. Day had not yet begun to break when the homeless family was taken to neighboring houses and the village returned to their beds. In the confusion the stranger was not noticed, and none missed him when he disappeared from the crowd.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE FINGER OF GOD.

When the first rays of morning light broke through the forest, which circled around Sagnauck, the next morning, they sent dim lines of light between the trunks of trees along the water-soaked ground. Little grass grew in those dark depths; only here and there a fringe about a tree or a cluster midway between, where the sun shone. But the dark earth was rich, and here and there a sky-tinted flower grew, with deeper colors and more delicate tints than those which bloomed beneath the sun.

The rays of light which were gradually penetrating the forest from the eastward, and casting faint shadows on each side, were here and there obstructed by fallen trees which broke the light and cast shapeless shadows in its pathway. At first, and this was not long after Dorothea had strangled her babe, the rays of light which were going straight upward for the sun beneath the eastern horizon merely made gray the darkness between and beneath the great trees. Gradually the light increased and gray paths grew between the trees, bordered by shadows on either side. The sun rose higher and the brook was enlivened by its rays, and danced in morning glee. How gayly the water dashed over an obtruding stone and how merrily it rushed around an obstructing bank. The birds, too, were waking up and rendering distant chirps through the woods. For, was not the whole world merry again? The sun had risen, and the brook and the birds were free.

The light shining through the woods was broad at the entrance, but gradually tapered to a point like a great white finger stretching along the ground. It was like the finger of God pointing from the line between heaven and earth, through the woods to Sagnauck.

In Hillary's cabin there was a finger of light, too. The baby fingers were still and stiff, and the cruel hand which had stilled them was at rest in sleep. Egbert, too, was still sleeping in his chair by the table when the rising sun sent its rays through the forest.

Whose finger was it that was pointing?

Through the cabin window came the first faint rays of the morning. A light the breadth of the window fell upon the sill and cast a faint gleam upon the floor. The sleepers slept on. Slowly the light grew stronger and crept across the floor. Inch by inch it moved, until it had reached the floor beneath the bed upon which Dorothea and the dead babe lay. A pause. Then a faint light touched the bed. Good God! What does it mean?

Gradually but surely the light grew stronger, and as it did so the finger rose inch by inch upon the bed and pointed across the coarse counterpane to where the dead babe lay.

The sun was risen. The day had come, and the long white finger of God was pointing directly through the cabin window to the bed, and the tip of the finger rested on the throat of the murdered child.

When Egbert awoke, the sun was shining brightly in at the cabin window and the finger had been absorbed into the broad light of day. He arose and glanced around the room, sleepily. Dorothea was lying quietly upon the bed; but the child attracted his attention. Its neck was stretched out upon the pillow, long and lank. It required only a glance for Ingram to understand what had been done.

"O, Dorothea! O, God!" he cried "what shall I do? O, Dorothea, Dorothea, what have you done?"

While Egbert was still bending over the dead babe, a neighbor knocked at the door. He hesitated for a moment and then opened it. The visitor was a woman who lived next to them and who had come at break of day to tell them of the minister's misfortune and to offer her service to Dorothea. But no sooner had she looked in at the open door and seen the dead babe on the pillows than she turned and ran toward the village, crying, "Murder! Murder!"

The sun was now shining bright and clear about the cabin. The storm was over, and a new day had arisen upon Sagnauck.

The woman ran the whole length of the village street, and her cry was heard in every home. At the sound, men and women hastened from their brief sleep and ran toward Hillary's cabin, to which she pointed them. It needed no words for them to believe that there was some sad mystery there. On they went, down the woodland path, one by one, without ceremony and entered the room. Within half an hour it was filled with friends and foes.

Prominent among the latter was the minister, who anxiously moved about and tried, with his authority, to quell the excitement. By his side was the constable and after it was evident to all that a murder had been committed, the two busied themselves opening drawers, prying into nooks and corners, lifting loose planks from the floor and making inquiries of others. It was a godsend to the minister. Heaven, in his belief, had sent relief.

During all this tumult Dorothea sat upon the bed looking wildly about. Through the cabin door, now wide open, in the morning light, she could see others coming, men, women and children, walking, shouting, pointing toward the open door. Rude men gathered about her bed and asked harsh questions, while half-dressed women excitedly cried over the little body which, a day before, they had said looked like a cat. At length the minister drew near the bed and said:

"I tell you the day of vengeance has come. The persecutor of my children has been pointed out to you. I have accused Dorothea Ingram of witchcraft, and to this sin another has been added. She has murdered her babe. Last night my house was struck by lightning, and I believe it was at the same hour in which this crime was committed."

The wanderer in the forest, who, unobserved, had entered the cabin, spoke up and said:

"Reverend sir, it was at the same hour."

CHAPTER XV.

THE TRIAL OF A WITCH.

The little body of the murdered babe was buried in a hollow near Dorothea's home, and within three days the unhappy woman was taken to Salem by armed guard, there to answer the double charge of murder and witchcraft. For the crime which she had committed was so terrible that not one person in Sagnauck, save her husband and her adopted parents, now entertained a doubt of her guilt.

When the little party arrived in Salem Dorothea was at once consigned to jail, and when once there, her condition became so precarious that it was feared she would never leave it even to answer to the double charge against her.

Mr. Granville, unmindful of the fact that she might be summoned to a higher bar of justice, devoted his time to a careful arrangement of his evidence against her.

The witch fever was just then at its height in New England, and the news that a notorious young witch was to be tried in Salem now spread through the country and multitudes flocked to the city.

Besides Egbert and Dr. Lennox, there was a third friend who visited the jail daily. It was an old man dressed as an Indian and so thoroughly disguised that no one would have suspected that he was white. True he never gained admittance, but he was always observed loitering around the prison door whenever either Egbert or the Doctor were visiting the prisoner.

The day set for the trial at length arrived, and Dorothea, still far from well, was led before the magistrate. A formal charge of witchcraft and of murder were read, and, by the advice of counsel, to both she pleaded not guilty. These preliminaries being over, the evidence of her league with the devil was begun.

The Rev. Henry Granville was the first witness and minutely he traced the history of Dorothea and her father, and of the strange affliction of his daughter, Achsah. Other members of the settlement were sworn also and bore witness to many strange actions of the accused, but the chief evidence against her was divided into two heads—her persecution Achsah and her mysterious visitor who had provided for her at her marriage and during her illness. Both facts were supposed to be clearly proven by the testimony.

But when the defense began and Dr. Lennox was put upon the stand, even Mr. Granville was able to see that the first part of his testimony would fall to the ground. The Doctor stated that he had made a careful study of Achsah's trouble and that he was confident that she was suffering from a nervous disease, not often met with in the new world, but which was not uncommon in the old. He pointed out that her most violent attacks had always occurred during a thunder-storm, and drew the deduction that her physical nature was unusually sensitive to the electric currents. To this he added his belief that an inherited antipathy to Hillary had been fostered and exaggerated until his presence really did have an evil effect upon the child, but that this effect was due to anything which Hillary did, he stoutly denied.

Double Impressions.

We often hear of people who are "color blind," and are apt to pity them, while there are others who are particularly sensitive to slight differences of color. There are still other cases, illustrative of the strong influence of colors upon certain minds, which are now attracting considerable attention from scientists. In Germany, particularly, eminent psychologists are making a study of the subject.

Nussbaum was among the first to draw notice to such cases, which are called "double impressions or perceptions." He was not a musical man, and could not, from the sound, distinguish between an "A" and a "G" struck on the piano or another instrument.

But the tone affected him, not only as a sound; at the same time he received an impression of color; if this impression was sufficiently distinct he could, by the simple exercise of his memory, easily recognize the tone the next time he heard it. This he did in many cases, although at times the impression was too faint to be distinguished.

His brother, who had a musical ear, nevertheless received this impression of color, in even a greater degree; it accompanied many sounds, aside from musical ones. The sound of wagon wheels was accompanied by the impression of gray color. A musical chord gave a gradually widening mass of mixed tints, and during a musical performance, especially upon the piano, he received frequent impressions of flashes of different colors.

There are other forms of "double impressions," when the senses of taste, smell, and feeling are accompanied by impressions, received more or less distinctly, of color. Fechner, a celebrated psychologist, is making a special study of this subject. He has sent papers, asking for examples of this kind, to many places, and one association alone has sent him over four hundred cases.—Youth's Companion.

Likely to Happen.

The world is said to be growing wiser and better with a steadily increasing ratio, and yet an occasional hole in the toe of a sock will be likely to create more or less discomfort and ill-feeling for some time to come.—Ram's Horn.

THE foremost professsor of hypnotism in Paris, Dr. Luys, claims for a new method of fascination that no person can resist it. Instead of losing force by the usual process, the operator places a stand in the middle of a group of patients, and sets upon it a revolving apparatus of bits of colored glass such as is used for snaring larks, the patients being instructed to fix their eyes upon it. The effect on men, Dr. Luys declares, is exactly the same as on birds. "On men the rotation of brilliant surfaces produces in predisposed subjects a peculiar state of retina, and subsequently of the whole nervous system, accompanied with anæsthesia, immobility of the muscles, 'suggestionability'—in short, the ensemble of phenomena constituting 'fascination.'" The operation takes from five to thirty minutes.

Vote against higher prices Every vote against Kelley helps to send a United States senator who will vote for laws like the McKinley bill that will make you pay a third more for everything you buy.

Frost has visited us a time or two lately, and even ice has formed on water standing out doors. This makes the flowers we have been boasting about look rather discouraged, though some are still fresh and nice.

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

Our friend Samuel Hood, who works on the section with Mike Lumm, gathers up many curiosities that he finds in the gravel that they handle, such as fossils of past geologic ages. Every gravel bank is full of these scientific specimens, though few of the men notice them.

J. A. Quince was in town over Sunday visiting his brother George. He is still in his old position as bookkeeper with L. Deeter & Co., one of the great lumber firms of Ft. Wayne. His long hold on the position proves him to be a valuable man. He has always shown enterprise and push.

We publish to-day a resolution passed by the Farmers' Alliance in regard to any political action they may take in the coming election. It speaks for itself. We believe that under existing circumstances, this is the best course for them to pursue. They propose to give each individual the largest possible degree of liberty in making his choice.

Among the special features of the Weber Concert Company are Master Harry Dimond the greatest boy violinist in the country, and Master Glenn Hall the phenominal boy soprano, who is said to equal the famous boy singer, Kavanaugh. Come and hear these marvels.

G. H. Draggoo lately added to our store of curiosities one of the water worn stones known a "petoskey." They are so called because found abundantly, along the lake coast near Petoskey, Mich. They are evidently ancient corals, worn smooth by the action of the water, thus showing the central forms of the coral work.

We send out this week a fourteen column supplement containing interesting matter in regard to our popular and efficient member of congress, Hon. C. A. O. McClellan. It will be found very valuable for the new facts, and the statistics it contains. Some of it will be read for the first time, and we hope our people will study it over carefully.

In nearly a column of pudgy stuff, the editor of the Wienerwurst gets in two truths, namely that he was discharged for his too frequent sprees and consequent neglect of work, and that he collected money that was not his and spent it. His other complaints are false. We never knew he took the Clipper and never tried to have him stop it, nor did we ever say that sheet was getting too much patronage, never tried to keep anyone from taking the Wienerwurst or any other paper. He never "set ads" without pay, and if he had, it would not have made up the time he spent in saloons "getting items" during work hours. The article is too silly to be further noticed.

The regular meeting of the Gray Club was held Tuesday evening. The weather was bad and but a small number came. The first of the session was taken up by a discussion of the manner of voting under the new law, which was fully discussed by several members, and by Mr. Spencer, of Ft. Wayne, who was present. Mr. Spencer followed with a short address, in which, he paid his respects to the McKinly high tax bill in no measured terms. He is a very earnest speaker, and understands current politics fully. At the close, Mr. Dills, the president of the club gave notice that arrangements would be made to use the hall on the evening of election. The meeting then adjourned.

Tariff Discussion.

There will be a joint discussion at Bonny Dell school house in Franklin township on Friday evening of this week, October 31, between J. C. Hodges and C. P. Hamman. The question stands:

Resolved, that a protective tariff policy is better for the United States than a tariff for revenue only.

Mr. Hodge has the affirmative and Mr. Hamman, the negative. These young men seem to have the courage of their convictions. No republican in this county has so far, had the courage to stand up in public and defend his party's high tax policy. We hope the people generally will turn out and hear a full and fair discussion of this vital question.

No danger ever attends the use of Simmons Liver Regulator.

Four millions of money are spent in London in three months in search of pleasure.

If you are all run down, fagged out, take Simmons Liver Regulator and be spry.

An Emporia, Kan., man exhibits a perfect apple which was formed from a July bud.

It is absurd to suffer from dyspepsia when Simmons Liver Regulator will cure you.

Mrs. W. R. Cromley and Mrs. Charley Huber of Antwerp, Ohio, are in the city, the guests of S. S. Potter.

The czar of Russia is so strong in the fingers that he can tear a pack of cards to pieces, fifty-two cards at a time.

It never failed to cure dyspepsia and liver complaint. Take Simmons Liver Regulator.

"Harry" Bee, who crossed the plains in 1830 and scouted for General Fremont, is still alive, hale and hearty.

Prejudice and ignorance have given way to Simmons Liver Regulator. It has stood the test.

The Courier was the only paper that gave a full account of the Kouse trial last week. Our contemporaries should wake up.

Court has adjourned till after election. The Waterloo case, state against Isaac Williams is closed. Jury went yesterday noon, and still out Thursday forenoon.

The Eagle Stove Works at the Junction are gaining business rapidly. They sent out several consignments of stoves last week, quite a bill of them going to Ft Wayne. Our enterprising manufacturers are making Auburn a center of commercial business.

Our old friend John Nelson of Newville township, was here yesterday, and and while in the treasurer's office paying taxes, he laid his cane down on the shelf in front of the desk, and when he was through went to pick it up, and it was gone. It was a valuable gold headed cane, that had been presented to him on his 66th birthday and he prized it highly. It has his name engraved on it, and the best thing the one who got it, can do, is to return it.

Commissioner Platter has been misrepresented by some one. We do not know who it is or how it started, but some one has accused him of receiving some Jersey cattle for letting the contract of building the bridge at Waterloo to the firm that built it. Of course there is nothing in this. Some parties had made a contract with him to take the cattle and raise them on shares. That is all there is to it. Auditor Walter, to whom the stock was assigned by the stock men, has made oath to these facts, as he knows all about the matter. We had not space, or we would have published both contract and affidavit in full. We expect to defeat Mr. Platter because he is on the wrong ticket, but we do not believe he is a dishonest man.

Next Tuesday We Vote.

Every democrat should make it a point of honor to give next Tuesday to the business of the election. Every man, in every neighborhood should be at the polls and deposit his own vote in favor of honest government in county, state and national affairs. As we have often shown, and which no republican paper has ever dared to dispute, democratic officers in all these places, have proved the most careful of the people's interests. Compare the waste and extravagance in our own county and in our state, of the republicans, with the economy shown by democrats. That will settle it.

* * *

The last republican board of county commissoners ran the county $10,700 further in debt in one year, while the next year, the democratic board, not only kept up, but actually paid off about $400.

* * *

Look at state finances under the present republican state government. Things have gone so loosely that even republican papers are complaining of our financial condition, and the price of the state's bonds went down because of distrust with these state officers.

* * *

Look at the national government, that under Cleveland, paid vast amounts, of the debt, and yet had money left while the Harrison administration with increased revenues, has about cleaned out the national cash box, so that there is likely to be a big deficiency.

* * *

Look at the disposition of republicans in general to increase the expenses of government and the cost of living. See them passing a tariff bill that has within its first month, added about one fourth to the expense of living. And McKinley tells in his speeches, that this just suits him.

Notice.

Having purchased the meat market of John McMillan on the east side of Main street, south of the National Bank, Auburn, Ind., I am now prepared to supply all kinds of fresh, smoked and pickled meats and everything in the line of a first-class meat market at lowest possible prices. Mr. McMillan will remain in my employ in the business and will be pleased to continue waiting upon his old customers. Highest market prices paid for hides, pelts, etc.

WEBER CONCERT COMPANY.

This excellent musical company will be at the Opera House, one night only. Saturday of this week, Nov. 1. They have a reputation for excellence, second to none, and we fell assured our people will be pleased with the high character of the entertainment. They come here under a guarantee and we hope our people will give them a full house. General admission 35 cents, reserved seats 50 cents.

General Tile Sale.

There will be a sale of our general stock of tile, all sizes from 3 inches up to twelve inches. A good lot at auction. Remember the place at W. D. Miller's residence, 2½ miles southeast of Auburn, on Thursday, Nov. 13, 1890. Sale to begin at 10, a. m. All our tile is sorted, so we sell only the best.

The L. L. C. Reception.

The reception given to Mrs. Ensley, by the ladies of the L. L. C. Tuesday afternoon, was the most complete and enjoyable event of the kind that we remember. It was held at the residence of one of the members, Mrs. J. A. Barns, and included, besides the members of the club, all the ex-members and a limited number of invited guests. We have often alluded to the good taste of the ladies of this club and their unequaled skill as entertainers, and this gathering proved no exception. In fact, it was, if possible, in all its completeness, an improvement on all their previous efforts. The rooms were beautifully decorated with a profusion of choice flowers, including many open air and even early spring flowers, which the late warm autumn had produced. It was a labor of love to the ladies to convert the apartments into a sort of fairy land that was at once bewildering and enchanting. Members and guests passed the hours pleasantly, for whether "to greet the coming or speed the parting guest" was the one thing in order, the ladies showed themselves graceful masters in both. Refreshments were served during the evening, and of course added to the agreeable features of the occasion. Then there was music by Miss Jessie Weaver and others. About seventy in all, called during the reception, for Mrs. Ensley has many warm friends here. It was an animated scene, as groups of ladies came and went, as the hours passed on. We might be permitted to say, that with their usual unerring good taste and judgment, they had added to the list, two gentlemen, the editor of this paper and Editor W. B. Campbell, of the Dispatch. It was an honor and a pleasure for which we feel not only flattered but grateful. L. L. C. will meet this week with Mrs. Zent. Regular program.

Change of Firm.

Mr. F. M Landis, of the City Photo Gallery, has sold out to Mr. J. G. Clapp, of Portland, Jay county, this state, so that this popular establishment will change hands. Mr. Clapp comes here to stay and will buy property here and make Auburn his permanent place of residence and business. He will make a specialty of fine work in the photo line, and will guarantee everything he turns out as first-class in all respects. He will be pleased to see all the former patrons and as many new ones as possible at the photo rooms any day. Call and get acquainted.

$100.00 Reward.

I will raise the reward of fifty dollars, which I have offered for the apprehension and conviction of the thief or thieves who stole a lot of wheat from my barn August 18, 1890, to one hundred dollars, which will be paid in cash as soon as the guilty parties are safe behind the bars.

Merit Wins. We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits.

THE railroad men better look out. Next year there'll be enough of base-ball players out of jobs to stock every road in the country and leave a surplus on the side tracks.

FULLY three-fourths of the babies of the world go naked until they get to be five or six years old. The Canadian Indians keep their babies naked up to a certain point, and as for the little Coreans, they wear nothing but a short skirt until they are almost grown.

TWO TRAVELING hypnotizers agreed to hypnotize a Michigan man for fifty cents, and after he had got it good and strong they wanted $5 to "unhip" him. He refused to pay it and they made a skip, and he is still seeing the red eyes of black cats perched on the foot-board of the bedstead.

MOST of the Indians have got the idea that a new God is coming—one who will help them drive the white man into the sea, and old Indian fighters predict a grand uprising soon. When the red man gets ready for it he should select his burial spot, for the result will be a wipe-out. The army has no sentiment.

IT is the greatest delusion in the world for a boy to get the idea that his life is of no consequence and that the character of it will not be noticed. A manly, truthful boy will shine like a star in any community. A boy may possess as much of noble character as a man. He may so live and speak that there shall be no discount on his word.

A CURIOUS advertisement which appears in one of the English papers states: "Philanthropist—A lady would be pleased to hear from any benevolent persons willing to assist her in procuring the necessary funds for the academical training of an intelligent young man who is compelled against his inclination to earn his living in trade. Please communicate," etc.

SAM JONES speaks contemptuously of old men and women who have gone to church so long that they have "sacred rheumatism." "Sacred rheumatism" contracted through chronic church-going may be a bad ailment, but it is neither so debilitating to the victims nor so disgusting to the public as Sam's infirmity, ministerial hysterics, contreated though soul-saving by the job.

IT is an addition to the great repute of Samuel J. Randall that, after so many years of Congressional service, during which there were many times when his vote or influence would have been worth a fortune to interested lobbyists, he died worth but $5,000. Many persons disagreed with Mr. Randall's principles and opposed his policy with all strenuousness, but none doubted his honesty.

A MORMON elder gives his view that the proclamation of the Mormon President against polygamy will be welcomed in the household of a great majority of the Mormon saints in Utah. "The practice of polygamy in our church," he says, "has been dying out ever since the death of Brigham Young, from whom it derived its strength." This Mormon elder's view agrees with the figures reported by the census taken in Utah.

WHEN Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher went out as a bride to her husband's first parish in Lawrenceburg, Indiana, the young couple began house-keeping in a small domicile of two rooms over a stable, costing them forty dollars a year, and she sold some of her wedding fineries to help to furnish this bare abode. One cold room of a barn-like building served as the church, and on Saturday afternoons it was Mrs. Beecher's part to sweep and dust it, and fill the lard oil lamps, while the minister chopped the wood, cut the kindlings, and laid the fires.

A COMPETITION for new designs for United States coins will soon be opened, and every sculptor in America who possesses both talent and patriotism should certainly enter it. Designs for the standard silver dollar and the five cent nickle piece are to be first adopted, but the Indian head on the 1-cent piece and the figure of Liberty on the dime, quarter and half dollar will also be changed. Superintendent Bosbyshell, of the Philadelphia mint, points out the fact that the designs must be in very low relief which is particularly difficult to work with. But the Greek coins were also in low relief, and yet their beauty has been a delight for twenty centuries.

A DUEL was recently fought at a little village on the Belgian frontier in which everything was conducted under strict antiseptic precautions. The sword blades were first placed in boiling water and then carefully washed in a 5 per cent. solution of carbolic acid. The surgeons were ready with a corrosive sublimate solution of one to a thousand and a number of gauze pledgets which had been rendered asceptic by thorough baking. Unfortunately for the success of the experiment, the duel was of the ordinary French kind, and the only wound received was slight cut on the hand, which healed promptly after the application of a small piece of asceptic court plaster.

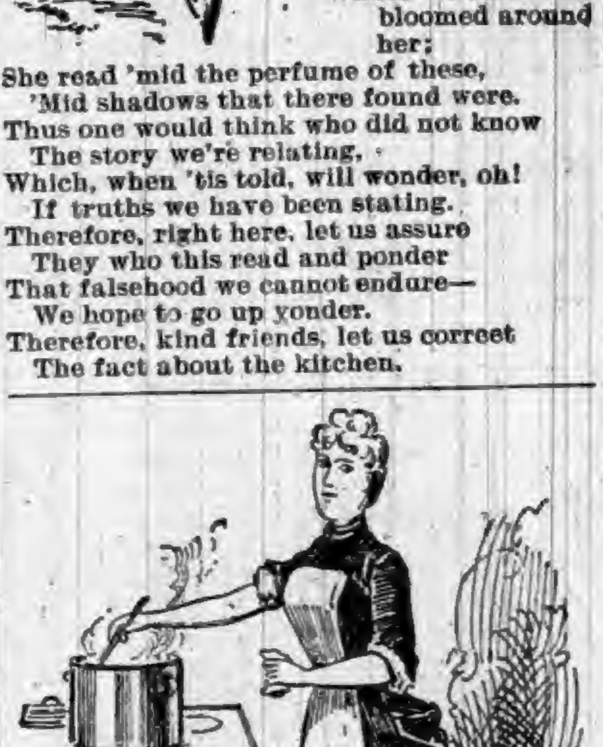
AMONG the residents of New York City is a wealthy old lady who has a habit of sending handsome gifts of money to needy persons whom she believes to be doing worthy work in literature, or art, or the pulpit. She does so in the most private way, desiring that only the beneficiaries shall be aware of her deeds, and seeking only to be useful in her life and seclusion. She acts solely upon her own judgment in each case. The banker through whom she sends checks to the recipients of her bounty says he alone keeps account of the depth of the exchequer from which she draws.

ST. PAUL ISLAND is one of the chief resorts of the seals in Behring Sea. For about six hundred feet up from the water the ground slopes gently, and it is along this incline the seals establish themselves, the coast for sixteen miles some seasons being literally black with the animals. The males are very quarrelsome and fight for their positions, making a din almost deafening, which may be heard for miles. Here the young seal are born and nursed for a few days by the mothers, who then desert them to be cared for by the older males until they are big enough to shift for themselves. The antics of the young while learning to swim are highly amusing. They flounder about in the water at first as totally helpless as a kitten. It is soon over, however, the seal being the most graceful of swimmers.

PIONEER LIFE.

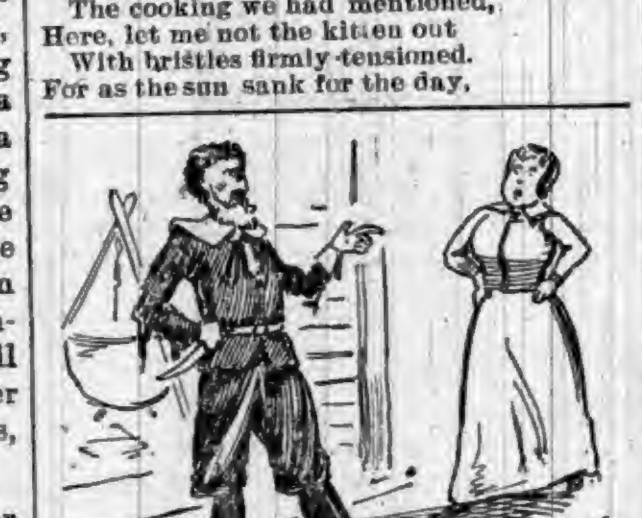
BY OZIAS MIDSUMMER.

THE maid stood on the kitchen floor,
Like others at their stations,
And cooked, as others had before,
Her lord and master's rations.
The mistress sat where blew the breeze,
Where flowers bloomed around her;
She read 'mid the perfume of these,
'Mid shadows that there found were.
Thus one would think who did not know
The story we're relating,
Which, when 'tis told, will wonder, oh!
If truths we have been stating.
Therefore, right here, let us assure
They who this read and ponder
That falsehood we cannot endure—
We hope to go up yonder.
Therefore, kind friends, let us correct
The fact about the kitchen.



"AND COOKED AS OTHERS HAD BEFORE."

And slowly bring you to reflect
On times and scenes bewitching.
For this was at an early day,
When game and woods abounded;
When maids were rosy-cheeked alway,
And stately, sweet, and rounded.
Which, when the sun shone on the floor,
Its surface shone most brightly,
But now its surface shone no more,
For night made it unsightly.
But here and there a shadow lie,
As shown the moon's effulgence;
Which mistress saw and heaved a sigh,
As saw she their indulgence.
For as one shadow seemed to wave,
Another caught the notion,
And, clasping it, each shadow gave
The other shadow motion,
Until you'd think there was a fight
Of shadows there then raging,
For shone there not a ray of light
Between the dark engaging,
So closely knit each shadow seemed
The other shadow shading,
Which, as the truth might have been deemed,
Without a knowledge aiding;
But if the knowledge you'd possessed,
Or anything suspected,
You'd seen the shadows were caressed
And one the most effected.
For as that which a shadow cast
Caressed that of the other,
So held each shadow there each fast,
While one did gasp and smother;
And if your ears had been unstopped,
Their drum-heads been well working,
You'd heard a noise like something dropped
And something kicking—jerking.
And then you'd heard—no, you would not—
For here our story changes;
The truth in part we had forgot;
Extend we here our ranges.
That heretofore which we had said
About perfume and flower,
'Mid which we said the mistress read
In shady, breezy bower,
Was as untrue as that about
The cooking we had mentioned,
Here, let me not the kitten out
With bristles firmly tensioned.
For as the sun sank for the day,



"THE BEAR WHICH HUSBAND CAUGHT."

Thus bringing night's deposit,
The mistress hid herself away
With Rover in a closet;
And when she saw those shadows cast
Athwart the kitchen flooring,
E'en while they held each other fast
She came with candle soaring.
Then came a cry, a piercing sound,
A scream rent night asunder;
For had she not her husband found
With something down him under.
All's well, yes, very well, we trow,
Which ending seems to brighten,
For heard was Rover's "bow, wow, wow,"
As sprang he with his might in,
And soon the bear which husband caught
Exploring for the larder
Was dead where wife had vainly thought
That she might commit murder.

THOSE SPECIFIC DUTIES.

HOW THE TARIFF MAKERS GET IN THEIR WORK.

Consul Schoenhof Exposes a Tariff Swindle—An Enormous Increase which Lies Hidden in Innocent Figures—The Farmer's Waning Wealth.

Mr. Jacob Schoenhof, who was appointed by President Cleveland as our Consul at Tunstall, England, and was removed by President Harrison for the reason that he was writing reports on the cost of production in Europe and America which were very damaging to the protection cause, has just made an able and striking contribution to the tariff discussion. The figures he gives about the lower prices of farm products are of the utmost importance to farmers. The article is here given entire:

"Nothing exemplifies so well the tactics of the advocates of the new device for increasing the burdens of the consumer, under the guise of a tariff for protection, as the statement of Senator Aldrich in reference to cotton velvets. Senator Carlisle had pointed to the new rates on cotton velvets as oppressive to the poor people. The old rates were 40 per cent. ad valorem all round. The new rates change this very radically. 'Cotton velvets, if not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, or printed, 10 cents per square yard and 20 per cent. ad valorem; if bleached, 12 cents per square yard and 20 per cent. ad valorem; if dyed, etc., 14 cents per square yard and 20 per cent. ad valorem; but none of the foregoing articles in this paragraph shall pay a less rate of duty than 40 per cent. ad valorem." No great danger that under the revised edition of this tariff any class of cotton velvets will ever reach a basis upon which the proviso will become effective. The sponsor of the new tariff bill in the Senate, however, proved to his own satisfaction, and probably that of the Senators on his side of the Senate chamber, that the change did not mean an increase. He stated that he or his agents had been visiting the retail dry goods stores in Washington, and found the cheapest cotton velvet sold there to be 70 cents a yard. This statement seems to have settled the question. Duties, however, are not levied on retail prices as ruling in Washington shops, but on the foreign export prices, which, under the circumstances, could not be above 35 cents, or half the retail selling price according to the following formula:

Cost abroad	35c. net
40 per cent. duty	14 cents
Expenses, say 10 per cent	3.5
7 per cent. cash discount on wholesale selling price at 62½ cents	4.375
Importers' commission	5.625
Retailer's profit	7.500
Total	70 cents

He would have to be a retailer doing business on a large scale who would buy directly from the importer. If he buys from an importing jobber, he would have to pay a higher profit rate. No jobbing house can afford to do buiness on so small a margin as 9 per cent. gross profit on an imported article and pay expenses. Nor can a retailer afford to do business, unless on a very large scale, on a 10 per cent. rate on what is called fancy dry goods in the trade. Thirty-five cents, an intelligent farmer will see, is the highest estimate I can place as the foreign cost of a cotton velvet that the learned Rhode Island Senator had in view when he stated it to sell at Washington at 70 cents a yard.

This 35-cent velvet would cost, under the tariff, revised for the benefit of the farmers, 14 cents a square yard and 20 per cent. ad valorem. This sort of velvet would be 24 inches wide, i. e., two-thirds of a square yard.

Specific duty therefore:

$\frac{14x24}{36}$ = 9 1-3 equal to 26.66 per cent.
Ad valorem 20.00
Total .... 46.66 per cent.

Cotton velvet and velveteen would have to be of a higher cost abroad, about 50 cents, and sell in the places where the Senator obtained his information on the values of foreign dry goods as high as $1 a yard if, under the new tariff, it came under the proviso of 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Large quantities of a cheap kind of cotton velvet are imported for undertakers' use. They are known under the name of undertakers' velvet. They cost on the other side 4½d. a running yard. On these the duty will now stand as follows:

Fourteen cents per square yard is seven cents per running-yard; as these goods are about eighteen inches wide, $\frac{7.100}{8\frac{1}{2}}$ = 82.35 per cent.
Plus ad valorem 20
Total .... 102.35 per cent. against the former 40 per cent.

So after being tax-ridden to death's doors, the very trimmings of the coffin in which the poor farmer is carried to his place of rest are raised from 40 to 102.35 per cent. If a man of means, he pays lower rates, of course, according to the view of his heirs. The bulk of importations would average in cotton velvets about 7 pence a yard, about twenty-one inches wide, and the new tariff taxes them as follows:

78.3 against the old 40 per cent. rate.

Now, these medium-grade velvets are used for different purposes of wear, and form the material for a variety of domestic manufactures. They are not manufactured in this country. Efforts have been made, but have invariably failed. The elements which would make a cotton-velvet industry successful are wanting in this country. Undoubtedly, somebody who wants to try his hand has worked the "infant industry" in Washington, and has succeeded. But until a tidal wave shall have swept from power the makers of this iniquitous tariff, the consumers will have to pay an average of 80 per cent. instead of a 40 per cent. duty. The rich, high-priced goods are always taken care of by the provisos, and the poor and cheap goods have to pay the blunt, brutal, heavy-weighted specifics. The people who dictated this new tariff deal know very well what hugger-mugger can be accomplished under the cover of an innocent-looking specific rate. Who knows what fourteen cents a square yard on cotton velvet means outside of the dry-goods trade? Who knows what five cents, seven cents, ten cents, and fourteen cents a pound on wood screws means who is not familiar with the iron trade and prices?

These covert increases of duty need explaining. Under the cover of darkness which these specific duties carry with them, so much denying on the stump can be practiced on the agriculturist that they are most valuable auxilaries. One hundred per cent. duty on so common an article of use as black cotton velvet would seem a hard load to carry. Fourteen cents a square yard and 20 per cent. does not look much like an increase over 40 per cent. ad valorem. I am not sure whether it would not be made to appear as an actual reduction by the skilled apologists and arithmeticians of protection. Huger morsels than this were presented to our friend from the country, and were swallowed without causing any visible signs of uneasiness. This is a fair example of how the tariff increase has been carried. It has been carried. It is a law, and the farmer will have to pay for the luxury of belonging to and voting for the grand old party. I could bring dozens of examples how the people are being swindled by these specific duties, but this one will suffice for the present. In this way the outgoings of the farmers are taken care of by a paternal government.

I want to show now the converse, the income side of the farmer's ledger account. A grand total statement will be the most impressive. It will work with all the brutal force of a knock-down fact:

Statement of the quantities and values of the principal cereal crops in 1880 and 1889. Illinois average of prices taken from the report of the Department of Agriculture, December, 1889 (quantities and values in millions):

	Bushels.	Price.*	Value.
1880.
Wheat	459.6	95 cts.	$436.5
Corn	1,754.6	36 cts.	631.7
Oats	407.8	29 cts.	118.2
	2,622.0		$1,186.4
1889.
Wheat	490.5	70 cts.	$343.35
Corn	2,112.9	24 cts.	507.00
Oats	751.5	19 cts.	142.78
	3,355.0		$993.13

Crops of 1880	Bu. 2,622,000,000
Crops of 1889	Bu. 3,355,000,000
Salable value of crops of 1880	$1,186,000,000
Salable value of crops of 1889	993,000,000
Increase of crops of 1889 over 1880	733,000,000
Decrease in value of crops of 1889 from 1880	193,000,000

*Both ranges of prices are Illinois prices.

I have here taken the leading crops. All other cereals, and adding potatoes and sweet potatoes, do not form more than 10 per cent. of the above. Both crop years have been years of abundance. Per capita of the farming population, the crop of 1889 has, perhaps, not yielded more than that of 1880 in bushels. While the crop in aggregate has given an increase of 733,000,000 bushels, or 28 per cent., the salable value is actually by $193,000,000, or 16.30 per cent., less than in 1880.

Now, as at least 20 per cent. more farmers have to share in this lessened money product, it is easy to imagine whether the complaints we hear from the agricultural districts have any real basis of facts behind them. If the farmer flatters himself that the distress of low values is a temporary one, I am sorry to say that I can give him but cold comfort. From an earnest study of the situation in Europe, Asia, and America, I cannot but see that the influence which contributes to these results are destined to be permanent. They are spreading over wider and wider areas. The limitations of this letter prevent any pointing out the factors that operate so strongly toward a low price level in foreign markets. For the present I only want to point to results as expressed in the most stubborn of all facts, prices. The American crops of 1890 are less by many hundred million bushels than those of 1889. The English and French crops also have been partial failures. Under apprehensions of scarcity, prices of wheat and oats, which were a year ago in the London market 29s. 1d. and 16c. 11d. respectively per quarter (88⅝ cents and 51⅝ cents per bushel) rose last August to 36s. 5d. and 20s. 1d. per quarter, respectively ($1.10 and 61 cents per bushel). This gave a very hopeful situation to the farmer and would, if these prices had been realized, have compensated him for his shortened crops. But in spite of freshets, inundations, and other disasters, Austro-Hungary, Russia, the Danubian principalities have been doing so well that no scarcity scare can be maintained. In consequence prices are quoted at 31s. 6d. and 17s. 8d. a quarter respectively (95 cents and 54 cents a bushel), or but a very slight advance over the very low prices of a year ago. In view of the coming Congressional election I want briefly to draw attention to these facts in the hope that they may help the farmer realize his position. He may possibly see the importance of taking the care of his interests into his own hands instead of confiding it to the tender mercies of the representatives of monopolies and protectionism.

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. 6.

The Tariff as the Main Issue of To-day.

DEAR FARMER BROWN: You say that you agree with all I have written in my letters thus far, and that you are just as good a tariff reformer as I am, if the principles underlying tariff reform are as I have stated them. But you think it is pretty hard to go back on the Congressman who has represented your district so faithfully for seventeen years, a man, too, who won his military title fighting to save the Union.

I need not assure you that I respect your feelings thoroughly in that. But the voting of to-day is on the issues of to-day; and to-day's duty has to do with the problems of to-day. You have admitted that the McKinley bill is a very bad measure. You laugh over the name Ben Butterworth gave to the so-called agricultural duties when he spoke of them as "tin-whistle duties;" and so I am glad to see you have not been imposed upon in the slightest by this specious attempt which the Republican leaders have made to mislead you into the belief that protection can increase the prices of your farm products. That bill, you say, is a bad measure. But your Congressman voted for it; and he will certainly have to vote on tariff measures in the next Congress, for you may rest assured that the tariff is not "settled for ten years at least."

The only important question, therefore, which you have now to decide is whether you want him to vote again as he did on the McKinley bill. A vote for your Congressman is a vote of confidence in the McKinley bill. You cannot give that vote; that "cuss word" you used about the "McKinley prices" convinces me you cannot. But cast your vote for Congressman A., and let the tens of thousands of other voters who feel as you do vote the same way. What is the result? A Congress of high protectionists is re-elected; they assemble at Washington convinced that men like you want high protection and are willing to pay for it. When tariff-making time comes around again—as come it will—they will once more "revise the tariff upward" as they have just done.

No, sir; you have no right to let your private good-will toward Congressman A., nor your admiration for his splendid war record, turn you aside from your duty of to-day. The suffrage is a public trust. You dare not place men above measures. You dare not cast your ballot upon issues that were fought out a quarter of a century ago, and leave the issues of to-day to take care of themselvs. Does it not strike you as a little amusing that you should still find yourself voting as if the question before the people were whether the men who fought at Gettysburg, at Spottsylvania, at Cold Harbor were brave men? Of course they were.

Congressman A. bears the scar of a wound received, I believe, at Antietam. All honor to him, and a pension, too, if you will; but to-day the question is whether the great toiling masses are to have their wants satisfied with a less amount of labor.

To-day for to-day! That is the watchword of all reform. Let the dead past bury its dead, and let its holy memories be consecrated. But new times bring new measures, new responsibilities, and if the men of the past forget this and ask us to stand still with them, we have only to brush past them and leave them to their contemplations.

The tariff question is but the form in which the old question comes to us which has always existed in every government on the face of the earth, the question whether the governing power shall be used for the benefit of rich and influential men or whether it shall be used for the whole people. It is the classes against the masses. The tariff issue to-day is whether we shall have enrichment for the few or simple comfort for the many. It is "money against manhood;" it is whether every man, however poor or humble, shall have equal rights before the law; it is whether toil shall reap its full reward, or whether a portion of every man's labor, every woman's labor, shall be turned aside to swell the dividends or the bank accounts of men who have never felt the struggle for existence. It is a contest between justice and equality on the one hand and oppression and monopoly on the other.

It is an issue between progress and old-fogyism. How so? In this way: The great cheapening process now going on in every department of industry marks the progress of man in his contest for supremacy over nature. New inventions have put into our hands the power to accomplish tenfold more in many lines than our fathers could. The result is that this labor-saving machinery has made everything cheaper. Nowhere is this gain more striking than in transportation, both on land and sea. Steam has enabled us to distribute the good things of life with less than a hundredth part of the labor and expense that we expended in that way when you were born.

Cheap production, cheap transportation—those are the great achievements which the cunning of man has wrought out. The greater the cheapness the greater the progress. But I say that the issue is one between this progress and old-fogyism. In this way the leaders of the Republican party are to-day trying to convince the American people that cheapness is not to be desired, that things can be too cheap. President Harrison, Maj. McKinley, J. C. Burrows, Cabot Lodge, and other leaders have entered upon the hopeless task of proving to us that it is best that we buy dear. I say hopeless, for they will be unable to persuade any large part of us to accept such nonsense. When we accept it the only reasonable thing left to us is to burn or break up all our labor-saving machinery, tear up our railroads, and sink our steam engines in the bottom of the sea.

As soon as these eminent gentlemen lay down the proposition that cheapness is not good, they at once set their faces against human progress and have become old-fogies. In resisting cheapness they set themselves against foreign trade, and are trying, in so far, to make our country what China was a half century ago, before she opened her ports to the great world. Great heavens! Have we come to this? This cheapness which the world has achieved is in a large part due to more easy and rapid transportation, through which exchange of goods is facilitated; and exchange again is but one part in the process of making things cheaper. Men exchange one thing for another only because they value that other thing more than what they give to get it. Every schoolboy knows this when he swaps his first jack-knife. But the Republican party sets its face against foreign trade, or exchanges, while the only reason that such trade can exist is the fact that our own free American people—you and I among them—want certain foreign commodities. We decide that we can get those commodities with least labor by a swap, by what Mr. Blaine calls "friendly barter;" we want to make such a swap and set out to do so But here the Republican party steps in and says: "No, it cannot be done; labor more and get your goods at home."

And I stick to it that the Republican party is an old fogy!

One word in conclusion. Do not be misled by plausible appeals to vote "for the general interests of the country."

The question for you is, what are your interests? When every man has decided the question of protection in this way, and has cast his vote for the interests of himself and family, do you not see that the average interests of the country are arrived at when the votes are counted. But once let the protectionists befog the issue by specious talk about the "general interests of the country," which are nearly always somebody else's interests, and where will you land? Will you not have to study every other man's business in order to find out what the "general interests of the country" are? But you are not capable—no man living is capable—of making such a study of the people's interests. The most we can do is to study the tariff as it affects our own interests—not out of pure selfishness; but because in this way alone can the "general interests of the country" be determined. The votes of all cast in that spirit will show what these general interests are. There is no other way to tell what those interests are.

The only way to get tariff reform is to vote tariff reform; and I shall trust you to vote it as low as you can get it. Yours truly,

RICHARD KNOX.

Narrowing the Market.

During the last week of the old tariff law an extraordinary number of ships were entered at the port of New York, and the exports of American products were enormous. So many ships were competing for return cargoes that the charge for freight from New York to European ports reached a very low figure, there being some cases, indeed, where grain was taken free as ballast.

This is the explanation given out at the New York Custom House for the unusually low freight charges, and it proves that the more freely foreign goods are admitted the greater is the foreign demand for American products. Thus also the freights on outgoing cargoes are brought very low, and our products can compete more advantageously in Europe with the products of other countries.

The blight of McKinleyism, will, however, go far toward changing all this; for already there are signs in England, our principal market, that our products will be in less demand. The London Economist, which is the foremost authority in England on these subjects, says, in commenting upon the McKinley bill: "Many of the staple commodities we now import from the United States we can buy elsewhere, and if the cost of production in the States is enhanced, as it must be under the new tariff, these other markets will become the cheapest for us to buy in."

Whatever the protectionists may say, the English can much better afford to lose the American market than we can afford to lose the English market. On an average we sell England every year $216,000,000 worth of commodities over and above what we buy from that country. Have not we more at stake than England has in this trade? Especially our farmers, who produce three-fourths of our exports?

McKinley Prices for Knives.

The enormous increase of duty on pocket-knives and other cutlery has already enabled domestic manufacturers to charge "McKinley prices." The following letter explains itself:

HOTCHKISSVILLE, Conn., Oct. 2, 1890.

Farm, Stock, and Home:

GENTLEMEN—We beg leave to advise you that we hereby withdraw all former quotations on our cutlery. We have made an advance in our prices, which will be quoted to you by Mr. Taylor on his next trip, or by us on application. Yours truly,

AMERICAN SHEAR CO.

This company evidently takes the McKinley motto: "Cheap! I never liked the word."

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

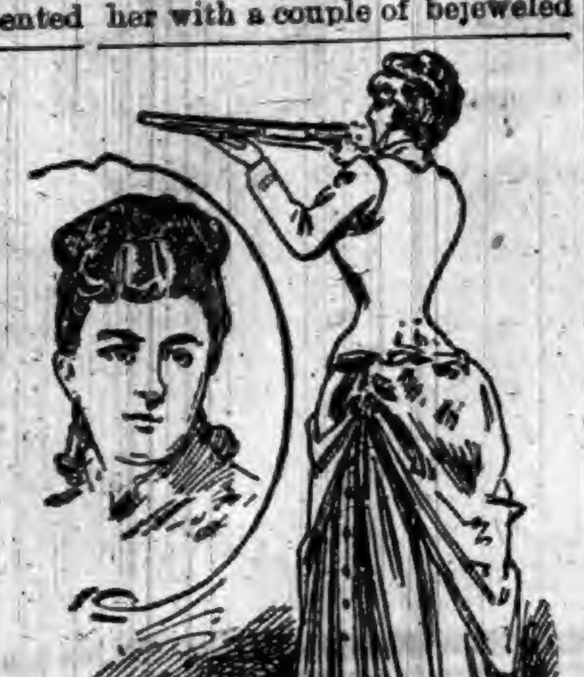
A RIFLE QUEEN.

Miss Adelaide Remsen's Remarkable Record as a Markswoman.

Fashionable New York society is happy in the possession of the champion amateur rifle shot in the world. Miss Adelaide Remsen, who, it is claimed, can make a clean score every time. Miss Remsen is an intimate friend of the Marquise de Mores, and was first taught how to handle a rifle by the plucky wife of the nobleman cowboy. Miss Remsen's favorite weapon is a 38-caliber Winchester rifle. She has an unerring aim and rarely if ever misses her mark. While visiting the Marquise de Mores in the Bad Lands of Dakota, two years ago, the fair New York girl astonished the professional hunters with the remarkable precision of her aim and her wonderful pluck. Miss Remsen has bowled over deer, bear, antelope, and mountain sheep—a truly wonderful record for a man, let alone a pretty young society miss, who performed this marvelous shooting in the face of the greatest dangers.

While at Lennox, Mass., last season and again at Cannes, France, about three months ago, Miss Remsen made such phenomenal scores as to evoke the admiration of the spectators, who presented her with a couple of bejeweled badges emblematic of her prowess with the rifle. The Prince of Wales, who witnessed Miss Remsen's markmanship at Cannes, presented her with a tiny gold target, studded with priceless gems, which the fair markswoman wears as a lace-pin. Miss Remsen is a noted society belle.



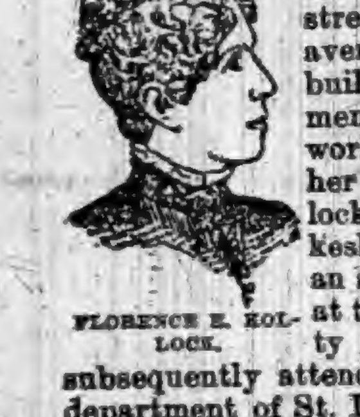
MISS ADELAIDE REMSEN.

WOMEN AND FLOWERS.

FLOWERS are tender and delicate, and wither and die from apparently very slight causes. It is a peculiar fact that some women kill flowers within twenty minutes after they are adjusted to the corsage. Others will wear them for hours and they will look as fresh as when they were first pinned on. A Chicago florist, talking upon this subject to a reporter, said: "Women wear flowers sometimes because they are vain, not because they love them. Flowers are alive, and it chills them to lie near the heart that has no love for them. They droop and mourn themselves to death, because they know there is nothing in common between them and the wearer. They are like little children; they love those who love them, and their best, brightest beauty is given to the woman who pins the bouquet on through her love for the flowers." A Chicago physician expressed himself upon the subject as follows: "Certainly some women can kill flowers within a very few minutes. It is a sure indication that a poisonous vapor is escaping from the body to a great degree. It may be the result of disease, or it may be that bathing and proper care of the skin are neglected. The body that is kept in wholesome cleanliness will give new life to the flowers. A magnetic strength is carried from the wearer to the flower, and long after the woman is weary with an afternoon's shopping or calling the flowers will smile back at her with her own strength. She gives life to the flowers through the sweetness of her own body. There is such a difference in women about the care of the person. Some of our best dressed and wealthiest ladies are the most negligent. They seem to have no pride. There is nothing more discernible than this disregard. They are either ignorant or unconscious of this fact, or else they are without the pride that should go with intelligence. Flowers cannot live in the poisonous vapor, and they betray the secret of invisible negligence by soon drooping."

Florence E. Kollock, Universalist Minister.

One of the most remarkable women in Chicago is Miss Florence E. Kollock, pastor of the handsome Universalist Church at the corner of Sixty-fifth street and Stewart avenue. The church building is a monument to her untiring work and devotion to her faith. Miss Kollock was born in Waukesha, Wis., received an academic education at the State University at Madison, and subsequently attended the theological department of St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y. On entering the ministry she was sent to Waverly, Ia., where she remained two and a half year, when she came to Chicago.



FLORENCE E. KOLLOCK.

The church in which Miss Kollock preaches is a pretty brick edifice, costing $25,000, and holding between 1,000 and 1,200 people. The congregation in regular attendance numbers 400, but the church is filled to the doors every Sunday morning to hear Miss Kollock's stirring sermons.

The Handkerchief.

Throughout the most elegant periods of the age of chivalry hankerchiefs were unknown. Embroidered handkerchiefs had come into use in Shakspeare's time, as is proved by the important part which Desdemona's handkerchief—or "napkin," as it is called—plays in the tragedy of "Othello." But as yet the possessors of handkerchiefs were lords and ladies. Even in the seventeenth century the common people knew no such luxury. One of the most curious notes about the early use of the handkerchief in polite society is the evidence we have in literature that the article was frequently lent, and passed from hand to hand for use. But this was in the days when soap was unknown, and when even high-born ladies of the court bathed so seldom that the practice was hardly known. We read much of the elegances and refinement of the old courtly days, but these elegances did not include many of the common refinements that the poorest people of the present day practice.

An Electric Census.

In 1837 the first practical telegraph was worked in England, after a crude attempt made in 1835, on a line of thirteen miles between Paddington and Drayton. In 1844 a telegraph line was opened between Washington and Baltimore. In 1850 a copper wire insulated in gutta percha was submerged between Dover and Calais, and the first submarine telegraph was laid by the late T. R. Crampton.

There are now 942 submarine cables, exclusive of the seven Atlantic cables, with an aggregate of 112,740 nautical miles. The overland telegraph is already a world-wide institution, in which there is a total of 1,680,900 miles of wire, enough of the attenuated metal to go around the equatorial belt of the globe just thirty times. The number of words transmitted, the miles traveled, and the cash changing hands would tax the enumeration table.

The United States have 776,500 miles of wire, and in 1889 no less than 56,000,000 messages were sent through the country. France has 220,890 miles of miles of wire, on which in 1889 were transmitted 30,050,000 dispatches. Great Britain has 180,000 miles of metal line, and in 1889 sent 50,000,000 messages. Russia has spun out 170,500 miles, and in 1889 gave the operators 10,280,780 messages to dispatch. Australia has strung no fewer than 105,360 miles of wire across its surface, and transmitted in one year 12,000,000 messages. Italy has 19,500 miles, and has made an annual record of about 7,000,000 electric messages. Canada has 58,500 miles of wire, and did a business in 1889 of 4,027,581 dispatches. Egypt has 5,500 miles, and is in connection with India and England by submarine cables, on which last year 1,600,205 communications were carried from one end of the world to the other. China has 5,500 miles of wire across Mongolia, and Japan owns no less than 16,500 miles, over which 5,000,000 messages were sent in one year. New Zealand has strung itself with 11,375 miles of metal cord, and dispatched 1,835,394 messages. Tasmania has 2,500 miles of telegraph wires. Persia claims, in partnership with European wires, about 6,124 miles. South Africa has a credit of 4,310 miles, and even St. Helena, the island prison of the Great Corsican, has thirteen miles of the universal wire cobwebbing its rocks.

The telegraph systems of the world have unrolled the wire reel without stint, and if we add to the 1,688,900 used for telegraph purposes the wholesale appropriation by the telephone system, the sum total would be enormous.

The Secret of It.

"I see," said a friend to an acquaintance, "that every time you enter the Climax saloon the proprietor sets up the drinks to you."

"Yes."

"Old friend of yours, eh?"

"No, not particularly."

"Must think well of you."

"Rather the reverse."

"How do you make that?"

"Well, you see I owe him $50 and he is afraid that if he neglects me I won't pay the bill."

"But you don't intend to pay it anyway, do you?"

"My dear fellow, we always intend to pay. Let's see who's on watch in here. If he's a new man, probably I can stand him off."—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Disease Unaccountably Prevalent.

The prevalence of ailments attributable to miasmatic poison in the air that people breathe, and the water they drink, is well nigh unaccountable. Not alone in pestilential swamps, badly drained suburban districts, and marshes exposed to the sun's rays by the receding tide, is this scourge of humanity found. Even in great cities, healthfully located, skillfully sewered, well looked after in every respect in a sanitary way, we find malaria. Its presence is often inexplicable, but its attacks are always preventable. The protector is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The eradicator bears the same name—a name known to thousands throughout our broad land and elsewhere as a synonym of relief, prevention and cure of the insidious disorders in its abominable phases—chills and fever, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake, as well as others. Nor is the Bitters less effective for indigestion, kidney complaint, biliousness, and rheumatism.

PECULIAR INFATUATION.

Different Methods of Following the Injunction "Love One Another."

Do men ever fall in love with each other? Women do. Not long ago a young woman in New Jersey was married to a youthful laborer on her father's farm. Sometime afterward it was discovered that the husband was a female; the young wife refused, however, though earnestly entreated by her friends, to give up her chosen consort. The strangest part of the discovery was the fact that the bride knew her husband was a woman before she was led to the altar.

If men do not exhibit this strange infatuation for one of their own sex, they at least oftentimes give evidence of the fact that they love one another. There are many instances on record where one man has given his life for another. There are many more instances where men have given life to another.

It is a proud possession—the knowledge that one has saved a precious human life. Meriden, Conn., is the home of such a happy man. John H. Preston, of that city, July 11, 1890, writes: "Five years ago I was taken very sick. I had several of the best doctors, and one and all called it a complication of diseases. I was sick four years, taking prescriptions prescribed by these same doctors, and I truthfully state I never expected to get any better. At this time, I commenced to have the most terrible pains in my back. One day an old friend of mine, Mr. R. T. Cook, of the firm of Curtis & Cook, advised me to try Warner's Safe Cure, as he had been troubled the same way and it had effected a cure for him. I bought six bottles, took the medicine as directed, and am to-day a well man. I am sure no one ever had a worse case of kidney and liver trouble than I had. Before this I was always against proprietary medicines, but not now, oh, no."

Friendship expresses itself in very peculiar ways sometimes; but the true friend is the friend in need.

The Society Paper.

It is a sad event when a sickly little society paper published in some ambitious town goes under. Then the visit of some society dude from a neighboring village passes without mention, and the trip of somebody's head servant girl on a hoss-car passes unheralded and unknown. Of what use for the wife of the village judge to look "perfectly lovely" in a blue pongee silk, or for the daughter of the leading apothecary to tread the stately measure of the dance in a white tulle overskirt, when there is no longer a society journal to record it? Henceforth, society must depend upon the facetious and uncertain "mentioning" of their local paper, which has a way of mixing up society events, with obituary notices and dog fights.—Texas Siftings.

In Many Forms

Scrofula taints the blood of almost every one, and it is the cause of much of our health. If it attacks the breathing organs, the issue is consumption; if the digestive apparatus, the issue is dyspepsia and debility; if the muscles, the issue is rheumatism; if the nerves, the issue is paralysis; if the glandular system, the issue is in boils and other superficial exhibitions of corruption. It is a mistake to characterize it as unseen. What festers your skin on every little abrasion? Scrofula. What gives that hack to your cough on exposure to the slightest damp and cold? Scrofula. What makes your food an oppression? Scrofula. What racks and twists the bones and sinews as you grow old? Scrofula. It operates by withholding nutrition and defeating all efforts toward nourishment, life becomes a burden, and the victim knows not the blessings and happiness of health. It is your duty to yourself, your family, and your race to manfully oppose and dislodge this demon. How? We can only say that others who were afflicted as you are have found relief and cure in a moderate use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that compound in which the skill of the modern pharmacist and the science of the most advanced medical knowledge unite for the benefit of suffering humanity.

Commendable.

All claims not consistent with the high character of Syrup of Figs are purposely avoided by the Cal. Fig Syrup Company. It acts gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, cleansing the system effectually, but it is not a cure-all and makes no pretensions that every bottle will not substantiate.

Managing Tramps.

Mistress—Did any one call while I was out?

Servant—No one, ma'am, exceptin' a tramp. He wanted somethin' to eat; but I told him there was nothin' ready, an' he'd have to wait till th' leddy of the house got back from the cooking-school, an' mebby she'd make him something."

Mistress—Of all things! Did he wait?

Servant—No, ma'am. He runned.—N. Y. Weekly.

FOUL poisons that accumulate in the blood and rot the machinery of the system are eradicated and expelled by using Prickly Ash Bitters, a medicine that will not irritate the stomach or bowels. It acts in a gentle manner on these delicate organs, and restores health in every case.

The Ways of Great Men.

Sniggs—What a difference in men the world call great.

Snaggs—Yes. Take Congressmen, for instance. Some have highways, and some have buyways.—Texas Siftings.

Noxious Humors,

Combined with wind and water, are carried to and from every part of the body every six minutes. In many cases there are flying pains in the body—sometimes in the back, sometimes in the side, and at other times in the arms and legs, and these are often called rheumatic pains, but in reality are nothing more than wind and water mingled with the blood, and carried to every part of the body in its circulation. Let anyone troubled with any or all of the symptoms here described take the wonderful English remedy, Beecham's Pills, four, five, or even six, and afterward two pills morning and night for a few days, and they will carry off all noxious humors, expel the wind, cause a free circulation of the water, and lay the foundation of health and strength.

Beecham's Pills are prepared only by Thomas Beecham, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.

B. F. Allen Co., 365 Canal street, New York, Sole Agents for the United States, will mail Beecham's Pills on receipt of price, 25 cents a box, if your druggist does not keep them.

An Infallible Sign.

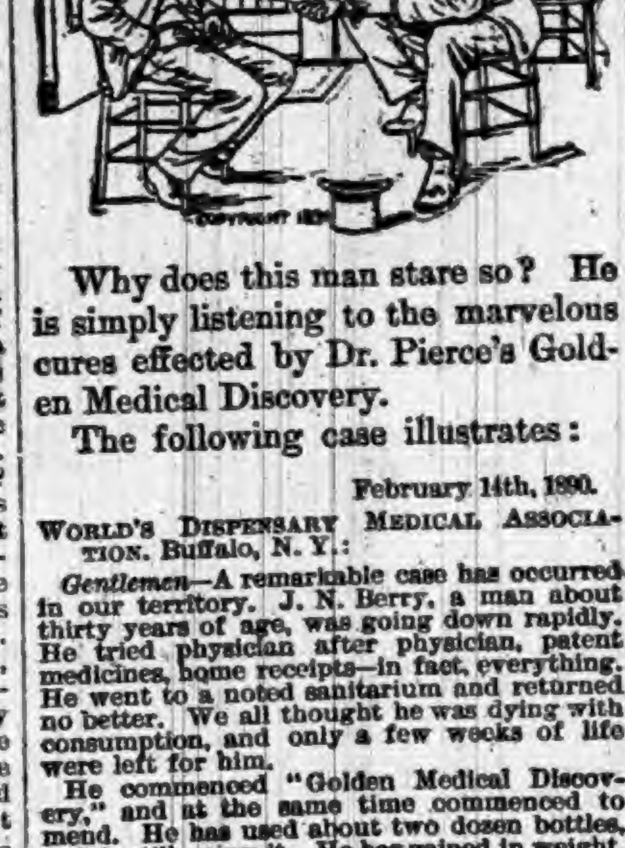
Weeks—I'll wager a new hat that man over there's a schoolmaster.

Potts—Nonsense! How do you know?

Weeks—Oh, he tried his hand on the seat of the chair before he sat down on it!—Life.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure Billious and Nervous Ills.

SEVERAL young men of Lexington, Ky., wear knee-breeches.



Why does this man stare so? He is simply listening to the marvelous cures effected by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

The following case illustrates:

February 14th, 1890.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—A remarkable case has occurred in our territory. J. N. Berry, a man about thirty years of age, was going down rapidly. He tried physician after physician, patent medicines, home receipts—in fact, everything. He went to a noted sanitarium and returned no better. We all thought he was dying with consumption, and only a few weeks of life were left for him.

He commenced "Golden Medical Discovery," and at the same time commenced to mend. He has used about two dozen bottles, and is still using it. He has gained in weight, color and strength, and is able to do light work. It is just such a case as we should have listened to rather suspiciously, but when we see it we must believe it.

It has trebled our sales of "Golden Medical Discovery."

In all bronchial, throat and lung affections, lingering coughs, spitting of blood, weak lungs and kindred ailments, the "Discovery" effects the most marvelous cures.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of

Prickly Ash Bitters!

a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, for the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Remember the name—PRICKLY ASH BITTERS. Ask your druggist for it.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

CORRESPONDENCE.

AUBURN JUNCTION.

David Olinger has been in poor health for some time.

Harry Stafford is again at work on the B. & O. railroad.

O. Werntz and wife spent last Sunday with G. E. Shutts.

J. A. McClure was in Auburn last Friday on business.

The trains are still behind time on the B. & O.—slow but sure.

For fine stoves, call on D. Y. Husselman or J. J. VanAuken.

Joe Link has moved his residence on his lot at Auburn Junction.

Perry and Evan Link and Wm. Morr have gone to Michigan to hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. Bovee attended church at Auburn Junction last Sunday.

Mrs. Henry Mason was a guest of Mrs. M. Whetzel, last Monday afternoon.

Anyone finding McGinty or the bill he passed is rewarded $5. Lost while sober.

Wm. Werntz, who has returned from the East, is staying here with a brother of his.

Mr. Stafford will set a first-class meal for 25c. Call on him while stopping here.

Lizzie Lehmbeck is at home again, after spending several days with Mrs. Lockwood.

Anyone who likes music should call on D. W. Greenawald and hear him play on the guitar and mouth harp at the same time.

Mr. G. H. Oberholtzer has been very busy for the past few weeks. in the hotel. He sets a first class table, and it would be well for all who stop here a few hours to call and see him.

CONCORD

Joseph Koch and others have returned from their hunting excursion.

Sol. Shilling is building an addition to his already large barn.

Mrs. Mansfield, of Toledo, is here visiting her many friends.

R. B. Clark and daughter Ida were at Ft. Wayne last Tuesday.

A few attended the oyster supper at St. Joe Saturday evening.

Mrs. E. Lutz had two lady friends visiting her from Allen county, Ohio, last week.

Alice Draggoo left for Delphi last Tuesday. She was called there by the sickness of her brother Frank's family.

The pioneers are responding liberally to a call for funds to put a window in the Concord church. May their memory ever be green.

Miss Ella High and Miss Alice Draggoo were grandly entertained at the residence of Mrs. John M. Henderson, Oct. 21, it being her 44th birthday.

O. H. Widney, of St. Joe, has a comrade visiting him from Montana. They are having an enjoyable time, judging from the distance you can hear O. H. laugh.

The slaters came last Tuesday to put on the roof of the church. The same day Mr Weltha was called back to Hicksvill by the sudden death of his father, and on Thursday. Mr Reed had to attend his own wedding at Maysville, and when it rained, Mr. Hartle left for home, so the roof is not on.

BUTLER.

Emlin Campbell is attending the Angola normal school.

The frame for the new mill is up and makes an imposing appearance.

Clark Brown has so far recovered that he is supposed to be out of danger.

Thomas Carr and family will soon depart for Missouri, where they will perhaps make their future home.

The M. E. friends hold their third quarterly meeting at Butler next Sabbath. This society continues to grow rapidly.

The Lake Shore has a large force of men employed in removing the old coal dock and getting ready for other substantial improvements that are soon to follow.

The great ditch that is being constructed to drain nearly all the north side will perhaps be finished this fall. It commences at the run north of town and extends south along Broadway to Washington street, thence west to James street, thence south to North street, with laterals in all directions. The cost will be several thousand dollars, and will be added to the tax duplicate, and make high taxes for a year to come. But the improvement is a much needed one and will materially improve the health in the region through which it passes.

SPENCERVILLE.

William Rhoads has moved on his farm east of the river.

Will Burtsfield and Nanny Evans have concluded to travel life's journey together.

Ben and Will Zeigler were in town Wednesday, calling on old acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Kail rejoice in the addition of a daughter to their responsibilities.

Mrs. Elizabeth Rhoads returned to her home at Grand Junction, Mich., last Tuesday evening.

Miss Jennie Baltz has been teaching for Miss Mabel Murray, at Coburntown, during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. David Dove have set up housekeeping in the house formerly occupied by Wm. Rhoads.

Rev. S. P. Fryberger, wife and daughter have been visiting their friends in this vicinity during the past week.

Elmore Chaney has sold his interest in the wagon shop to John Scott, and has secured a place in the railroad carpenter shop at Garrett.

The Official Ticket.

We publish to-day by authority, the official ballots to be used at the coming election. The state ballot to be voted will be red, and the local ballot white. Stamp the square at the left of the words "Democratic ballot," and that is all that is necessary. That gives a straight ticket. That is the best and easiest. But if a split ticket is voted, each and every name should be stamped, from top to bottom, then in counting there need be no mistake made. There is no penalty attached to any mistake, but one who purposely violates the law, may be punished. There are no more dangers, or difficulties for the honest voter than under the old law. On the contrary the honest voter is fully protected. That is the great aim of the law.

DR. FRUTH,

Of New York, the well known and successful Specialist in Chronic Diseases, and diseases of the Eye and Ear by request of many friends and patients, has decided to visit

AUBURN, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1890.

Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. One day only.

CHRONIC DISEASES, —AND— DISEASES of the EYE and EAR A SPECIALTY.

FREE. Consultation and Examination

DR. D. O. FRUTH,

—OF THE—

PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,

NEW YORK CITY,

— Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaptation or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz.: He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. Let those given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhœa, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphilis, St. Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the traces of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and relief you positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

The demand for roads in various quarters was made known by petitions, and survey was generally ordered. Inability to bridge swamps at that day compelled road masters to follow high ground skirting low, wet places, and resulted in crooks and windings, still to some extent extant. Mr Miller having more than he could do, George Weeks, then of Newville, and J. W. Ball were engaged in surveys, and the commissioner's record of 1839 names many a pioneer who carried a chain or swung the ax to blaze the route, and viewed the embryo road.

At the May term of probate court, only Ariel Walden and Nelson Payne, associate judges, were in attendance to dispose of the few cases of wills and guardianships. It was ordered that the publication required by law be made by setting up written notices in three of the most public places in this county, there being no public newspaper published and printed in the county. Coburn, the clerk, has left a plainly written, well expressed record, and the proceedings generally reflect great credit upon the men chosen to form the new county and conduct its business. At the circuit court, Henry Cooper and Reuben J. Dawson were admitted as attorneys and counselors-at-law at the bar. In looking over the record, the character of the cases reveals much of the pioneer life. Grand larceny was by no means uncommon when among the pioneers was found a class of human strays who hunted but would not work, and whose law was to take and keep what came in their way while strolling about the clearings.

There was much of physical force when strength was all important in the contest with nature, and we see it plainly revealed in the long race from the chosen section far off in the woods to the land office, the journeys for supplies to the northern points or south to Fort Wayne, and in the very action of the judges met to try the merits of alleged misdemeanors.

Many the long tramp, ride and journey then that to us of today would seem almost impossible, and a contrast of the emigrants coming slowly on horseback, ox sled and on foot with the lightning trains from east to the far west, is more than wonderful, it is marvelous. Not all who came to Auburn in 38 and earlier were poor, but such was the condition of the great majority. There were speculators and usurers then, as there had been from times memorial, and the disappointments caused by sickness and death compelled a resort to the latter class. Who can recount or understand, save in his own bitter experience, the privations of poverty, augmented by suits for debt and foreclosures of mortgages, turning the settler adrift and voiding to him all the labor and suffering so far endured.

I envy no man his wealth, won by foreclosed mortgages on the homes of the unfortunates. It needs a heart steeled to feeling, and an avarice to which the good Samaritan was a stranger.

For several years, Auburn was little more than a name, and many lots were bought and held by speculators. In March, '38, John B. Howe, Parks' associate, seems to have lost faith or interest in the place, judging by his sale of a large number of lots to Henry Work for $400. In '39, there was some sale of lots, but few if any building on them. Several settlers who have of late years become prominent in Auburn as officials and business men, came this year and settled on farms in the country.

The first restrictions upon selling whiskey are revealed in several indictments for selling to Indians and for "selling to be drunk in the home." The frequent ague thrill, that indescribable emotion, at the stomach, that gaping yawn sought readiest relief from the fiery warmth of alcoholic drink. I do not know whether Indians had chills, but if they did, they were right in seeking relief from whisky or anything else that promised relief.

It is remembered that Park and Spencer had offered many lots to the county and that Byron Bunnell had been appointed agent for their sale as needed. The commissioners have left it on record that "Bunnell not having settled with the commissioners as required by law, for nineteen months was dismissed and Thomas J. Freeman was appointed in his place. All orders for selling town lots and for building a jail were rescinded although he was paid for what had been done.

Freeman Park and Nelson Payne, who came into notice as merchants at "the corners," were appointed superintendents for building a jail, and it was made their duty to select for a site some one of the lots owned by the county, to prepare a plan and to progress with the building as fast as practicable. Payment was to be made with the proceeds of the sale of the lots. No debts were to be made so as to necessitate the selling of such lots for less than their real value. All county lots were subject to sale except lots No. 169 and 170, which were not to be offered by Freeman who, however, was authorized to select either of them, or any other site for the jail. The new county agent was required to give bonds to the amount of $5,000, which seems to have been excessive but satisfactory to both parties. The excepted lots are those occupied by Trout's livery stable and the new engine house, made over from the old jail. The tax levied was 85c on the $100. L Ingman, treasurer, made report in the fall, "no money in the treasury," and the same condition of things has, with short lived exceptions, continued down to the present.

Freeman reports the sale of four lots, viz: Nos. 68 for $35, 71 for $20, 25 for $18 and 89 for $30. Total receipts, $103. With this he had paid for making and acknowledging two deeds, $1.50, for clearing the jail lot of timber, $6.00, hewing 1,680 feet of timber, $16.20, and for making 1,600 shingles, $9.00.

Several men came in the fall of '39, boarded with Parks and Freeman, and bought land and lots, aided in their selection by Parks, who charged a small fee for his trouble.

We have reliable information that Rev. W. H. Clay presiding elder for the radicals was approached by a member of his church not far from this place who had joined one of the former organizations and interrogated on the matter, when it is said he replied, "just let the matter rest now, and when our next general conference meets we will modify the rule so that the minor orders can come in.

On last Tuesday morning before it was yet day, a certain man was seen to go to a neighbors wood pile and steal an armful of wood, which he carried and laid down near his dwelling and went for the second load. By this time the man slipped out and stood near where he laid the wood down and when he came up, confronted him and said, "hello!" He replied nervously, "good morning" and began to say "eight seven, eight seven," as if counting the sticks. But when fairly caught he said he had bought a load of wood which had failed to come, and had borrowed these sticks from Ab. But Ab. when interrogated said he knew nothing about it.

On Wednesday night of last week a burglar entered the store of Speer & Co. by breaking a glass and raising a window at the northwest part of the building. He tried the middle door but failing to get into the main store building, he carried off a quantity of honey, meat, flour, butter, etc. On last Saturday two little girls were on the fair ground and noticed that the back door to the boarding hall was open and went in and found some honey, meat and flour deposited there. This news was conveyed to Mr. Speer, and it was arranged to have some parties watch the hall that Saturday night About eleven o'clock light was seen in the hall, but the man escaped in the darkness. A part of the stolen goods were then brought back including a good willow basket with the shipping tag and full name of Speer & Co. on it.

HAPPENINGS OF A WEEK.

WHAT IS FOUND AMONG OUR TELEGRAPH NEWS.

Result of the Fall Elections in the Different States—McKinley Probably Reelected to Congress—The Result in Doubt in Many States.

The following returns from the Fall elections were received up to Wednesday morning:

OHIO.

The Republicans made large gains in Hamilton County, electing both Congressmen from that city. Hayes (Democrat) is re-elected to Congress in the Seventh Ohio District. The prospects are that McKinley has beat Warrior. The Republican State ticket is elected. The best estimates on Congressmen is: Republicans, 9; Democrats, 9; three in doubt.

INDIANA.

Under the new election law the number of voting precincts in the State has been increased from 1,853 to 2,919, so that it will be impossible to make comparisons with the precinct vote. Under the circumstances it is hard to tell which party has carried the State. Chairman Jewett of the Democratic State Committee said to an Associated Press reporter: "We have carried the State by sixteen thousand, elected the legislature and eleven of thirteen congressmen." "We are claiming everything, conceding nothing," said Chairman Michener of the Republican State Central Committee, at midnight. "We have returns from only a few districts and therefore have nothing on which to base an estimate. You can say distinctly, however, that we are making no concessions.

Tha latest indications are that the Democrats have elected ten and Republicans three congressmen.

ILLINOIS.

The returns thus far indicate the election of three Republican congressmen in Chicago and one Democrat, although the Democrats still deny the election of Taylor in the first, and claim Mason's victory in the third is not yet conclusive. Congressmen Adams, Hopkins, Hitt, Henderson, Hill, and Payson (Republicans), are unquestionably re-elected, as is probably Rowell (Republican.) There is hardly a doubt of the success of Post (Republican) in the Tenth District. In the Eleventh District Gest's election has been stubbornly contested over by Benjamin T. Cable, (Democrat) and the result is still in doubt. Wike, Springer, Lane and Williams (Democrat) are re-elected, and indications point to the re-election of Smith (Republican) in the Twentieth district and the Sixteenth district is doubtful but Congressman Fithian claiming re-election. Congressman Forman (Democrat) from the latest returns is probably elected by a slight majority in the Eighteenth district. The Democrats are claiming the defeat of Congressman Cannon (Republican) in the Fifteenth district, but the Republican State Central Committee claim Cannon's re-election by 500 majority.

MCIHIGAN.

Three hundred and nine precincts, including 56 in Detroit, give Turner (Rep) 23,759, Wimans (Dem) 27,085. The indications are the Republicans elect Cutcheon in the Ninth district and Stevenson in the Eleventh. The Democrats elect Chipman in the First, Whitney in the Seventh and P. Weadock in the Tenth congressional districts.

WISCONSIN.

Sixty-three voting precincts including thirty-six in Milwaukee, show a net Democratic gain of 3,480. John L. Mitchell, Democrat, is undoubtedly elected to Congress from the Fourth District. Two hundred and nineteen voting precincts in the State including 67 precincts in Milwaukee City and four towns in Milwaukee County show net Democratic gain of 10,264.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Chairman Andrews, of the Republican Committee, makes the following statement: The Republican State Committee believe Delamater has a plurality, but the result is close and it may take the official figures to determine. Chairman Kerr, of the Democratic State Committee, claims the State by 10,000 majority. He asserts that his advices show that Pattison will come to Philadelphia with not less than 30,000 majority.

A special from Philadelphia says the Enquirer concedes Pattison's election for Governor.

CONNECTICUT.

The legislature is apparently Republican on joint ballot by about twenty-five. Sperry (Democrat) in the First and Wilcox (Democrat) in the Second are elected to Congress. Russell (Republican) is elected in the Third and the Fourth is uncertain.

CALIFORNIA.

Returns as backward as usual. Indications are that Markham, Republican, for Governor, will be elected. Democrats claim to have carried the First, Second, Fourth and Fifth districts, being a gain of two.

MASSACHUSETTS.

From gains on the vote so far the indications are that Russell (Democrat), for Governor, will be elected by 5,000 plurality. The Democrats have gained two congressmen.

MONTANA.

Both parties claim the election of congressmen and the State ticket by majorities of 200 to 500. The Democrats are most confindent.

COLORADO.

The Legislature is Republican by a good working majority. The State ticket is elected with 2,500 to spare. The congressional seat is retained by the Republicans.

NEW YORK.

Tammany has re-elected Grant mayor of New York City by 22,000 majority. The delegation in Congress will be evenly divided. The Assembly is close.

MONTANA.

Both parties cla'm the election of congressmen and State by majorities of 200 to 500.

Caught from a Cat.

The family of Robert Paul, at Middleton, Wis., has been afflicted with diphtheria, which was brought into the house in a peculiar manner. About four weeks ago a stray cat came to their home and one of their children handled and played with it. Although it was noticed at the time that it discharged at the nose and mouth, nothing was thought of it until soon after, when the little boy came down with black diphtheria of the most malignant kind, that the doctor said he had caught from the cat. The boy died, when a second son took the disease and died. The father, mother and daughter were also stricken down but recovered. Allen, the only remaining son and support of his parents, cared for them all through their terrible sickness, holding one of the boys when dying and preparing them for their last resting place with his own hands. When the others were recovering he was taken down and died.

A FATAL VOYAGE.

Ocean Vessels Collide Off the New Jersey Coast.

Six miles off Barnegan, on the Jersey coast, was the steamship Vizcaya, on her way to Havanna. Near by was an unknown, and probably unseen schooner. Seven minutes later both vessels were at the bottom of the sea, and with them sank eighty-one of their passengers and crews. In those seven minutes a collision and death struggle with the waves had taken place, a scene had occurred which even the dozen survivors cannot give the details of without stopping to make sure that it is not all a terrible dream. The entire lot of passengers of the Vizcaya were lost. The fate of the crew of the schooner is still unknown. The first news received of the disater in New York was when the steamer Humboldt from Brazil arrived at her dock in Brooklyn having on board the twelve survivors of the catastrophe whom she had picked up at daybreak that morning. Capt. Black, of the Humboldt, said that at daybreak his ship was off Barnegie light. Suddenly, from off their port bow, came a cry for help. Peering in that direction through the mist of the early morning the officer of the Humboldt saw three masts sticking out of the water and clinging to the yards and rigging people were seen. Quickly a boat was lowered and towed to the unfortunate people. There were twelve of them—all sailors—clinging to the spars, and their joy was unspeakable when they were taken into the boat.

"It was at about 8:30 o'clock," said Chief Officer Hayes in discribing the catastrophe. "We were then six and a half miles off Barnegat and going at full speed. We had sailed from New York for Havana and other Cuban ports at 1 o'clock. We descried at a few moments after 8 o'clock an immense four-masted schooner tacking some distance away. Capt. Francisco Cumill was on the bridge at the time. The collision came at 8:30.

"The schooner was going at full speed. We were also steaming at a great speed. The schooner appeared much larger than the Vizcaya. She struck us on the starboard side, amidships by the coal bunkers. She cut right into us and we were cut as clearly in two as a loaf of bread. The bowsprit of the schooner carried away everything in its path, struck the bridge and carried it away, and the Captain was undoubtedly killed then and there, and therefore escaped death by drowning.

DEMONIACAL ACT OF A WOMAN.

Moved by Jealous Rage, She Throws Two Little Girls from a Bridge.

A murder of a most sensational character occurred at Akron, a small village in Erie County, N. Y. Sarah McMillan, a girl about eighteen years old, enticed two little girls, Delia Brown and Nellie May Conners, to the high bridge back of the Akron Cement Works, when she threw both off the bridge, injuring Delia internally and killing Nellie outright. The bridge is fifty-two feet high. Delia struck eight feet from the water on her feet and Nellie hit an abutment in the fall and had her skull crushed. Miss McMillan threw Nellie over first and Delia tried to get away, but the McMillan girl being too quick for her caught her and threw her over. Then she went back to town and tried to commit suicide by throwing herself off the Murder creek bridge, but was rescued just in time by the father of Delia Brown, who, of course, knew nothing of what had happened. When the children were missed search was made for them and they were found early next morning. The McMillan girl was taken home and put to bed, but refused to say a word as to why she did the terrible deed. It is known, however, that she was in love with Brown, the father of Delia, who in turn was paying attention to Mrs. Conners, Nettie's mother. It is thought that she intended to kill both children to spite Brown and Mrs. Conners. Miss McMillan is now in the Buffalo jail.

Ways of the West.

The Legislative hall at Guthrie, O. T., was thrown into an uproar by the action of Representative Terrill. The Assembly had been in session all night until 2 a. m., when the Representative demanded that Senator McCarthy, who was on the floor lobbying for the Kingfisher bill, be ejected. The Speaker refused to comply with the request when Terrill said he would leave the hall. The Speaker then ordered the door locked; but Terrill kicked it open and went out followed by so many members that the Assembly adjourned. Next morning Terrill walked to his desk and laying a revolver on it, said he would see whether the Speaker would brazenly disregard the rules of the House. The Sergeant-at-arms, after a struggle, disarmed Terrill, who went out to hunt another gun. The bill was defeated.

A Big Brewery Suit.

J. P. Grant, of Michigan, has brought action in the United States Court against S. P. Scott, of New York, touching a violation of two brewery contracts, of which breweries the defendant is receiver. One cause of action in his bill of complaint is against the Crescent Brewing Company carrying on in Indiana under the laws of which State it was organized, and the other is against the Jung Brewing Company of Ohio. The plaintiff entered into various contracts with the companies mentioned, agreeing to take stock for a valuable consideration. He claims that they violated their contracts, and in one case of action against the Crescent he seeks to recover $20,000 and against the other $77,500.

Fatherland Federation.

For some time past there has been before the Italian societies of New Orleans a project for federation. The leading Italians of the city recognize the fact that combined societies can more readily and more fully protect and advance the interests of the Italian colony in Louisiana, which numbers twenty thousand persons, and they not only endorse the project, but are using every effort to make it successful. The plan is to raise a fund by subscription and dues, to be paid by the societies, to establish an Italian library, Italian schools and preserve to the children of Italian parents, born in this country, the history, customs and traditions of the fatherland.

The Cincinnati Muddle.

A decision was rendered by the Ohio Supreme Court in the case of Reemelin against the Mayor of Cincinnati, to prevent him from appointing a new board of public improvements. The court denied Mr. Reemelin's petition for an injunction. The new board of Cincinnati officers was sworn into office upon receipt of news from Columbus about the action of the Supreme Court. Thomas G. Smith was chosen President. It is said that the members of the abolished board will institute quo warranto proceedings in the Supreme Court.

Sarah Sadler and Uncle Sam.

Sarah Sadler, of St. Louis, is in custody for fraudulently obtaining a government pension of $2,600. She was the widow of a soldier named Vincent E. Dettmore, but forfeited her right to a pension by marrying Nathan Poplin. He died and she married W. J. Sadler. She applied for a pension as widow of Dettmore, and as Sarah Poplin, also Mrs. Sadler, and made affidavits to her identity. She got the money and bought a farm. The government has brought suit to recover the farm.

Peanuts in Peril.

Enough of the Virginia peanut crop has been gathered to furnish the estimate that 3,000,000 bushels will be dug this season. This estimate is so enormous that there has been almost a panic in the peanut market. In Norfolk, which is the largest peanut distributor in the country, the nuts sell as low as ¾ cents per pound. It is rumored that a trust composed of the cleaning factories in the principal cities has been formed and has taken charge of the market.

Crown Lost.

At the recent session of the Dutch Parliament the question regarding the fitness of the King to govern in view of the condition of His Majesty's health was put to vote, in accordance with the section of the constitution providing for declaration by Parliament in the event of the King becoming incapacitated. By a vote of 109 to 5 Parliament declared that His Majesty was incapable of governing. The Council of State has been temporarily invested with legal power.

Buried Alive.

Fred. H. Leider, who took an overdose of morphine at New Philadelphia, O., and was supposed to have died, was buried. His brother who could not go to the funeral came recently and wanted to see his body. When the coffin was opened, it was found that the supposed dead man had been in a stupor and had come to life in the casket. His face was scratched and the glass in the coffin was broken.

Jack the Ripper.

Several women have been found dead in their beds, at Helsingfors, Finland, having been killed by being strangled. The police were for a long time unable to obtain the least clue to the murderer, but the man has at last been found. His name is Haapaoja, and he has been known to the police for many years as a scoundrel of the very worst class.

Dreadful Drowning.

A young son of Frederick Munde, of St. John, N. B., fell from the railroad wharf into the harbor. Frederick Young, 17 years of age, jumped to save him. After keeping Munde up for half an hour, Young's strength gave out and both boys sank and were drowned in sight of a multitude of people.

Down with the Deadly Disease.

Chester, Pa., is greatly excited over the discovery of a case of leprosy. The victim is a Swedish sailor named Anderson, who is said to have been afflicted with that horrible disease for three years. He has been mingling with other persons and it is feared the disease has been communicated to them.

Arrived in America.

John Dillon, M. P., William O'Brien, M. P., and Mrs. O'Brien, J. D. Sullivan, and Mrs. Sullivan, and Timothy Harrington, M. P., and band of Irish patriots arrived in New York on steamer La-Champagne. They were met by a reception committee and given a magnificent reception.

Bismarck as a Brewer.

Prince Bismarck has made arrangements to start a brewery at Friedrichsruhe, Germany. Several Hamburg capitalists are interested in the concern, which will have a capital of 600,000 marks. The financiers will run the brewery for fifty years, paying rent to Bismarck.

The Fire Fiend.

Fire started in Alcock's livery stable at Chillicothe, Illinois, and spread with great rapidity, burning all along Main street and throughont the business portion of the city. The loss will aggregate $200,000. The business portion of the city was destroyed.

Agonizing Death.

At West Sparta, N. C., a number of men were engaged in butchering hogs on a farm. They were making a scald when Charles A. Thompson, losing his balance, fell headlong into a caldron of boiling water. He died after several hours of terrible agony.

Struck Oil.

Oil shot out of the Fisher well, on Island Creek, at Martin's Ferry, Ohio, and went up sixty feet. The well was immediately locked. It will probably yield 300 barrels daily. Operators are trying to gobble up the land and great excitement prevails.

Double Tragedy.

At Columbus, Ohio, Tunis Amack killed Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson and then shot himself dead.

Shot in His Home.

Thomas O. Birdsall, a farmer 50 years of age, who resides near Fostertown, N. Y., was shot by a masked robber Thursday evening as he sat alone in the dining-room of his house.

Torn to Pieces.

Willie Koenig, aged 11 years, fell into the pit of the Lake Shore Railroad turntable, at Fort Wayne, Ind., and was litterly torn to pieces.

Public Debt.

The public debt has decreased $11,500,000 during the past month.

IRISH PATRIOTS ARRIVE

MESSRS. DILLON, O'BRIEN AND OTHERS LAND IN NEW YORK.

They Are Met by a Committee of Irish-Americans and Given a Royal Reception—Purpose of Their Visit to America—Why They Left Ireland in the Manner They Did.

[New York dispatch.]

William O'Brien, John Dillon, Timothy Harrington, and T. D. Sullivan have arrived in New York by the steamer La Champagne. They were met down the bay by a large delegation of Irishmen on board the tugboat John E. Moore, which was chartered by the Irish societies of the city of New York.

Mr. O'Brien in response to congratulations upon his escape from the British authorities in Ireland said Mr. Dillon and himself had been six days on a yacht before they reached France. They were joined at Havre by Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan and Mr. Harrington, who sailed with them. Mr. Sullivan was very enthusiastic at the prospects of home rule for Ireland.

Mr. O'Brien said that out of the forty by-elections held in Great Britain since the assembling of the present Parliament fourteen had been won by the Gladstonian or Home Rule party. This was a fair indication, he said, of the feeling of the British people on the home rule question. He believed the Tories would be forced to dissolve Parliament sooner than they anticipated. The Government, he said, was not taking proper measures for the relief of the famine-stricken districts in Ireland. They first denied that a famine existed, and now they admitted that there was deep distress in the country by proposing measures for their relief.

Mr. O'Brien stated that there was absolute unity in the ranks of the Parliamentary party and among the people. The old taunt of instability of purpose could no longer be thrown at Ireland. It was unnecessary to say much about his and Mr. Dillon's reasons for leaving Ireland in the peculiar manner they did. They were well watched by police and spies, and their footsteps were being continually dogged while in the country. When they took a special train at Limerick the police took another special train in order to keep them continually in sight. The conduct of the police was ludicrous as well as outrageous. Yet they were caught napping. Neither bribes nor threats induced any one to tell the police of their departure, and Balfour's system of espionage was wasted.

"The Government cannot trust its own servants," continued Mr. O'Brien. "Why, on the day before we were arrested Mr. Dillon wrote to me informing me what was going to take place, although it was supposed to be a Castle secret. Balfour may attempt to brand us as criminals, but would he try to have us extradited as such either from France or the United States?

"Balfour has stated his intentions very plainly in a speech in the House of Commons. His object is to strain the tenants' defense fund until he breaks it. Seven thousand persons have been evicted and £60,000 have been spent."

Mr. O'Brien then said that in view of all the circumstances, the condition of the peasantry and the hostility of the Government to any plan that would better their condition, he and his colleagues decided to appeal to the American people and state their appeal in person. They had believed that while the appeal on their trial was pending they would have time to come to this country and return.

"The essence of Tory policy in Ireland," he continued, "is land purchase on the landlords' own terms. To effect this the tenants' combination had to be stamped out. The tenants once smashed and disorganized, under terror of coercion, a cabinet of landlords and landlord tribunals could arrange the rest at will. It was with a view to crushing the tenants' combinations that all the prosecutions, batonings and police outrages took place, and it was to prevent that that the Irish representatives came here.

"The whole strength of coercion for the last four years had been directed to inflicting vengeance upon them and utterly exterminating them by way of warning to the rest of the Irish tenantry. The Irish people, on the other hand, have made these men's cause their own. They have determined at all hazards not to let them fall a prey to the vengeance of the landlords and coercionists. The latest and most signal proof of this determination is the case of New Tipperary, where the population of a whole town and of two neighboring estates had given up their homes and farms en masse rather than let their rents be used by their landlords.

"One of our chief objects in America will be to explain the character of the struggles in Ireland and the system of coercion in force there. I believe Americans will be electrified when they hear the story of Tipperary. For the present the question of a national fighting fund and the question of a charitable fund are wholly separate. Nobody with less than Mr. Balfour's capacity for heartless jokes could affect to deny or make light of it.

"The Irish party are watching the situation with the utmost solicitude. They have called for a bill suspending evictions for non-payment of rent on small holdings in the distressed districts. A measure of this kind combined with a large system of public wishes and a more liberal administration of the poor laws would go far to avert any danger of general famine. The opinion of the Irish party is that any general American fund poured into Ireland at this time would probably have the effect of confirming Mr. Balfour in his policy of leaving the relief of distress to private initiative and afterwards boasting that the distress was imaginary, while the large sums disbursed with an imperfect knowledge of the circumstances of the country would inevitably find their way into the pockets of the landlords, whom the prospect of American alms would encourage to extort rent from their famished and coercion-wronged tenantry."

The Home Truth of a Foreign Proverb.

The Spanish have a proverb—demasiado es peligroso—"too much is dangerous." If "brevity is the soul of wit," this means a great deal. Excesses and other imprudences in eating and drinking are productive of one tremendous evil—the progenitor of many others—and these are among the follies to which this pithy saying has direct application. The evil to which we allude is indigestion, to the relief and cure of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has contributed more than any medicine which science has given to the American people. This invigorating stomachic and corrective is the means not only of reforming a disordered or enfeebled condition of the digestive organs, but of renewing healthy action of the bowels and the liver. Besides this, it counteracts a tendency to rheumatism and kidney complaint, extirpates and prevents malarious disease, is a potent restorative of strength which is failing, hastens convalescence and mitigates the infirmities of age.

DOROTHEA INGRAM.

A Story of Early Colonial Days.

BY CHARLES C. HAHN.

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

The opinion of such a learned physician as Dr. Lennox had its effect upon the court as did also his deductions with regard to Hillary's influence.

Passing on to Dorothea's case, he troced the growing weakness of Achsah, intimated that her disposition was none of the best, and openly stated that he believed she at first willfully deceived her parents in order either to continue to draw attention to herself or to injure Dorothea. The scene in his office was again described and the Doctor, testified that he believed the girl's attack was a cataleptic fit, that he had so treated it, and that she recovered under his treatment. In closing, he gave as his opinion that a sudden shock of electricity might for a time, if not permanently, effect a cure of such a disease.

This matter-of-fact manner of treating the case produced a decided effect upon the magistrates, and one of them seemed inclined to pass over the first charge without consideration. In fact, he arose and began to speak upon the subject, when he was interrupted by Mr. Granville, who, at this unexpected turn seemed to have completely lost his wits.

"Your Excellency," he cried, addressing the Governor who was present, "I beg of you to remember that even if my daughter has been ill, physically, the most damning evidence against the accused has not been answered. I have testified with regard to the letter which was so mysteriously taken from my study table, and my evidence has been corroborated by Squire Allan. Who was it knew that letter was in my possession, and how could he know of it unless he possessed supernatural power? Again, I call to your mind the fact that the mysterious visitor who ever watched over this poor woman has never been known, and that all questions concerning him have been evaded."

The minister would probably have continued for some time, for he was growing impassioned, had not the Governor interrupted him and bade the trial proceed.

Dorothea's counsel immediately called: "Mark Hillary!"

At mention of the name of the man whom he had for years believed to be dead, the minister turned pale. He looked wildly about him over the assembled people and saw a tall man, who, to all outward appearance was an Indian, approach the witness stand, and it required but a glance for them to see that the man was the same who had led the file of Indians to Dorothea's home the evening of her wedding, and who had been loitering about the prison door in Salem during the last week.

Hillary's appearance, as would be expected, created a profound sensation in the court-room. A few questions were put to him by Dorothea's counsel and then he was bidden to tell his history for the past six years.

It was but the statement of what the reader must have already suspected. He had not been shot by Atlee that morning when he was making his way to the sea, but by quickly diving had concealed himself for a moment and floated downward with the current, which was strong at that place. The leaves and a fallen tree had aided him in his concealment when he was obliged to rise to the surface for air. When he was once free from all pursuit, he followed out his first intention and joined a friendly Indian tribe. When so much of his story had been told the rest was plain to those present, and even the most bitter of Dorothea's persecutors felt that they had done wrong and regretted it. If it had not been for that tragedy only a little over a week before, they would have borne her from the court-room in triumph.

Hillary went on. It had never been his intention, he said, to desert his little girl, and so frequently he made trips to Sagnauck and waited about the place until he chanced to meet "his baby," as he called her. Once being unable to see her, he wrote a note and left it in his cabin, knowing that she frequented the old hut. This note was the one the minister found, and subsequently Hillary learned that Dorothea never received it. The night upon which Mr. Granville had opened the note and read it, Hillary was waiting in hopes of seeing his daughter. With bitter feeling in his heart he walked by the minister's house, and, glancing in at the window, saw the latter open his note. Burning with rage, he waited until the piece of birch bark had been laid upon the desk near the window, and then, breaking a pane of glass, he seized it and departed. When Dorothea told him of her approaching marriage he began securing furs, and followed by six Indians, bore her marriage portion to her.

This simple explanation of all the mysteries surrounding Dorothea turned the tide of popular feeling against Mr. Granville, and all at once the fickle multitude remembered that he alone had fostered and brought the charges against the poor girl.

As Hillary was about to leave the stand one of the magistrates bade him stop and asked of him why he had compelled his daughter to keep silent concerning him, especially when that silence had been the cause of bringing upon her the public ignominy, which had resulted in her insanity and the murder of her babe? Hillary anwered;

"I wished to be considered dead by every white man, for I was disgusted with their canting hypocrisy? But I never suspected that my visits would bring so much cruelty to such a sweet girl as Dorothea. I did not know of the whipping until it was over, for yonder reverend gentleman took great pains to announce the trial but one day before it occurred, and to follow the sentence with its execution before an hour had passed. When the deed was once done I might have led the Indians to burn the town, but that would have been my only way of revenge, and I did not care to do that."

Dorothea was then announced to be clear from the charge of witchcraft, and was led back to prison to await the sitting of the magistrates next day, when she would be put on trial for her life for the murder of her babe.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE OLD CHEST.

It will be remembered that when Dr. Lennox removed Dorothea's possessions from her father's cabin he found an old chest which contained a number of papers. These papers the doctor merely glanced at, and finding them to be of a family nature, laid them back for future investigation. But for several weeks he was pressed by professional visits, and the papers passed entirely from his mind. When he did think of them, his interest in them had subsided, and one excuse after another was made for leaving them unexamined. At first he imagined that they would prove of importance to Dorothea, but after a few weeks this idea faded from his mind and with it his interest in them.

So they lay, neglected, until Dorothea was married, when they were turned over to Egbert. To him, also, they proved of no interest or importance, until one day while Dorothea was ill and he had nothing to relieve his long watch over her. Then the thought came to him that in the old chest he might find something to entertain him, and he opened it.

On raising the lid, which had been forced, the doctor having no key to the chest, he found a pile of dusty papers lying on the top of several dresses of fifty years before. The papers were merely deeds and leases, which failed in the slightest degree to interest him, but before he had glanced at half the pile he found that they belonged to a noble family of England, and he began to look at them more closely. His attention was attracted most closely to some old manuscripts, from which he drew out one yellow with age and written in old English letters. It was a patent of nobility granted by James I., by which the title of lord and the rank of baron was given to one Richard W——.

The next paper which Egbert drew out was one dated seventy-five years before, and was a warrant raising Sir R. W., lord of ——, to the rank of earl.

Then followed several copies of deeds and grants of land from the crown to the baron and the earl.

Under these was a paper which bore less of the marks of time than any of the others, and, on opening it, Egbert found it to be a copy of an olden paper made by one Lady Elinor. The paper claimed to be a true copy of a patent granting the honor of dukedom to —— grandson of the first baron of ——, with the title Duke of ——.

The arms of the newly made duke were here given, and the next paper gave a short sketch of the bearer of them and his family. It seemed that his grace, the Duke of Glancy, possessed a large estate, and with a larger generosity than is often found among men of his rank, gave a ruined castle and a tract of land to a younger son. Here a genealogical tree was copied, and the descendants of this second branch of the family were given minutely. This was traced down to a date not more than twenty-five years previous, and the second made was: "Dorothea, only child of Alfred Kenelm, born June 4, 16—."

Only one paper remained in the chest, or rather one bundle tied with a white ribbon. Egbert opened it and drew forth first a statement of the preceding papers. This traced the line of the two branches down to the year 16—, and then stated that the only remaining descendants of the great duke were Henry, Duke of——, and Cecil, a country squire, the last of the descendants of the younger brother of the first Duke of——.

The next paper proved to be a statement in a woman's hand, to the effect that the only daughter of Cecil had been disowned by her father for marrying one Mark Hillary, and inclosed in this document were several letters which bore out the truth of the statement.

Egbert read the papers with care, and then replaced them. He learned from them that his wife was a descendant of the younger branch of the Duke of Glancy's family, and that only one life stood between her and the peerage.

That night Dorothea murdered her babe.

* * * * * * *

The next morning after Dorothea was acquitted of the charge of witchcraft, which had rested over her during her whole life, she was brought into the presence of the Governor and magistrates to plead why she should not suffer the penalty of death for murdering her child. A tide of pity had set in in her favor, but the Puritan law was strict, and it was not expected, even by her counsel, that Dorothea could possibly be acquitted.

The trial was short. Dorothea was placed upon the stand, and when asked about the tragedy she answered in such a vague way that she was dismissed. And it was well, for she could give but an unsatisfactory account of what had occurred on that wild, wet night.

Egbert was called, and testified to what he knew. He had been asleep, but there had been no one in the cabin during the night save himself and his wife.

A few witnesses were called by the defense to prove that Dorothea was insane at the time she committed the crime, but even the most hopeful felt that the evidence would have no effect upon the sentence. She had committed murder, and, no matter whether sane or insane, whether she or the man who drove her insane be the guilty one before God—she had committed the crime, and she alone could expiate it.

CHAPTER XVII.

"IN THE KING'S NAME."

On that dark night of tragedy, when Dorothea Ingram strangled her babe and the minister's house was struck by lightning, a man, unknown to any in the village, had arrived in Sagnauk. He emerged from the woods just as the thunderbolt fell and set the parsonage on fire, and at the same time he saw, or imagined he saw, Hillary's cabin surrounded with a rosy light in which dusky demons danced.

Who this man was, or whence he came, no one knew, and during the hurry of the day none thought to inquire. He himself did not court inquiry, but after a few questions disappeared without bearing the message with which he was laden to the Squire. And in the excitement which followed Dorothea's arrest no one missed him.

Dorothea had been led back to her prison after the trial, and a night of suspense was to be passed before the decision of the Judges would be given. They, with the Governor, retired from the court-room to a private office and were there consulting upon the verdict.

"There is no doubt but that this woman hath killed her child," said one of the Puritan Judges, "and the morning after she was perfectly sane, as numerous witnesses testified."

"But," interrupted one of his colleagues, "who is to say when that insanity ended?

"Did she not appear sane the evening before?"

"Yes," replied the Judge who had interposed in Dorothea's behalf; "she was. But this question of woman's sanity is a difficult one in her case, and I do not feel quite clear that we should adjudge her guilty."

"The Lord is merciful," here interposed the Governor, who before had said nothing. "The Lord is merciful although just, and we should strive to imitate him in mercy as well as justice."

"But she bears the reputation of a witch," urged the first Judge.

"Yea, she bears it. But what may each of us not bear in God's sight. But," he continued, "I am surprised to hear such a remark from you. Has she not been cleared of that charge?"

"Yea, but where there is so much smoke there must be fire."

"You, then, are not willing to judge this poor woman by the evidence. You are not worthy to occupy the position you hold, and I shall take steps to have you removed as soon as possible. Now," said the Governor to the other Judges, "we must consider this case among ourselves, for I will not allow the gentleman who has just spoken to join us. He is prejudiced. This woman was cleared of the first charge—of witchcraft—and in the evidence it was shown that she had undergone long years of persecution—enough to drive any one insane. But, on the other hand, we have had continual evidence of the goodness of her heart. Could such a woman as has been pictured to you to-day kill her own babe? I say no. The only point which is left for us to consider is whether she was sane or not when she committed the crime, for crime it was, however done. She was sane during the day previous, and sane the next morning. Could she have been crazy during the night? Upon this point the case rests. This point"—he added impressively—"could the woman of so many virtues murder her child in cold blood? If the evidence of her goodness is to be believed, she could not. If it is false, we may safely accuse her of murder."

When the Governor ceased there was silence for a moment, no one caring to express an opinion hastily, and while they were hesitating an officer knocked at the door, and, being admitted, stated that there was a special messenger from the Crown who begged to be admitted at once.

The words "The Crown" were an open sesame, and with all haste the Governor and Judges prepared to receive him.

The wanderer of the forest entered

"Your Excellency, Governor of the Commonweath of Massachusetts, and ye, honorable Judges of the State, I come to you with a safe conduct from King George III., by whom I was sent upon a special but secret mission. The affair is important and I beg you to hear me at once."

The messenger from the King was seated with all courtesy, and after mutual salutations was invited to make known his mission.

"To explain what my work in the new world is," he began, "allow me to give you a bit of history. Twenty-five years ago the only daughter of the Lord of Glancy married a man far below her, and together they emigrated to America. She was at once disowned by her family. Recently the old Lord of Glancy died, and his title and estate is left entail to this daughter. The man she married was not a bad man, but one, if I may say it, a little too rough in speech to suit his elders. His name was Hillary, and we have traced him to Boston and then to a little settlement called Sagnauck. I followed my trail to that place and there found Hillary dead, his wife, Lady Glancy dead, and her daughter, Dorothea Ingram, accused of the murder of her own babe. That woman I am in search of is now in your jail. I have in my possession papers from the King demanding the speedy return of Sir Glancy's heirs to England. Innocent or guilty, I demand her in the King's name. Here are my papers."

CHAPTER XVIII.

CONCLUSION.

When the next English ship sailed, Egbert and Dorothea and the King's messenger were on board. The King's name opened all doors and drew back all bars. The Judges, however, before they left the council chamber returned a verdict of not guilty, so that Dorothea was not troubled with the charge when she reached old England.

The village of Sagnauck grew and spread farther into the woods around it. Witches were found in other places, but none there. After a few months Hillary's cabin again had an occupant and Ingram's land was cultivated. But of either Hillary or Ingram the villagers never heard. Such silence was to be expected, but it gave an air of dreaminess to the story which the Sagnauck people told to their children of their first and for that matters only witch. Some of the more dreamy young Puritans would sometimes go out into the meadow, and, looking over the cloud-specked field and out into the clouds in the sky, think of Dorothea. But the number of these was few.

In a castle in England a happy family dwelt. The head of it was Lord Oswald, or the Duke of Glancy, which title he received with his wife's accession of fortune. On state occasions his wife was "the Duchess," but to her wide circle of friends she was "Lady Dorothea," for that less pretentious title suited the New England girl the better.

With them an old man dwelt—a man skilled in woodcraft—a man who was looked up to by his companions because of his honesty and—his relations. It was Mark Hillary. After Dorothea had taken possession of her title and her lands he had given up his Indian life and followed in the next ship.

He still held to his opinions, but in the chaplain of Glancy he met a priest who was at once learned in book lore and possessed of good sense. Once he said to Mark:

"Mark my word, Hillary, the trouble with you is that you never make yourself understood, and you deserve to be hung. You, with an honest man's instincts, have held what the Catholic Church has always held. Had you acted with common sense in England you would never have gone on that wild-goose chase of yours, and had you been less obstinate, and told folks just what you meant, I believe you would not have been so badly treated in America——"

"You do not know them," interrupted Mark. "I believe they would have done the same had St. Michael and all the archangels been in my place."

"Possibly," said the priest. "Still," he continued, "I cannot conceive of intelligent men convicting on the charges they did."

"But about the poem?"

"That was a work of fantasy. Let the literature of the coming age decide where it shall be placed."

The Rev. Henry Granville never fully believed that Dorothea was not a witch, and to the last day of his life was heard expressing his opinion that it was strange his daughter should have recovered on "that wild, wet night." His former health, however, recovered when his child's strange malady left her, and in after years he became a prominent clergyman of the colonies. It was even said that he preached more of mercy and less of justice as he grew older.

Long years after the trial in Sagnauck, a white-sailed ship anchored in the bay at Boston. It bore in its bosom the Duke and the Duchess of Glancy. They stopped for but a night in the city, and then traveled on to Sagnauck. They could not remain in the new world, because greater claims held them to old England. But when they returned to their castle they left a son in the new world, and from him has descended the family of New England Glancys.

[THE END.]

WISE SAYINGS.

Cain has a good many full brothers in every church on earth.

It takes mighty good eyesight to see the devil through a wall of money.

It is well to hope for success, but it is better to determine to deserve it.

To be a jack of all trades is one of the easiest ways in the world to be nothing.

Religion that doesn't go clear through a man don't cause the devil much uneasiness.

When you want to see the person most to blame for your misfortunes gaze into the looking-glass.

The woman who don't care much what she says is apt to be overly particular about what she wears.

If you are not making the world better, it will be worse for your having lived. No man can leave the world as he found it.

An old colored man said he could talk more religion in five minutes than he could live in two weeks, no matter how hard he tried. The old man has lots of company.—Ram's Horn.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

A Grievous Complaint.

"It's hard on a fellow, I do declare!"
Said Tommy one day, with a pout;
"In every one of the suits I wear
The pockets are 'most worn out.
They're 'bout as big as the ear of a mole,
And I never have more than three;
And there's always coming a mean little hole
That loses my knife for me.

"I can't make 'em hold but a few little things—
Some cookies, an apple or two,
A knife and pencil and bunch of strings,
Some nails, and maybe a screw,
And marbles, of course, and a top and ball,
And shells and pebbles and such,
And some odds and ends, yes, honest, that's all;
You may see for yourself 'tisn't much.

"I'd like a suit of some patent kind,
With pockets made wide and long;
Above and below and before and behind,
Sewed extra heavy and strong.
I'd want about a dozen or so,
All easy and quick to get at;
And I shall be perfectly happy, I know,
With a handy rig like that."

—St. Nicholas.

Birgalie.

He is a saucy little red-bird, who finds his chief pleasure in eating, singing, fighting his mistress and tearing whatever paper he may chance to get hold of into pieces—in fact, he is never so happy as when in mischief. His personal appearance is not much in his favor. His head, with his black face, pink beak, two sharp little eyes, and short "toppy" or topknot, is stuck on a little round, red body about the shape of an apple-dumpling; and this body is supported by a pair of delicate-looking feet, which are continually carrying their owner to places where he has no business to be. A stubby and battered tail, with wings to match, complete the description.

But he is not ashamed of his looks; oh, no; not a bit of it! On the contrary, he appears to think that no one has as fine a coat or as pretty a topknot as Master Birgalie, and, consequently, is very vain of them, making his toilet three or four times a day, and more frequently if he gets the chance. And it is fortunate for his mistress that he does so, for it takes up some of his time, and when not engaged in that, or the equally pleasant occupation of eating and singing, he is certain to be doing something that he should not do.

He is very fond of bathing, and this fondness has not been acquired lately, either, for when Birgalie was a youngster—which was but one short year ago—he thought nothing greater fun than to hop into a dish of water, and there kick and splash until not only he himself but also everything about him was completely drenched.

But not being allowed to bathe as often as he wished, he frequently got into trouble by attempting to steal a bath in liquids that were not intended for that purpose.

One day, aunty came in and found him seated in a cup of oatmeal and water (one of his favorite dishes) and just having a glorious time. But aunty brought his enjoyment to a speedy end, and it took many a washing in pure water to make Birgalie's feather's as soft and smooth as they were before he starched them in oatmeal starch.

Another time he hopped into a big cup of warm coffee, but lost no time in scrambling out again.

After bathing, Birgalie often took it into his little head to try and fly up to the stove pipe, for the purpose of drying himself there. So he would nerve himself for the attempt, spread his wings, and give a grand hop; but that was all he did do, for as his wings were wet he always landed on the floor in a very humiliating manner. Then he would graciously permit us to pack him up in a little basket, and set him out in the sun or under the stove to dry.

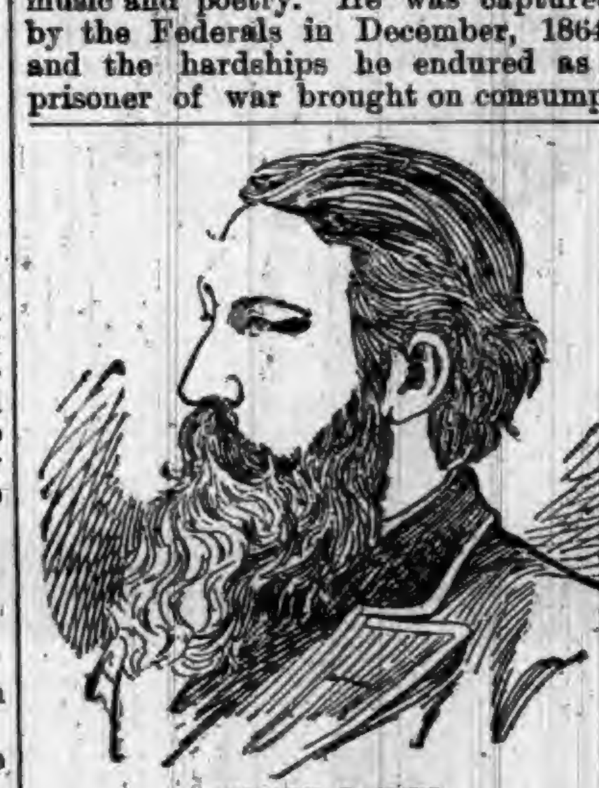
All this sort of thing happened while Birgalie was a youngster, and, of course, not as wise and well-behaved as he is at present. Now when fresh water is given to him in his bath-tub he first sticks in one little foot and draws it out again, and then repeats the operation with the other, after which he hops in with both feet and proceeds to business.

But, as I've no doubt there are a number of you waiting to tell about your clever cats and dogs, chickens, horses, goats, and other animals, I will stop here and reserve the account of the remainder of Birgalie's cunning tricks for some future time.—Detroit Free Press.

HONORING A GREAT POET.

A Bust of Sidney Lanier Unveiled at Macon, Ga.

The bust of Sidney Lanier, the distinguished Southern poet, given to the city of Macon by his brother, Charles Lanier, was unveiled in that city recently. The ceremony was attended by a large concourse of people, to whom the name of the dead poet is a household word. Sidney Lanier was but thirty-nine years of age when he died in 1881. He had enlisted in the Southern army at the breaking out of the war, and all through the campaigns in which he took part he occupied his leisure hours in the study of languages, music and poetry. He was captured by the Federals in December, 1864, and the hardships he endured as a prisoner of war brought on consumption, of which he ultimately died. Many of his poems are worthy of a place among the classics, both because of their metrical perfection and the wealth of their imagery.



SIDNEY LANIER.

A Tooth Sold for $3,500.

The hat worn by Napoleon at Eylau was sold in Paris in 1835 for $400. The coat worn by Charles XII. at the battle of Pultowa brought over $100,000. A wig that once belonged to Sterne, the great English writer, was sold at public auction at London a few years ago for $1,050. In 1816 a tooth of Sir Isaac Newton was purchased by a nobleman for $3,650. The buyer had a costly diamond removed from his favorite ring and the tooth set in its place.

DEMOCRATIC!

Our Landslide!

The Elections go in Favor of the Democracy and Lower Tariff Everywhere!

INDIANA GIVES ABOUT 10,000 MAJORITY!

We get both Houses of the Legislature, insuring the return of Voorhees to the Senate.

Indications are that Illinois, Iowa, and even Massachusets have gone democratic, as well as several other strongholds.

We elect a governor in Nebraska, gain five congressmen in Massachusetts and get the governor, gain several congressmen in Iowa; great gains everywhere; both sides claim Michigan and Wisconsin; democrats will have about fifty majority in the next congress.

THE King of Holland will probably retire soon on account of continued ill health. This change may affect his little Kingdom seriously.

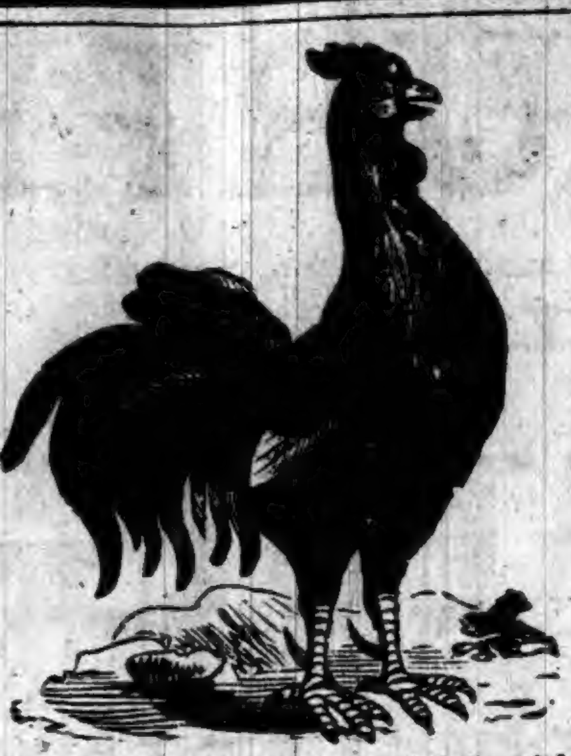
MEXICO has begun to pay us for the McKinley bill. She has placed an import duty or tariff, of $500 on each car of American cattle taken into that country.

JUDGE MCCLELLAN has telegrams stating that Noble county elects the entire democratic ticket, by about 200, and LaGrange has cut down the republican majority to less than 450. Allen county goes 4,500 democratic, Whitley 350, Steuben about 500 republican. The democrats held a big jollification in Ft. Wayne Friday evening. McClellan's total majority is over 4,000, the greatest ever given in the district.

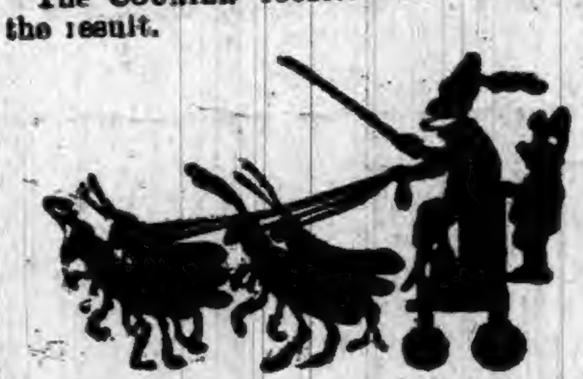
FRANCE is trying to get rid of the old titled nobility, by taxing their titles to death. A recent dispatch says: "Deputy Moreau's bill looking to the entire abolition of titles in France by taxing them heavily proposes an annual impost, thus graded: For the prefix "De," 500 francs; for the title of "baron," 5,000 francs; "vicomte," 10,000; "comte," 20,000; "marquis," 30,000; "duke," 50,000; "prince," 100,000; "duke" or "count," with the prefix "highness," 200,000; "prince," with the same prefix, 250,000.

Will Go Right On.

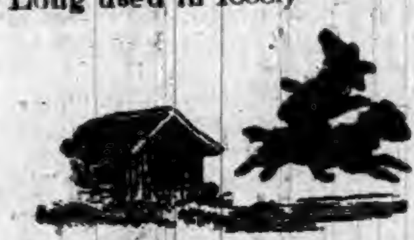
We write this on Saturday, Nov. 1, on the eve of an important election and at a time when no one can foresee just how that election will go. But it makes no difference with the course of the COURIER in one regard at least. A majority of the votes may be cast in favor of the party that believes in a high tariff, or for the party that advocates a low one. But the principle for which we have always fought remains the same. We are for low tariff, yesterday, to-day and forever, and shall go right on making a square and manly fight for what we know to be right. We do not say what we believe to be right, but what we "know." An unnecessary tax is an unjust tax, and everybody "knows" that. A tariff higher than needed to get the money the government must have to use, is unnecessary and unjust. And any tariff levied for the purpose of mere "protection" is unjust and is a robbery of one man for the purpose of enriching another. It is giving one man the best end of every bargain, by making a law in his favor and against his neighbor. No nation has a right to make such a law. It is against every principle fought for and contended for by the fathers of this republic. It is class legislation, and is foreign from the character and nature of free institutions and a republican form of government, as the government our fathers established is different from the despotism of Russia and Turkey. If the republicans carry every state, it will not make legalized robbery right, and we shall still oppose it. We shall, as heretofore, expose its trickery and its wrong. We shall expose the fallacy and double dealing of those who try to defend it, if any there be. We shall keep our readers informed as far as we possibly can, of every circumstance that connects the law that robs them, with any political party that condones the robbery. We shall go on preaching the true doctrine, that "the tariff is a tax paid by the consumer." Its object is to raise the price of the article affected, and no amount of votes in its favor will change its nature. We hope to see the people rise in the strength of their intelligence, and put the seal of their displeasure on this enormous wrong on Tuesday of next week. If they do this, we shall feel prouder of them and of our country, for it will show that intelligence and independent thought are still with our people. We await the result, so far, with anxiety to see the right prevail. But let the result be what it may, the COURIER will be consistent to itself and faithful to its convictions, and the fight for low tariff and the rights of the common people will go right on.



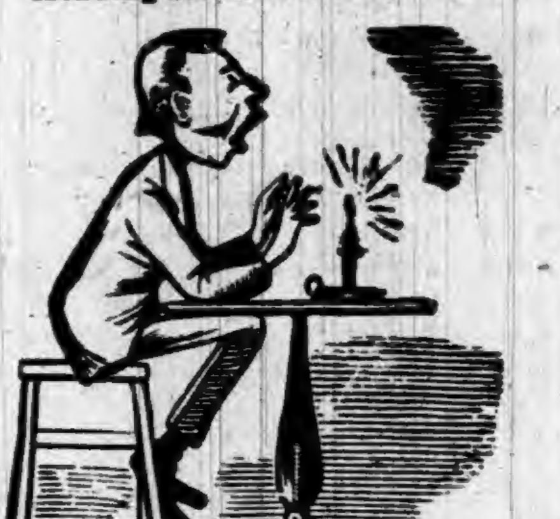
The COURIER rooster satisfied with the result.



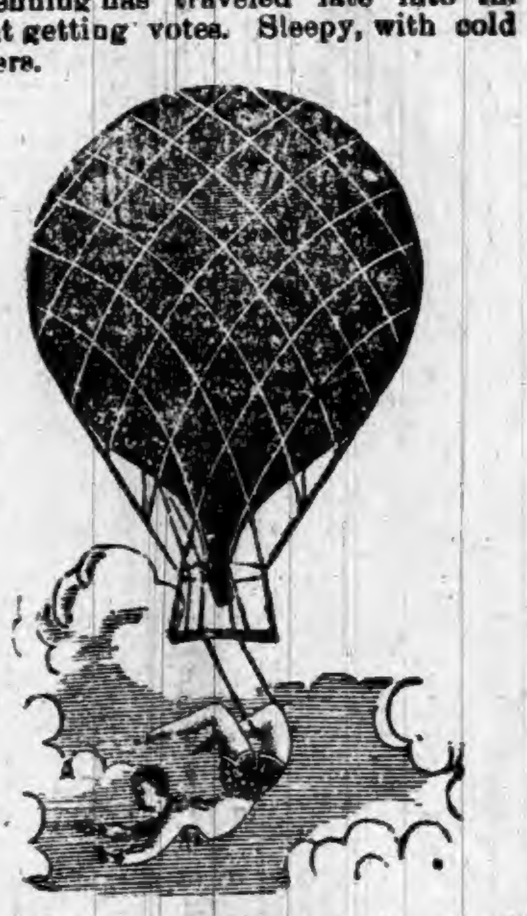
Diehl coming in on the home stretch to get ahead of Hook. (Same outfit that Mike Long used in 1888.)



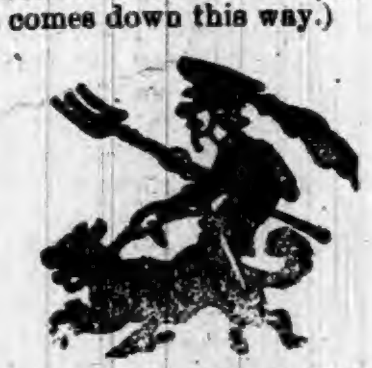
Henning starts out after votes.



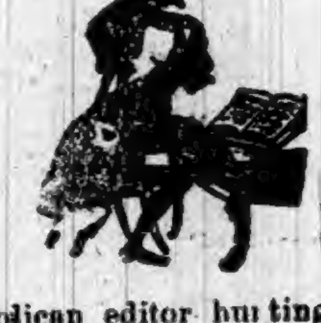
Henning has traveled late into the night getting votes. Sleepy, with cold fingers.



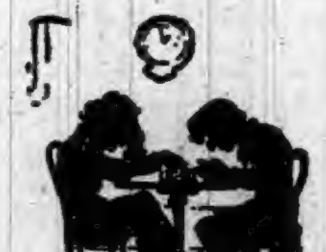
Lackey having been up in the clouds a few weeks comes down. (He says he always comes down this way.)



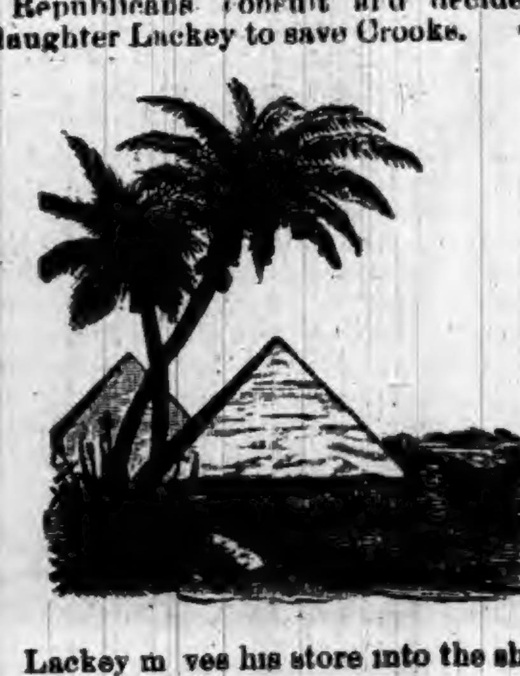
The Dispatch starts out with its little dung fork to throw filth and bedaub democratic candidates.



Republican editor hunting for diamonds.

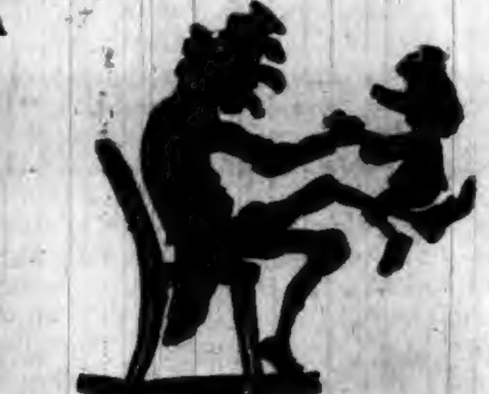


Republicans consult and decide to slaughter Lackey to save Crooks.

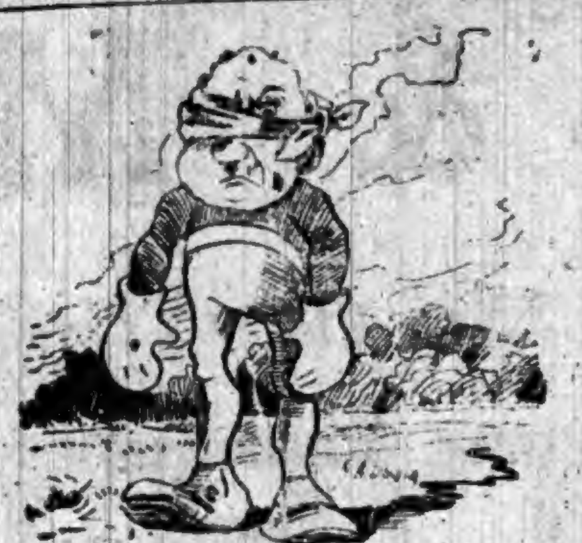


Lackey moves his store into the shade of the pyramids.

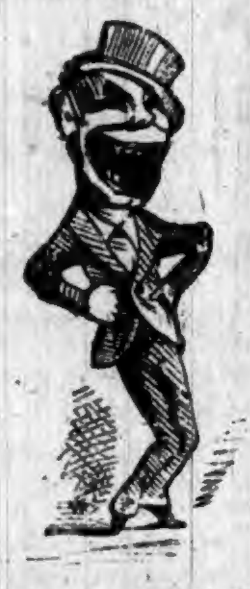
Big bouquet donated to the COURIER office by the grateful democrats of De Kalb county.



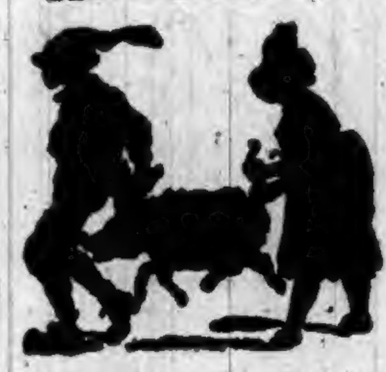
Ab. Kelley dandles Bro. Chiesman.



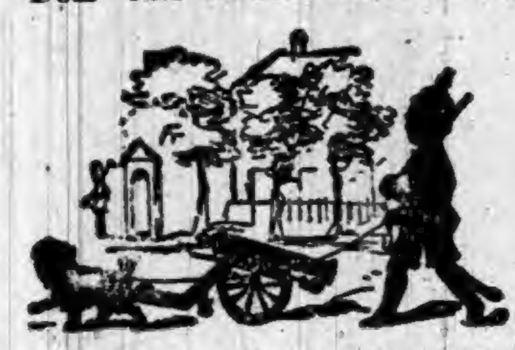
Chiesman badly disfigured, but still in the ring.



This is Ab. Kelley.



Democrats take the whole hog.



Finding the COURIER'S guns too heavy, the republican forces retreat into Wilmington township Coming Farmers' Institutes in DeKalb, Steuben and Noble Counties.

EDITOR OF THE COURIER.—The law making provision for the holding of farmers' institutes in every county in the state, placed their management with the state agricultural college at Purdue. The selection of Prof. W. C. Latta as superintendent of the institute work has given perfect satisfaction to all of the 50 counties where institutes were held between Nov. 1, 1889, and April 1, 1890, and insures the remaining 42 counties successful institutes, to be held between Nov. 1, 1890 and April 1, 1891. Prof. Latta asked the co-operation and assistance of the members of the state board of agriculture in helping him to carry on the work in their several districts. I am asked by him to take charge of the management for holding farmers' institutes in this, the 16th district, at the dates and places following, commencing at Angola on Monday, December 1, at 2, p. m., with an evening session from 7 to 10 o'clock, and on Tuesday we will hold three sessions, morning, 9 to 12 o'clock, afternoon, 2 to 5 and evening, 7 to 10, p. m.; at Auburn Wednesday, December 3, three sessions and on Thursday two sessions, same hours as at Angola. Prof. Latta will be present at these meetings, and will be ably assisted by prominent institute workers. We want it distinctly understood that these are not local institutes, but county institutes, in which every man, woman and child in the county should have an interest, and a hearty invitation is extended to one and all to come out and help make them grand successes. I ask the secretaries of the different agricultural societies in these three counties to aid me in securing the services of their own home people in preparing addresses on some subject (to be chosen by themselves) to be delivered at the institute.

Respectfully,
R. M. LOCKHART.

The First Big Tree.

[Gen. Bidwell's Article in November Century.]

Just at dark I came to an enormous fallen tree and tried to go around the top, but the place was too brushy, so I went around the butt, which seemed to me to be about twenty or twenty-five feet above my head. This I suppose to have been one of the fallen trees in the Calaveras Grove of Sequoia gigantea or mammoth trees, as I have since been there, and to my own satisfaction identified the lay of the land and the tree. Hence I concluded that I must have been the first white man who ever saw the Sequoia gigantea [in 1841] of which I told Fremont when he came to California in 1844.

All who have business with D. Z. Hoffman, and all who have real estate to sell, or parties wanting abstracts, deeds or mortgages made, call at my office over Farmers Bank, first door at the right, on the second floor. D. Z. Hoffman.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Robbins & McCord. tf

The Dispatch rejoices that English manufacturers are going to bring their men over here to help us eat up our surplus provisions. But these men will take the place, and do the work of so many American laborers. That is the way protection works on the laborer. It gives him no increase of wages, but finally reduces wages, and at last takes away his whole job.

Harper's Young People will enter upon its twelfth volume with the number to be published November 4th. Among the attractions announced for the new volume are serial stories by Sophie Swett, Howard Pile, and others; "Travel Notes" by Sophie B. Herrick; a series of articles on our principal colleges written by recent graduates; and a tempting variety of short stories and practical articles.

The National Democrat which was established in Washington one year ago by Edmund Hudson, with the indorsement of many of the great leaders of the party, has entered upon its second year with a circulation of 40,000 each week. This is perhaps the largest circulation ever attained by a weekly newspaper during the first year of its existence. The National Democrat occupies a field of its own, and one that too long remained unfilled. It gives a complete record of political information, including the most important speeches that are delivered by democratic leaders in Congress and on the stump. It is rendering the party an important service, and should be read by all who wish to keep fully informed in regard to public affairs and who mean to defeat the wicked scheme of the republican leaders to secure permanent control of the Government, in spite of the fact that they are, and must remain, the minority party in this country.

Success in life is the result of push and energy. If the blood is impure and sluggish, both body and mind lack vigor. To cleanse and vitalize the blood and impart new life to the system, nothing else has such a marvelous effect as Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

English Spavin Liniment removes all hard, soft, or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavin, curbs, splints, sweeny, ring-bone, stifles, all swollen throats, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle, warranted. The most wonderful blemish cure known. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Indiana. tf

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immdiately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn.

Goshen Democrat; Miss Harriet Colfax, a cousin of the late vice-President Colfax, has for nearly thirty years been keeper of the light house at Michigan City, one of the most important beacons on Lake Michigan. During these years Miss Anna Hartwell has been her companion and helper, and an unfailing affection has grown up between these isolated workers.

The West Alexandria, Ohio, Times, says that the boundary line between Ohio and Indiana is in a dispute again. It is claimed that if the line is put where it properly belongs, a strip of land six to eight miles wide and 200 miles long will be added to Ohio. Many residents along the line are in doubt as to whether they are Buckeyes or Hoosiers.

The Church Furniture Company has added a new and interesting feature to its business, in the line of a good bell, which serves the purpose of telling the large corps of employes when to begin work and when to stop. It is neatly arranged on a platform fixed to the roof at one end of the main building. Each morning, its sonorous tones peal forth on the clear air with startling distinctness.

The new volume of St. Nicholas, it is announced, contains a number of serials by prominent writers for the young. J. T. Towbridge, author of "The Tinkham brother, Tide Mill," a continued story of great interest and lasting popularity among boy readers of St. Nicholas, and their sisters will contribute a long serial entitled, "The Fortunes of Toby Trafford"; and Noah Brooks, whose exciting book, "The Boy Emigrants," is well remembered, will write a similar and yet different serial, "The Boy Settlers," the scene of which is the territory of Kansas during the border troubles. Both of these stories begin in the November number and are full of wholesome interest.

Wash Askew is the father of the nicest little girl in town. Mother and baby doing well.

Rolla Tefft was back last week for a visit of a day or so with his parents. He had been east on a business trip, so he reports.

Harry Henry was home over Sunday and took a short trip to Albion Monday. He is at present located at South Whitley.

Geo. Patterson returned to Auburn last Monday to see his many friends and to vote. He has been in Ohio for the past five months.

The sale of tile advertised by Miller & Forsythe of Jackson township, in last week's COURIER has been withdrawn. So the sale will not take place.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McDowell returned to Auburn last Monday evening, after a wedding trip of two weeks spent in viewing the sights of Chicago.

There was an unusually large number of teams hitched about the public square and other places Saturday. It looked a little like a convention.

The L. L. C. will meet with Mrs. Priscilla Zimmerman next Saturday. A full attendance is desired, for a vote is to be taken in regard to next year's work.

Read the letter of Bam Swart, the Rambler, which is continued this week. It abounds in strong descriptive passages about the places he has visited.

Falling of the hair is the result of inaction of the glands or roots of the hair, or a morbid state of the scalp, which may be cured by Hall's Hair Renewer.

Nice clean office at the Palace barn where ladies can wait when ordering carriages. No loafers or offensive language allowed. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 42-45

The commissioners' districts of this county would be as well remembered, perhaps by their proper numbers. The north district is No. 1; the southwest is No. 2, and the southeast is No. 3.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

Mrs. Wayne Zooker of Fairfield and her sister Mrs. Chris Ashelman of this place, honored the COURIER office with a call last week. We are glad the COURIER has so many friends among the democratic ladies of the county.

Mrs. G. H. Yesbera, Mrs. Lizzie Kelley and Mrs. J. A. Barns went to Albion last Friday and returned Monday evening. They report a splendid visit with the families of J. J. Martin, Ezra Shaffer, Chas. Clapp, Richard Stone, E. S. Fitch and others.

Treutman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

It was once supposed that scrofula could not be eradicated from the system; but the marvelous results produced by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla disprove this theory. The reason is, this medicine is the most powerful blood-purifier ever discovered.

S. A. Shaffer, of Knoxville, Iowa, sends us the Knoxville Express with a graphic account of Marion county's great display at the Ottumwa Coal Palace Exhibition. They have fine building stone and coal, besides being a good country for farming.

F. P. Engle, one of Noble county's enterprising young men, moved here some weeks ago, and will make Auburn his future abiding place. He had faith enough in our little city to buy property here some time ago, and is there thoroughly connected with our interests.

MILES' NERVE & LIVER PILLS. Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequaled for men, women, and children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 30 doses, 25 cts. Samples free at F. E. Davenport's.

In this week's chapter of "Auburn and Vicinity," the writer speaks of the sale of lots 68, 71, 25 and 89. Number 68 is where Shaffer's D. J. Swarts' and Robbins & McCord's stores are; 71 is Chris Ashelman's corner, and 25 is the lot next west of him; 89 is where the Auburn House now stands. Prices on these lots are somewhat different now.

Wm. McOscar, a former Smithfield boy called up to talk over the old times with the editor of this paper last week. He is now located at Salem, Oregon, and is a bridge contractor on railways, etc. He is as full of life as ever, and evidently prospering. He is chock full of news and information about that far off state. He has also handled windmills out there, and was here to look over the mills made by Auburn Companies.

Mrs. W. H. Kiblinger went to Washington, D. C. last week, accompanying Mrs. Guy Plumb, when the latter went home. They had a very vexatious experience, as several delays occurred. They were laid off at several points by two different freight wrecks on the road ahead of them, and as these delays were at points where no provisions could be had, they had to go hungry, much to the annoyance and disgust of little Katie who was with them. They left here on the B & O. evening train, and did not get to a place where refreshments could be had till about noon next day. They got through in safety, however. Mrs K. has a sister residing in Washington.

Dr. S. B. Johnson, dentist, will be in his office at Waterloo on Thursday of each week.

Some of our correspondence were crowded out, but will appear next week.

Rev. J. W. Stringfellow preached a powerful sermon to a large and deeply interested audience, Sunday evening.

John Barney, Fayette, Ohio, is one of the many friends who remembered the COURIER in a substantial way last week.

Lewis Tess is building an addition to his residence on South VanBuren street which will add greatly to Mr. T's comfort and improve the appearance of that locality.

The two Italian Counts were here again last week with their harps and music. They lead a sort of wandering life, apparently, but they seem to be prospering.

The nickel social of the Presbyterian church will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Ober on North Jackson street, Friday afternoon Nov. 7. A full attendance is desired.

The inspectors of the thirty-six election precincts of this county, came in Saturday and got their shares of the big ballots for the state and the county. It made lively times.

A light snow whitened the ground last Friday morning, but went right off. Farther west, at Laporte and South Bend, there was a heavier fall of snow, at places three to four inches.

Wm. F. Till of Smithfield added to our collection of scientific specimens Saturday. They are fossils of a character we never saw before, and probably came from some depth in the earth.

Taxpaying closed Monday evening. We are told that an unusual amount has been paid in this year, that is, the collections are nearer complete at the expiration of the time, than is generally the case.

Ayer's Pills being convenient, efficacious, and safe, are the best cathartic, whether on land or sea, in city or country. For constipation, sick headache, indigestion, and torpid liver, they never fail. Try a box of them; they are sugar-coated.

Emerson Salyer has been trying his proficiency in the tonsorial parlors of the "south side" barber, for a few days. Mr. Salyer is a good artist, and his manipulation of the "blade and strop" indicates that his profession has been carefully studied.

Our wide-awake itemizer, at Fengler's Corners, came promptly to the front this week with the "latest" from his "district." That is right! We are glad to hear from our friends all over the country, and hope to see a display of "items" from that point each week.

Mrs. Bottenberg, of Monmouth, Ind.; died at the residence of her son in this place, Friday, of spinal meningitis. She had come here on a visit, but was taken sick soon after. Her remains were taken back home by her son on Friday, and the interment took place Sunday.

Not a day passes, but one or more wagons are loaded with a stove or two at the popular Kiblinger hardware store. We believe he leads all others in prices, and the amount of goods he sells. There is no article in the line of hardware, but he can furnish and he does so at best prices.

J. M. Rhodes has recently moved up here from Newville, and will make this his home. He has been employed at the Auburn Foundry and Machine Works for some time, and of course found it more convenient to settle down here. Industrious men are what we always welcome here. Who'll be the next to come?

Our jolly old friend Henry A. Shull, was here Saturday. He walks a little lame on his right arm, and so would not be a very good candidate just now as far as hand shaking is concerned. He got a little too hasty about feeding the cows, the other morning, and tripped on the floor, falling heavily. It was fortunate he was hurt no worse.

The Methodist ladies will give a dinner in the parlor of their church Thanksgiving day consisting of an excellent meal, served in four courses. Small tables will be arranged so as to accomodate one family at a table, or yourself or guests, or as many as you like. So that you can bring your friends and entertain them as nicely as though in your own home, besides a good meal at little expense, and helping a good cause. Mite, adults, 50 cents; children, 25 cents. Bill of fare in next week's paper, look at it for it will interest you. Mrs. Josie Brown. Sec'y.

Several of our local republican papers have been for weeks scolding democratic papers for sending out supplements, which they claim do not conform to the law, not having the name of the paper, date etc. But any number of our republican exchanges came up last week, with a big supplement about 'Geronimo and his Band, etc.," and not a word of date or name of paper. And the Butler Record, went still farther and sent out the green sample ticket. It was the greenest supplement we have seen yet, and its only redeeming feature, was correct spelling of the word "supplement" so generally misspelled by our republican contemporaries.

Senator Turpie's speech at Waterloo was fairly well attended, though the day was unplesant and stormy. He never spoke in this section before, but he won golden opinions by his clear logical, and concise statements. He is not as flowery in speech as he was in his younger days, when we had the pleasure of hearing him and Schuyler Colfax hold joint discussions in their famous races for congress. But he is just as strong. His arguments are plain and scholarly, right to the point and every part so put together that no weak place is found. He has the ability to make everything so plain, that it cannot be misunderstand. His hearers were more than pleased.

Gas Addition keeps improving.

Mr. Lamport and family spent Sunday with relatives at Bristol.

Mrs. Stevens and son Harold spent several days at Goshen visiting friends.

Pearl Kelley is visiting her cousin Herbie Martin and other little friends at Albion this week.

M. W. Johnston, of Indianapolis, came home Saturday to spend Sunday with his parents and deposit his vote.

Geo. Grund was called to Ft. Wayne Tuesday to attend the funeral of a nephew who died in that city the day before.

Mrs. Hull, of Wauseon, O., visited Mrs. Dr. Johnston over Sabbath. They were old friends and school mates together.

Charles McClellan, jr. came home Saturday, to remain a few days and be present to give the democrats a lift at the election.

O. J. Schwartz, our popular clothing merchant is to be married to-day to Miss Kitson, of Ligonier. The COURIER extends congratulations and a welcome to our town.

Willis Aten one of the enterprising young men of Newville township is among the new subscribers to the COURIER. A very proper course for a young man to take.

The W. R. C. will entertain the nickel social at the residence of Mrs. Rakestraw on Tuesday afternoon, November 11th, from 2 till 5 p. m. All are cordially invited. Alice Stafford, Sec'y.

Phillip High of Fairfield was in town Saturday and gave us a big lift. He seldom gets here, being kept busy in the threshing and hulling business, which he has followed continuously for seventeen years.

An experience social will be held at the M. E. church Friday evening, Nov. 14, at which over a hundred ladies will relate the manner in which they earned a dollar for the new church. Admittance 10 cents. There will also be music.

The consciousness of having a remedy at hand for croup, pneumonia, sore throat, and sudden colds, is very consoling to a parent. With a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, one feels, in such cases, a sense of security nothing else can give.

The C L S C will meet next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Dills. Program: "Outline History of England," Mrs. Moody; "Our English," Miss Ramsey; "The Tenure of Land in England," Mrs. Moss; "The Silver Bill," Miss Davis; Select Reading, Mrs. Dills.

Tom Hallam our city bill poster has a novel card for advertising his business. In fact, he "drops into poetry" after this fashion:

> Thomas Hallam, and no other,
> Goes forth in haste,
> With bills and paste,
> And proclaims to all creation,
> That men are wise,
> Who advertise,
> In the present generation.

Hicksville News: Our neighboring city of Ft. Wayne has, it seems, some very smart school children. In reading an obituary of his own composition a a fourteen-year-old schoolboy suggested the following epitaph to be inscribed upon the headstone marking his uncle's grave: "Beneath these stones lie the bones of George Washington Grim; He took his beer from year to year, until his bier took him.

Hicksville Independent: Last Friday morning, Robert Atten brought to town a valuable cow to be delivered to Ainsworth; Simmons & Culler at the stock yard. Just as he got near the place of delivery, at the B. & O., elevator, the cow broke loose and ran down the railroad track. At this juncture, train No. 5, due here at 6:15 a. m., came through at a speed of forty miles an hour and struck the cow killing her instantly. Considerable controversy has been excited as to whose cow it was at the time of the accident.

Send items of interest to the COURIER. Many of our patrons have a knowledge of good items, that ought to find their way into print, but do not, and are therefore never known. It is but a little trouble or expense to put them into a letter and send in. We want items of news, but not any that reflect on anyone personally so as to offend. Such would lead to quarrels. The items we want, would not. Lately we have had a number of good little personals dropped into the office at Auburn with a one cent stamp. In this way we are sure to get it. If we have the facts, we can easily put them in shape. Send in all good items to the COURIER.

More Pension and Bounty.

A gentleman representing Milo B. Stevens & Co., of Washington, D. C., and Cleveland, Ohio, can be seen at the Swineford House, Auburn, Friday, Nov. 14, and at the Rose House, Garrett, Saturday, Nov. 15, by persons desiring information concerning pensions, bounties, etc, or having claims which they desire to have prosecuted by said attorneys.

Notice.

Having purchased the meat market of John McMillen on the east side of Main street, south of the National Bank, Auburn, Ind., I am now prepared to supply all kinds of fresh, smoked and pickled meats and everything in the line of a first-class meat market at lowest possible prices. Mr. McMillen will remain in my employ in the business and will be pleased to continue waiting upon his old customers. Highest market prices paid for hides, pelts, etc.

LEWIS ECK. 43 45

Poultry.

10 000 pounds of poultry wanted at once at the Palace meat market. I am now prepared to buy all kinds of poultry for which I will pay the highest market price during the season.

B. C. ZEIGLER,
Auburn, Ind. 40tf

Egbert Hodge was home over Sunday to visit his home and also to put in his vote.

F. M. Lands, the photographer, will return to Garrett, we believe. He has made many friends while here.

L. J. Gengler and his son Peter A. Gengler of Garrett, and Ex-Commissioner B. F. Blair of Newville were among the democrats who called up to rejoice with the COURIER yesterday over its great victory.

There will be a democratic jollification meeting at Taylor's Corners in Franklin township on Friday evening of this week, speeches will be made by C. P. Hammon, Reuben Sawvel and others. All come and have a happy time.

The Auburn made stoves can be seen in the old Bowman room next south of Davis' hardware store among the many stoves of foreign make displayed there. They compare favorably with any of them. There are two heating and two cook stoves. Go and see them.

Court waited over the election and now begins again. Last week when we went to press, the jury were out on the case of the state vs Williams and Benner, they finally agreed, giving both men five years at Michigan City on a charge of keeping a little girl locked in in their room several days.

Maxwell & Ford is the name of the new firm that has opened out the new feed and flour store in the Bauer building across from Ed. Baker's on West Seventh street. They will keep the best flour, feed, etc., and ask the people to give them a share of the trade. Both are well known, and reliable men and deserve patronage.

The best entertainment of its kind ever given here was by the Weber Concert Co. It has never been equaled here, but we are sorry to say there was a slim attendance. The Opera House owners had given a guarantee, and of course, they lost money on it. Such fine singing and instrumental music deserved a full house. Every member both old and young is an artist of rare ability. They will be here again soon we are told.

The new rooms to be occupied as the reading rooms are now rapidly nearing completion and the board of managers are making all arrangements to occupy them as soon as done and earnestly request that all who have promised to assist the enterprise and that all who may now feel like doing so will come promptly forward. The board is in urgent need of funds to properly furnish the rooms, procure the necessary literature, etc., and start the enterprise in good shape.

B. C. Robbins and Hortense Culbertson were married at the home of the bride's mother on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock by Rev. H. M. Lamport. Only a few intimate friends and the members of the families were present. Miss Eva Ensley of Indianapolis and Frank Eckuart assisted as best man and bridesmaid. The contracting parties are among our leading society young people, and they have the heartiest congratulations of the COURIER and best wishes for a life long happiness.

It pays to advertise in the COURIER as we have often said. Last week our old friend John Nelson of Newville township lost his gold headed cane and of course, came up and stated his loss to us. We put a note in the COURIER describing this cane. Fred Bauer, Ed. Baker's good natured baker found the cane and on reading the note in the COURIER called our attention to it. He found it lying on the counter, and but for the fact that he read the COURIER, would not have known whose it was. Fred. is an honest young man and is glad to be able to restore to Mr. Nelson the keepsake he prizes so much.

The following is a list of marriage licenses issued in DeKalb county for the month of October, 1890:
Oliver P. Gregg and May Frantz; John Clyde Oberlin and Mary Jane Brunkhort; John A. Dilman and Harriet Gettings; James G. Collis and Cora P. Martin; William Waters and Ellen Roberts; Delbert Hall and Carrie Bodine; Henry Lockwood and Dessie Silvers; Newton S. Squires and Christina Wagner; Amos E. Kunderd and Louise C. Shutt; Olmon Bowman and Mary Ellen Luttman; Norman Donaldson and Lida Reed; William Burtefield and Nancy J. Evans; J. K. Johnston and Lettie D. Kinmont; John L. Evans and Effie A. Reyher; William P. Sanders and Celestie Greenwalt; Charles A. Greenawald and Elizabeth Garber; Edward S. Huffman and Ettie M. McKarnes; J. Frank McDowell and Ina M. Tefft; Amos C. Luttman and Vina Zimmerman; John Shaw and Dora Nodine; John Dickson and Mary Collins; James W. Sheffer and Cora Chaney.

TRUSTEE'S BUSINESS NOTICE.

I will be at my office at my home in Jackson township for the transaction of township business on Thursday of each week till further notice.
44-17 J. J. WALTER, Township Trustee.

It is surprising how business is increasing at the Auburn Foundry and Machine Works. As the extent of their facilities become known, they find their work increases, not only in amount, but in variety. Besides general foundry work, they are now engaged in the manufacture of iron bridges, of road machines, of the new patent sawmill feeding machine, and many other lines of work. It has often happened that they have had to work nights to keep up with their orders. Mr. Brandon, the secretary is on the road about all of the time and his duties devolve on Mr. Morell, Mr. Hanna and Mr Rogers, or at least much of it necessarily does. Mr. Rogers is the new member of the company, and brings with him a large experience in work of this kind. We believe he does much of the buying for the works. Mr. Hanna is president and Mr. Morel vice president and each thoroughly understands the business. They have electric lights now, fully in use in the factory, and are in every way better prepared for business than ever before.

THE Supreme Court of Minnesota is reported to have lately rendered a decision declaring that "bank checks are not cash, and do not possess legal value as money until cashed."

DR. TALMAGE seems to have unearthed the private ledger of late lamented King Solomon. Anyhow he estimates the wealth of that much-married sovereign to have been £680,000,000 in gold and £1,028,000,377 in silver.

THE Penobscot River, the largest in Maine, drains 7,400 square miles, a region as large as the State of Massachusetts. From Old Town to Bangor, a distance of twelve miles, the river falls more than ninety feet, giving several of the finest water powers in the world.

AT this season the amateur photographer is at his best. The roads and fields afford firm footing for his pedestrian excursions, and the landscapes were never more beautiful than now. Views are taken that will afford pleasure in the album of prints and on the stereopticon screen during the coming season of indoor entertainments.

NEWSPAPERS do not flourish in Persia. No daily journal is published throughout the empire, but there are four weekly papers of mediocre interest and merit. The best Persian organ is the Akhtar (Star), which appears in Constantinople, in order to express more free opinions restricting the Shah's empire than would be permitted within the country itself.

AMES, of long-handled shovel fame, did not invent the implement. A boy who was digging out a woodchuck, broke the handle of his shovel and fitted in a temporary one of double the length. Ames happened to pass by, and noticing how much easier the shovel was handled, he caught on and started a factory. The boy got a dollar hat and the woodchuck out of it.

SLAVERY existed in New York until early in the nineteenth century. Near the close of the eighteenth century the Legislature passed a gradual emancipation law, and subsequently an act was passed declaring all slaves free on July 4, 1827. The census returns show that there were about 21,000 slaves in the State in 1790, 20,000 in 1800, 15,000 in 1810, 10,000 in 1820, 75 in 1830 and 4 in 1840.

TUNISIANS have a rather unpleasant custom of "fattening up" their girls for marriage. A girl after she is betrothed is cooped up in a small room. Shackles of silver or gold are put upon her ankles and wrists as a piece of dress. If she is to be married to a man who has discharged or lost his former wife, the shackles which the former wife wore are put upon the new bride's limbs, and she is fed until they are filled up to the proper thickness.

THE census returns sustain public expectation as to the increase of population in the natural gas counties of Indiana. Of those reported, Madison County shows an increase of 8,445, of which 6,633 is in Anderson, and Delaware follows close with an increase of 7,198, of which 6,120 belongs to Muncie. It is gratifying to observe that the country has shared in the increase as well as the cities, showing the influx of an enterprising class of farmers.

A CITIZEN of Brooklyn has caused the arrest of a druggist in that city for refusing him permission to look over the book in which sales of poisons are recorded. The complainant has a wife who is addicted to the morphine habit, and he desired to ascertain if she got her supplies at the druggist's store. The law imposes a fine of $50 when such a request is denied, and the defense in this case is that the demand was not couched in civil language.

SOME very strange accidents are brought to light by the accident insurance business. For instance, a man at Zaliska, Ohio, a stationary engineer, was kicked very severely by a hog. It disabled him for quite a number of weeks, and he was paid $87. Another case was that of a man at Chillicothe, Ohio. As he was stooping to pick up some kindling wood a game rooster gaffed him in the wrist, cutting an artery, which disabled him for some time.

THIS new "sweetener," which the French Government has already prohibited, owing to what they call a dangerous element which enters in its formation, does away entirely with the use of sugar. It costs almost nothing. About a month ago a prominent member of a canning firm of an Eastern city, while experimenting with saccharine, discovered that pineapples preserved in it would almost entirely retain their natural taste. This is in itself a great discovery, as almost everybody knows the difference in taste between canned pineapples and those which are imported from the South.

"YES, indeed; send horse and carriage to depot," was the innocent message that went to a lady in Utica not long ago. She was married, and her husband, usually called Joe, had been away from home for several weeks. The wife had telegraphed a lady member of the family to come up and spend a few weeks with her, and the answer was sent as above. The Utica lady was prostrated with grief when she received a dispatch reading: "Joe is dead. Send hearse and carriage to depot." Arrangements were made in a hurry, and the hearse and carriage were in waiting when Joe and the lady stepped out of the train.

THE accident by which the woman on a Burlington train near Galesburg was killed is perhaps the only one of the kind in the history of railroad casualties. She was sitting at the window of the coach when the door of a car belonging to a freight train going by on a parallel track broke from its hinges, and fell in her direction and crushed in her skull. It has never been safe for trains to attempt to pass each other on the same track, and as this accident proves, there is danger when trains pass each other on different tracks. It is not a comforting reflection that the possibilities in the way of railroad accidents are outrunning precautions to prevent them.

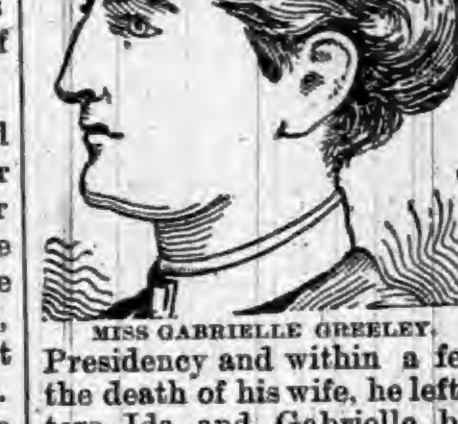
CALIFORNIA after celebrating her fortieth year of Statehood by the miracle of keeping "the old homstead" in peaches, pears and grapes while the vineyard and orchards of the "effete East" went on strike, has just had a narrow escape from losing a large part of what remains to be gathered of her own great fruit crop. The wine-growers in the southern counties have indeed suffered severely from the early rains, but the other fruit culturists turn out to have been comparatively unhurt, and the whole country may rejoice with California in her season of unexpected prosperity. The new gold bids fair to outweigh the old, and, happily, the lode need never "play out."

A MINNESOTA court has decided that the man who pays for the lower berth in a sleeping car is entitled to have the upper berth closed, and hence to the use of the section unless the upper berth is sold to some other traveler. This is probably good law, and is certainly good sense; but the strict application of the rule may work some inconvenience. As, for example, when the traveler who controls the lower berth and who has ridden, let us say, from Chicago, with the upper berth made up and ready for occupancy, is disturbed at the Minnesota line by the porter who, in compliance with the law, proposes to close it, or when the man traveling from St. Paul is rudely awakened at 1 o'clock in the morning by this same sable nuisance, who desires to open and make up the upper berth that it may be occupied by some newly booked traveler.

OWING to the faulty construction of the tank the tank drama had an unfortunate ending a few days ago in a town in Indiana. The tank sprung a leak. No cultivated and intelligent patrons of the tank drama can patiently endure such an accident. This lamentable disaster occurred at a critical moment in which the villain hurls the unfortunate heroine into the flood and the brave young hero leaps in and saves her from a tanky grave; and when the Hoosier audience saw the tank spring a large leak and the water disappear in which these thrilling incidents were to be enacted they made a great row and broke up the play. This impotent conclusion of a great realistic drama, however, was not the worst of the troubles of the manager. The water leaked down into a drug store underneath the theater and the proprietor seized the tank and the other stage properties for damages. Unless mechanical art, on which the theatrical manager must depend for a tank that won't leak, can co-operate with a genius for stage realism better than it did in this unfortunate instance the tank drama is forever doomed.

GABRIELLE GREELEY.

The Sole Surviving Child of the Great Editor.



MISS GABRIELLE GREELEY.

The recent unveiling of a monument to Horace Greeley in New York City revives interest in the family of the famous journalist. When he died in November, 1872, as a direct result of the mental and physical strain imposed by his disastrous race for the Presidency and within a few weeks of the death of his wife, he left two daughters, Ida and Gabrielle, behind him. Ida, the elder, was married shortly after her father's death to Colonel Nicholas Smith, of Louisville, and died five years later, leaving two children. Gabrielle still survives. She lives at the old family residence at Chappaqua, N. Y., and devotes herself to religion and to the education of her sister's children, whom she has cared for since a short time after their mother's death. The old homestead is situated in a picturesque section of Westchester County, close to the Harlem Railroad. Horace Greeley, although the founder of a successful newspaper which has made other men rich, died poor. Both he and his wife gave freely in charity, and the Presidential campaign had been a heavy drain on his resources. The Tribune had been sadly depreciated as a property by the dissatisfaction of its old patrons with Mr. Greeley's political course, and his interest was disposed of before any of the lost ground could be recovered. His two daughters were therefore not as well provided for as the public generally supposed. The farm at Chappaqua contains seventy-five acres of good land and Miss Greeley's excellent management of the little property left her has enabled her to tide over the difficulties of the first few years and she is now in very comfortable circumstances.

He Had Got Praying Down Pretty Fine

"Fine rain, this morning, Farmer Trust."

"Well, yaas. And I'll tell you what brought it. I was a complainin' last night about the dry weather, and Mary she sez: 'Simon, s'pose you try prayin'. You hain't prayed any fur a good many years, anyway, and maybe the Lord would be glad to hear from you and he might send you some rain.' So, thinks I, I'll gin it a whack, anyway. So when bedtime come I told Mary to stay in the kitchen till I'd go in the room and pray. So I went inter the room and drapped right onter my knees as good as any preacher could and begun prayin', and, by jiminy, I hadn't hardly got started when I heard some rain-drops fallin' on the roof, which reminded me we might git it too heavy and wash the side hill pickle patch, so I put a amendment in the prayin' and sez: 'Don't bring it on too much all to onct, Lord, but spread it out like.' And ye see I got it jist as I wanted it. Begosh-hanks if Mary can't read jist what's in the Lord's mind, and now hereafter whenever I want rain I know how to git it, and will hire out to pray and bring rain in droughty deestricts cheap for cash down."—Kentucky State Journal.

UNCLE SAM'S CHILDREN.

THE TOTAL NUMBER OF THEM IS NOW 62,480,540.

At Least Those Are the Figures Given Out by the Census Bureau as the Total Population of the United States—Growth of the Western States—Some Comparisons.

[Washington dispatch.]

Bulletin No. 12 on the population of the United States has been issued by the Census Office. It says:

> The population of the United States June 1, 1890, as shown by the first count of persons and families, exclusive of white persons in Indian Territory, Indians on reservations, and Alaska, was 62,480,540. These figures may be slightly changed by later and more exact compilations, but such changes will not be material.
>
> In 1880 the population was 50,155,783. The absolute increase of the population in the ten years intervening was 12,324,757 and the percentage of increase was 24.57. In 1870 the population was stated as 38,558,371. According to these figures the absolute increase in the decade between 1870 and 1880 was 11,597,412 and the percentage of increase was 30.08.
> Upon their face these figures show that the population has increased between 1880 and 1890 only 727,345 more than between 1870 and 1880, while the rate of increase has apparently diminished from 30.08 to 24.57 per cent. If these figures were derived from correct data, they would be indeed disappointing. Such a reduction in the rate of increase in the face of the enormous immigration during the last ten years would argue a great diminution in the fecundity of the population or a corresponding increase in its death rate. These figures are, however, easily explained when the character of the data used is understood. It is well known, the fact having been demonstrated by extensive and thorough investigation, that the census of 1870 was grossly deficient in the Southern States, so much so as not only to give an exaggerated rate of increase of the population between 1870 and 1880 in these States but to affect very materially the rate of increase in the country at large. These omissions were not the fault nor were they within the control of the Census Office. The census of 1870 was taken under a law which the Superintendent, Gen. Francis A. Walker, characterized as "clumsy, antiquated, and barbarous." The Census Office had no power over its enumerators save a barren protest, and its right was even questioned in some quarters.

Some of Superintendent Porter's comments on the conditions governing the spread of population are interesting, particularly as regards the Western States. In Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, and Missouri, and in Illinois, if the city of Chicago be dropped from consideration, the rate of increase has declined decidedly. In Ohio it has fallen from 20 to 15 per cent.; in Indiana, from 18 to 11; in Iowa, from 36 to 17; in Missouri, from 26 to 23 per cent., in spite of the rapid growth of St. Louis and Kansas City; and in Illinois, dropping Chicago from consideration, from 14.9 to 5.6 per cent. In these States the agricultural industry, which is still the prominent one, has begun to decline, owing to the sharp competition of Western farms. The farming population has migrated westward, and the growth of manufactures is not yet sufficiently rapid to repair these losses. The southern portions of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota are under similar conditions, but the northern parts of these States, lying upon the frontier of settlement, have filled up with sufficient rapidity to repair either wholly or in part the losses of the southern parts. Michigan increased at the rate of 38 per cent. between 1870 and 1880, while between 1880 and 1890 the rate was but 28 per cent. The increase between 1880 and 1890 was cut into unequal parts by the State census taken in 1884. In the first four years of the decade the increase was 13.2 per cent., while in the last six it was 12.7 per cent. In Wisconsin the last decade shows an increase of 28 per cent., as against an increase of 25 per cent. in the decade between 1870 and 1880. The State census of Wisconsin, taken in 1885, cuts the decade into two equal parts, and shows an increase in the first half of 18.8 per cent., and during the second half of but 7.7 per cent.

Minnesota increased 78 per cent. between 1870 and 1880 and 67 per cent. between 1880 and 1890, the numerical increase being over half a million in the last decade. The State census, taken in 1885, shows that the bulk of this increase occurred between 1880 and 1885. The numerical increase during the first years was 337,025, and the rate of increase 43 per cent., while during the last half of the decade the numerical increase was 182,219 and the rate of increase 16.3 per cent.

During the last ten years the population of Dakota, considering the two States of North Dakota and South Dakota together, has increased from 135,177 to 510,273, or 277 per cent.; Nebraska from 452,402 to 1,056,793, or 134 per cent.; and Kansas from 996,096 to 1,423,485, or 43 per cent. This increase has not, however, continued uniformly throughout the decade. In 1885 Dakota contained 415.610 inhabitants, or more than four-fifths of its present population. Nebraska contained 740,645 inhabitants in the same year, thus dividing the numerical increase quite equally between the two halves of the decade, but leaving the greater percentage in the first half. In the same year Kansas by its State census had 1,268,530 inhabitants, showing that nearly two-thirds of the numerical gain was acquired during the first half of the decade. The industries of these States are almost purely agricultural, and are dependent upon the supply of moisture, either in the form of rain or by irrigation. Through these States passes what is known as the subhumid belt, a strip of country several degrees in width, in which during rainy years there is an abundance of moisture for the needs of crops, while in the years when the rainfall is below the average the supply is deficient. In this region little provision has been made for artificial irrigation, the settlers having thus far been content to depend upon rainfall. Into this region the settlers flocked in large numbers in the early years of the decade, drawn thither by the fertility of the land and by the fact that for a few years the rainfall had been sufficient for the needs of agriculture. During the last two or three years, however, the conditions of rainfall have materially changed. It has fallen decidedly below the normal, and settlers have thereby been forced to emigrate. Thousands of families have abandoned this region and gone to Oklahoma and the Rocky Mountain region. This migration is well shown in the progress of Kansas, as indicated by its annual censuses. These censuses show a rapid increase in population from 1880 up to 1887; 1888 shows but a slight increase over 1887, while 1889 shows a reduction in the population, leading up to the further reduction shown by the Federal census in 1890.

Throughout the South Atlantic and Southern Central States the rate of increase has diminished, and in most of these States it has diminished materially. A certain reduction in the percentage of increase, especially in the eastern part of this region, was to be expected, due not only to the operation of general laws but also to the fact that there has been considerable emigration from the States east of the Mississippi River to the westward and but little immigration. Taken together, however, these two causes by no means account for the reduction in the rate of increase in these States. The real cause is to be found, it is stated, in the imperfections of the census of 1870. These imperfections resulted in giving a comparatively low rate of increase between 1860 and 1870 and an exaggerated increase between 1870 and 1880. Arkansas has continued to grow at a rapid rate, having increased 40 per cent. in the last ten years. Texas also has increased with great rapidity, the numerical increase of its population being 640,471, or over 40 per cent.

In the far Western section the conditions of growth have been varied. In the earlier years of the decade the discovery of valuable silver and copper mines in the mountains of Montana in the neighborhood of Butte drew to that State a large immigration, which is engaged not only in mining but in developing the rich agricultural resources. Wyoming has continued to grow with accelerated rapidity.

The census of Colorado in 1880 was taken on the top wave of a mining excitement, which had filled its mountains with miners, prospectors, and speculators, increasing its population enormously, especially in the mountainous country. The census of the State taken in 1885 was, on a superficial view, surprising. It showed that most of the mining counties had lost population during the five years preceding. This loss was, however, more than made up by the growth of its cities and its agricultural counties. The census of 1890 shows still further reduction of population in the mining regions of the State and an extraordinary development of its urban population and its floating element. New Mexico, Arizona, and Utah show rates of increase which are small when the sparsely settled condition of these territories is considered; while Nevada shows an absolute diminution of population of 17,939, or nearly 29 per cent, leaving it the smallest of all the States.

TERRIBLE CRASH AT SEA.

Nearly One Hundred Lives Lost in a Collision.

An unknown schooner, apparently bound east, with a load of coal, ran down the Spanish steamship Vizcaya, outward bound from New York, and cut it half in two amidships. Within ten minutes both vessels had sunk in twelve fathoms of water, their masts showing above it. Of the ninety-seven persons on board the steamer nearly all went down with the hull. Some thirty clung to the railing, and a few of the schooner's crew, with three of the crew of the steamer, found clinging space in the upper rigging of the latter. As the night advanced, the cold and consequent exhaustion claimed the weaker ones, and they dropped into the water one by one, and were drowned. Only twelve—four officers and eight seamen—were still in the rigging at daylight, when the tramp steamer Humbolt rescued the survivors by means of its boats.

This terrible disaster occurred within eight miles of the New Jersey coast at Barnegat. Sixteen passengers, a steamship crew of sixty-five, and a schooner crew of probably sixteen, the usual number—ninety-seven in all—certainly perished.

Among the passengers who were lost was Signor Juan Pedro, a millionaire of Havana, who was the chief owner of the Compania Transatlantic Espanola, who was on his way home after a summer spent in Paris. He took this steamer because it was esteemed one of the finest and safest in the line. The surviving officers claim that the schooner had no lights out. She was fairly on top of the steamer before she was seen, though the night was clear. Capt. Cunill was at his post of duty on the bridge, and was instantly killed by the bowsprit of the schooner.

She Was Thoroughly Prepared.

A woman opened a front door, and, addressing a soiled man who, down on all fours, was seemingly looking for something, said:

"What are you doing there?"

"Madam," he said, straightening up, "please be so generous as to pardon this apparent intrusion. My little girl and I were coming along here just now, and the child, in her gay frolicsomeness, ran across your green sward, but in her glad forgetfulness dropped a silver dollar that had been given her by one of the handsomest and noblest of women. We were on our way to get a doll for my other little girl that is sick in bed, and it would have done your heart good to have seen the happiness of the little would-be purchaser—but she lost the money, and now, almost heart-broken, she has gone home to tell her mother of the great calamity!"

"That was indeed too bad," said the woman.

"Yes, madam, and if I could only hope—have you any little children, madam?"

"Yes."

"Then you know what disappointment means to a child. If I only knew where I could borrow a dollar how inexpressibly happy I should be. Madam, could you let me have a dollar?"

"No, not this morning."

"Well, could you let me have fifty cents now, and give me the other half this afternoon?"

"No, I can't do that, either."

"Well, madam, may I ask you what you are prepared to do?"

"I am prepared to tell you to move on away or I'll send for a policeman."

"You are thoroughly prepared for this, are you?"

"I am."

"All right. I shall bid you good-morning. It is one of my business rules never to tamper with any one that is thoroughly prepared."—Pioneer-Press.

A WEIRD INCANTATION.

The Wonderful Fire Dance of the Navajo Indians in New Mexico.

The performance of the night were extremely theatrical, writes Dr. Washington Matthews, of the United States Army, and would make a first-class attraction on any stage. A dark circle of branches was built around the fire about eight feet high, forming an inclosure of sacred ground about forty feet in diameter. At 8 o'clock a band of musicians forming a sort of orchestra entered and performed with hardly any interruption until morning. At the moment the music began the great fire was kindled, and in a few moments the entire pile was in flames. "A storm of sparks flew upward to the height of a hundred feet or more, and the descending ashes feel in the corral like a shower of snow. The heat was soon so intense that in the remotest part of the inclosure it was necessary for one to screen his face when he looked toward the fire. And now all was ready to test the endurance of the dancers, who must expose, or seem to expose, their naked breasts to the torrid glow.

Suddenly we heard, mingled with the blowing of the buffalo-horn, strange sounds, much like the call of the sand hill crane. These sounds continued to grow louder and come nearer, until they were heard at the opening in the east, and in a second after, ten men, having no clothing on except a loin-cloth, entered. Every man except the leader bore a long, thick bundle of shreded cedar-bark in each hand. The leader carried four small fagots of the same material in his hands. Four times they all danced around the fire, waving their bundles of bark toward it. They halted in the east; the leader advanced toward the central fire, lighting one of the fagots, and, trumpeting loudly, threw it to the east over the fence of the corral. He performed a similar act at the south, at the west, and at the north; but before the northern brand was thrown he lighted with it the bark bundles of his comrades. As each brand disappeared over the fence, some of the spectators blew into their hands and made a motion as if tossing some substance after the departing flame. When the torches were all lighted, the whole band began a wild race around the fire. At first they kept close together and spat upon one another some substance of supposed medicinal virtue. Soon they scattered and ran, apparently without concert, the rapid racing causing the brands to throw out long, brilliant streamers of flame over the hands and arms of the dancers. Then they proceeded to apply the brands to their own nude bodies and to the bodies of their comrads in front of them, no man ever once turning around. At times the dancer struck his victim vigorous blows with his flaming wand; again, he seized the flame as if it were a sponge, and, keeping close to the one pursued, rubbed the back of the latter for several moments, as if he were bathing him. In the meantime the sufferer would, perhaps, catch up with some one in front of him, and in turn bathe him in flame. At times, when a dancer found no one in front of him, he proceeded to sponge his own back, and might keep this up while making two or three circuits around the fire, or until caught up with some one else. At each application of the blaze the loud trumpeting was heard, and it often seemed as if a great flock of cranes was winging its way overhead southward through the darkness. If a brand became extinguished it was lighted again in the central fire; but when it was so far consumed as to be no longer held conveniently in the hand, the dancer dropped it and rushed, trumpeting, out of the corral. Thus one by one, they all departed. When they were gone many of the spectators came forward, picked up many of the fallen fragments of cedar bark, lighted them, and bathed their hands in the flames as a charm against the evil effects of fire.

Did these dancers next day hide sore and blistered backs under their zarapes? I think not, for I have seen and conversed with some of the performers immediately after the fire show, and they seemed happy and had nothing to complain of. Did the medicine they spat on one another save them? Certainly not, although the Indians claim it as a true prophylactic against burns, and call it aze sakazi, or cold medicine. But it is probable that the cedar bark ignites at low temperature, and more than probable that the coating of white earth with which their bodies were covered is an excellent conductor. I have seen many fire scenes on the stage, many acts of fire-eating and fire-handling by civilized jugglers, and many fire-dances by other Indian tribes, but nothing quite comparable to this in all its scenic effects.

Caught Under the Coal.

Neither the frequent perils nor the continued discomfort of men who work underground can ever be appreciated by us who live every day in the sunshine. Who can realize the experience of Frager, a Scranton collier, who was caught by a falling mass of coal, and lay in his living tomb for sixteen hours? He expected every moment to be crushed to death, but by great good fortune two drills lay within his reach. He seized them and managed to fix them crosswise in the corner of the chamber directly above him, and they helped to support the superincumbent mass. Both his feet were caught, and as the fearful hours went by, he felt his limbs growing numb as the circulation of the blood ceased while the sharp edges and corners of the coal drove into his flesh like spikes. Fortunately, Frager's assistant had escaped the falling mass, and immediately ran for help. A gang of twelve men began cutting through the thick wall, and worked hour after hour, though their own lives were every moment in danger. At last the wall was pierced and the buried man, still alive and able to speak, though terribly bruised and nearly suffocated with foul gases and coal dust, was rescued and restored to his anxious family.

Making Money Anywhere.

Having read Mr. Moorehead's experience plating with gold, silver and nickel, I sent for a plater and have more work than I can do. It is surprising the spoons, casters and jewelry that people want plated. The first week I cleared $37.10, and in three weeks $119.85, and my wife has made about as I have. By addressing W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, you can get circulars. A plater only costs $3. You can learn to use it in an hour. Can plate large or small articles, and can make money anywhere. A. J. JONSON.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.
J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this May 19, 1887. CHAS. M. TRAVIS, Notary Public.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.
My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

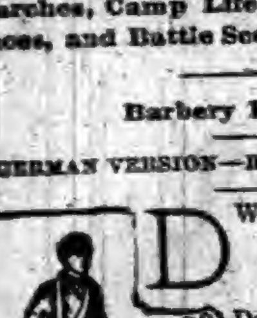
Barbery Frickey.

GERMAN VERSION—BY BYRON W. KING.



DWAS early von morning,
Ven daytimes proke oud,
Dot all dose dings happen
Vot I dold youse abood.
All around der blaces
Der peen a big crop—
Botatoes und such dings
Was looking dipdop.
I dink dose rebels like to have some off dose rations,
Because dhey vas almost dead mid starvations.
Dhey vere hurrying along
Shoost as fast as dhey could;
Some valking on horseback,
Some riding of foot.
Vile ub der streed
Came der rebel tread,
Mid Stony-vall Jack
Marching righd straighd on along ahead
As he looked from under
Dot old slouch hadt,
He bud up his handt,
Und looked shoost like dot.

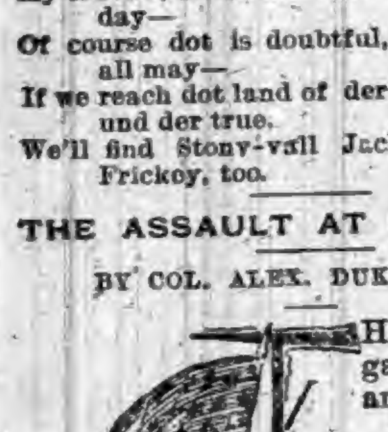
Barbary Frickey, shoost den,
Vas looking der vindow drough;
Und says she, "Now, Stony-vall Jack,
You shoost look better a leedle oud vot you do."
"Halt!" Der dust-brown ranks
Putty quick stood fast.
"Fire!" Oh, my! You should have seen
How oud-plazed dot rifle blast!
It shivered dot vindow
Mid pains und sashes;
It rent dot old banner
Mid seams und mid gashes.
Veil! ven everey-pody
Saw how dot vindow vas split,
Dey all t'ought dot old vomans
She must be righd away kilt.
Bud, no; ven she saw
Dot flag fall down from der stick,
Old Barbara she caught him
Up righd avay quick,
Und leaning herself inside
Oud dot vindow sill,
She shook dot flag,
By jimminy Christmas, fit to kill.
"Shoot, if you must, at dis old white head,
But spare your country's flag!"
Dot's vot she said.

A shade of big sadness,
A blushes of shame,
Over der face of Stony-vall
In vone quick second came,
"Who touches der hairs
Of dot old bald head,
Dies, like a spitz poodle—march, righd
Straighd on along dere now!" Dot's vot he said.
All der whole day long by dere drum's gay beat,
Dhey marched over dot smoodth, cobble-stone pavement streedt.
Over der heads der whole day t'rough
Waved dot old flag of red, white, black and blue!
Stony-vall Jack has fought his last fight,
Perhaps he vas wrong—I don't dhink he vas righd,
But, now, dot's no differenc vichever vay,
I'll bet two dollars and a half he's all righd at der last big day.
Barbara Frickey has gone to the same place mid Stony-vall Jack,
From which no liven person has ever yet come back.

My friends, if we are safe at dot last great day—
Of course dot is doubtful, but we hope we all may—
If we reach dot land of der good, der brave und der true,
We'll find Stony-vall Jack and Barbara Frickey, too.

THE ASSAULT AT DONELSON.

BY COL. ALEX. DUKE BAILIE.



THESE facts are gathered from an officer's diary: The sun of Sunday rose bright and clear, above us who lay in front of Donelson Fort. About noon came word that far down on our right the rebels had tried to cut their way through; they were repulsed, but it cost us 500 men, so the report said. We were in front of a large glen or ravine; on our right were numerous regiments, making a chain which stretched to the river; on our left was the Second Iowa.

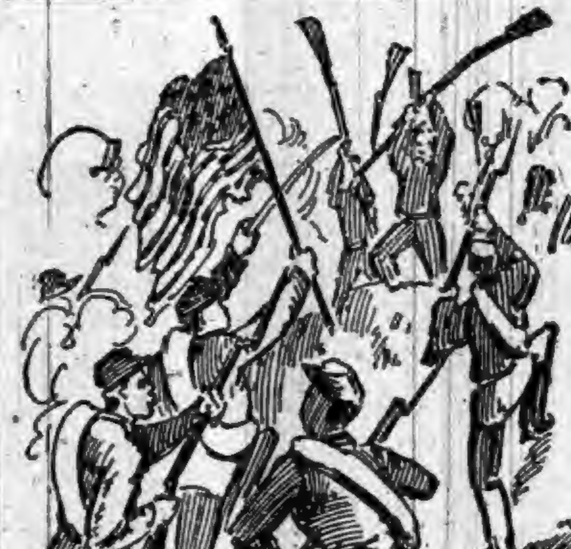
Soon an orderly rode by, who told us that a large body of rebels was moving up opposite us. Our men were called together, and stood near their stacked arms. General Smith and his staff came up and passed us. The sharpshooters along the glen became unusually active. We thought they saw the rebels mustering behind the breastworks. The men took their guns, I hooked up my cavalry saber, and took my place beside the Lieutenant Colonel, with whom I was to act. A painful pause—then a message from the General: we were to move to the left and support the Second Iowa. We passed through the thick trees, but the Second was not where they had been in the morning; we passed their camp-fires, and soon emerged on an open plain. At a glance, the real object of the movement was apparent. The Fourteenth were hurrying down through the field, the Second, in a long line, were struggling up the opposite hill, where two glens met and formed a ridge. It was high and steep, slippery with mud and melted snow. At the top the breastworks of the rebels flashed and smoked, while to the right and left, up either glen, cannon were thundering.

The attempt seemed desperate. Down through the field we went and began to climb the hill. At the very foot I found that we were in the line of fire. Rifle balls hissed over us, and bleeding men lay upon the ground or were trying to drag themselves out of range from the breastworks. The Second Iowa left a long line of dead and wounded to testify to its gallantry. The sight of these was the most appalling part of the scene. A third of the way up we came under fire of the batteries; the shot, and especially the shell, came with the rushing clash of a locomotive on the rail. The most dispiriting thing was that we could see no enemy; the batteries were out of sight, and at the breastworks nothing could be seen but fire and smoke. It seemed as though we were attacking an invisible power.

Suddenly the fire at the summit ceased; the Second Iowa had charged the works and driven the enemy from them. Then came the fire of the Second upon the flying foe, and then loud shouts along the line, "Hurrah, hurrah! The Second are in—hurry up, boys, and support them. Close up. Forward! forward!"

We reached the top and scrambled over the work. I saw a second hill rising gradually before us, and on its top a second breastwork—between us and it about four hundred yards of broken ground. A second fire opened upon us from these inner works. We were ordered back, and, recrossing those we had taken, lay down upon the outside of the embankment.

Having no specific duty to do I turned, as soon as our troops reached the breastworks, and gave my attention the wounded. A singular fact I noticed was that those near the foot of the hill were struck in the legs; those higher up were shot through the body, and near the breastwork the wounds were in the head. A little house in the field had been taken for a hospital; within it were three surgeons. One of them asked me to take his horse and ride for the instruments, ambulances and assistants, for none were there. When I returned all had arrived and were busy at their work. Our men lay in a trench all night, a large force of the enemy within a few yards. When the morning came we were told that a white flag had been displayed and an officer gone into the fort, but that the time was nearly up and the attack would be renewed. We hurried on, expecting to be in a second assault. We had nearly reached the trenches when the men sprang from the ditch to the top of the breastwork, waving the colors and giving wild hurrahs. The fort had surrendered.

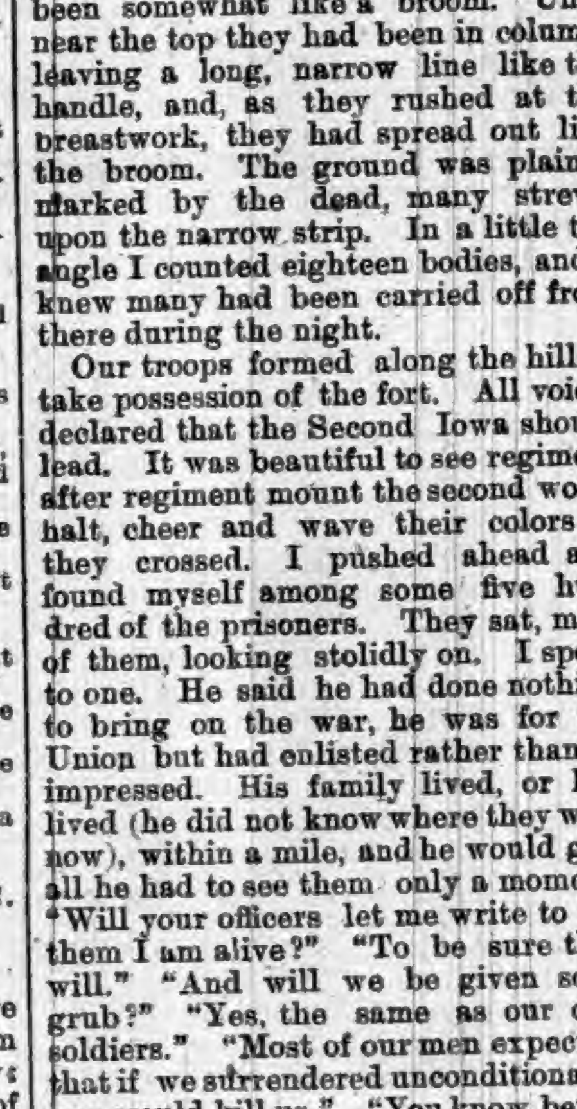


CHARGE OF THE SECOND IOWA.

I stopped to look around. My glance fell on the blue-coats scattered through the fallen trees and the stumps. The march of our troops up the hill had been somewhat like a broom. Until near the top they had been in column, leaving a long, narrow line like the handle, and, as they rushed at the breastwork, they had spread out like the broom. The ground was plainly marked by the dead, many strewn upon the narrow strip. In a little triangle I counted eighteen bodies, and I knew many had been carried off from there during the night.

Our troops formed along the hill to take possession of the fort. All voices declared that the Second Iowa should lead. It was beautiful to see regiment after regiment mount the second work, halt, cheer and wave their colors as they crossed. I pushed ahead and found myself among some five hundred of the prisoners. They sat, most of them, looking stolidly on. I spoke to one. He said he had done nothing to bring on the war, he was for the Union but had enlisted rather than be impressed. His family lived, or had lived (he did not know where they were now), within a mile, and he would give all he had to see them only a moment. "Will your officers let me write to tell them I am alive?" "To be sure they will." "And will we be given some grub?" "Yes, the same as our own soldiers." "Most of our men expected, that if we surrendered unconditionally, you would kill us." "You know better now?" "Yes, we have been lied to."

We were assigned the quarters of the Fiftieth Tennessee, and I slept in what had been the Colonel's house, a nice little house of oak blocks; they had all sorts of comforts which we never hoped for at Camp Benton and never expected to have. We invited the Colonel and some of his officers to spend the night with us. They behaved with quiet dignity and submitted with calm resignation to their changed circumstances, but they were Tennesseans, and though they made no professions in words, convinced us that they had been Union men at heart and wished the Union restored again. One of them remarked that if those who had been released heretofore had not abused it and violated their pledges and oaths, the prisoners at Fort Donelson would probably be released the same way. The Lieutenant Colonel said he wished it could be so; he was confident that none of his men would be thus guilty. "But," he added, "I don't blame the Government for sending us North. I acknowledge that I am a rebel, taken in arms, and it is justified in treating me accordingly."



"HURRAH! THE FORT HAS SURRENDERED!"

It was a novelty, indeed, this spending the evening with our late opponents. We, of course, made no allusions that could hurt their feelings, but they wished to discuss matters, and we talked over the events of the siege until a late hour. They told us that the news of the surrender was like a thunder-clap to them all. The men, and most of the officers, had not seen how completely they were surrounded, and had been made to believe that they were successful. The evening before they had been told that they had gained a glorious victory, and in the morning it was announced with truth that their Generals had run away and they were prisoners of war.

A BOY MURDERER.

The Youngest Convict in the United States

Wonderfully innocent-looking is prisoner No. 1900 in the Iowa State Prison, a slim boy eleven years old. He is rather a handsome boy, with a broad forehead and a thoughtful face, as the photograph shows. He is the youngest prisoner ever received at the prison or, it is believed, at any other State prison.

Prisoner 1900 is sentenced to the Iowa State Penitentiary for life. His crime was the brutal and premeditated murder of his father and stepmother near Edgewood, Clayton County, in July, 1889.

Early one morning Wesley drove the old farm team furiously up to a neighbor's house. He had the baby in the wagon with him. He had an awful story to tell. When he arose that morning and went to his parents' room a terrible sight met his eyes.

Lying stretched out on the bed was the body of his father with a bullet-hole through his head. Half on the bed and half on the floor was the body of his stepmother. Her head was beaten to a jelly. On the floor lay a heavy club, smeared with blood, and his father's old muzzle-loading rifle, with which the ghastly work had been done.

The community was excited and many people were thrown under suspicion. The eldest son proved an alibi.

Wesley, the ten-year-old boy, maintained his story. He showed no sign of grief. No tear came to his eye. Coolly and in a matter of fact way he related again and again the details of his horrid discovery. It was always the same.

He was finally arrested, however, and locked up in jail at Elkader. One day this 10-year old child called the officials into his cell and confessed that the work was his. There was no breaking down, no tears. Coolly and calmly again he detailed the story.

His father and his stepmother whipped him and he would not stand it. He waited until his brother was gone away and he was alone in the house with his parents. At 3 o'clock in the morning he got up, stole down stairs and loaded his father's old muzzle-loading rifle, which hung on the wall in the bed-room. He put the muzzle to his father's forehead and fired. As he had expected, his step-mother was awakened by the report and leaped out of bed to strike a light. Wesley knocked her down with a club which he had ready. Then, to make the matter sure, he beat her head to a jelly.

Dry Goods Salaries.

"It is not generally known," said Mr. C. B. Worth, of H. B. Claflin & Co., a few days ago, "that some of the highest salaries are paid in our business. We are often accused of paying starvation wages to our clerks by people who never look at the expenses entailed in running an establishment. Take the buyers, for instance. There are firms in this city who pay men from $10,000 to $30,000 a year for simply being able to tell three-quarters of a year in advance what the fashion is going to be. One gentleman, who buys for a wholesale house on Broadway, is said to earn $50,000 a year.

"Dry goods houses are noted for paying low wages to their clerks, because the supply of clerks is so abundant. In some of the smaller stores the pay runs as low as $3 a week. But the buyer on whose judgment the sale of next year's fabrics depends gets half as much as the President of the United States. The smallest, and some of the largest, salaries are paid in the dry goods business."

"How does the buyer for the house distinguish in advance what the fashion for next year is to be?"

"Ah, that is where it requires a wide awake man. He must watch the growing tendencies among the firm's richest and most fashionable customers at home and abroad. Whatever has become popular among them will make its way among the masses, and this tide the house must catch and swim along with it.

"In Europe textile manufacturers make few goods except on orders. The buyer for a firm must decide what his house can sell next season, and order his supplies of cloth made in advance. A serious mistake might be sufficient to bankrupt the firm, by leaving them with a stock on hand of unsalable goods, the patterns not being to the liking of the firm's customers. So you can easily see why a skillful buyer can command his own price."

"How do you select a man for such a position?"

"Nothing less than a kind of intuition is demanded for such a place. In addition, the buyer must estimate what amount his employer can sell of a given style of goods. If he overstocks the firm, then they are left with old-fashioned articles on hand which they must resort to the 'bargain-counter' devices to get rid of at a severe loss."—New York Star.

How to Arouse a Drunken Man.

"The best way to arouse a drunken man is to pinch him under the arms," says a police officer. "I found a drunken fellow lying across the track at Tenth and Morgan streets late one night and it seemed impossible to arouse him. I clubbed him over the soles of his feet and rolled and shook him, but he lay as limp as a rag. Just then an old gentleman suggested that I pinch him under the arms.

"The effect was electrical. I had him awake and fighting mad at once. On another occasion Sergeant Pierce tried the same experiment on a sot at the Fourth District station, who was delaying the Black Maria. The man stood it for awhile, and then suddenly opened his eyes, and dealt the sergeant a blow that would have felled an ox. The treatment is a dead sure thing; fetches them every time."—Globe Democrat.

In the Negro's Defense.

Bishop Potter has written a letter to the United States African News Company, in which he makes public his views as to the future of the Negro in America.

"The African race in America," says he, "is entitled to an opportunity, and in order to improve it it needs an education. Race prejudice dies slowly and dies hard, and strangely enough, Americans, who enslaved the Negroes, and who owe them so large a debt of reparation, seem least willing to forget the matter of color. Social relations must adjust themselves. But excellence and capacity in the black man should be more willingly recognized by the whites than it is at present."

"But though their injustice disappear slowly, it is less universal than it was and I think is steadily diminishing; and here is the opportunity for people of the African race. They want of course to be taught handicrafts and letters, and then with their newly acquired culture, they want to do the best work that can be done. When people talk of the Negro as shiftless and lazy, I find myself tempted to ask: Who made him so? Generations of servitude and irresponsibility, when no one went to a task save when he was driven to it, and where the fruits of one's labor were never his own; these have educated tendencies which it is not surprising that it has taken a quarter of a century to overcome. But when, at the last commencement of Harvard University, I saw a young colored man appear as the class orator, and heard his brilliant and eloquent address, I said to myself: 'Here is what a historic race can do if they have a clear field, a high purpose, and a resolute will.'"

"'A high purpose and a resolute will.' I wish I could tell you how these could best be obtained, but though that is a task too large for these limits, I should at least like to say to every youth of the African race to whom these lines may come: Hate ease and insolence, cultivate the acquaintance in books and out of them of minds inspired by a lofty purpose and an unselfish spirit, and then resolve to be like them. Above all remember that that alone is true religion which illustrates itself in conduct. Not profession but practice, not noise but service, not experience but achievements, are what the world wants to see as evidence that any man or woman is truly religious. We cannot wholly expel prejudices, but when other people see other people who are honest and tell the truth, and hate impurity, and do a fair day's work for a fair day's wages, then they are compelled to respect them whose conduct makes them not merely worthy of respect but of honor."

Morning on a War Ship.

"Bos'n's mate there! Call all hands! Call in the deck lookouts! Lay aloft the lookout to the masthead." The orders follow in rapid succession. "Turn off the spar deck circuit!" and the great red and green lights on the port and starboard sides of the bridge and the light at the masthead are extinguished by the touch of a button in the "dynamo room" below, while a sailor goes "tripping up aloft" to the foretopsail yards, simultaneously with a long-drawn shrill whistle of the boatswain's pipe, echoed on the gun deck by others, and the hoarse cry of the boatswain's mate calling: "A-a-ll h-a-a-nds! Up all hammocks!"

The great ship is waking up, and out of the hatches the men come tumbling, one after the other—sailor men, apprentice boys, firemen, marines, cooks, and "all hands"—each with a hammock neatly rolled, ready to be placed in the nettings in the bulwarks. Brawny, bare-chested, bare-footed fellows, most of them; regardless of the cold wind blowing and the wet decks, they run nimbly to their appointed stations, some clambering up and opening the nettings, while the others pitch their hammocks in and stow them away out of sight for the day. As we lean over the rail now, and look down, the scene is an animated one. The deck forward is swarming with men, and "Jackie" is making his morning toilet and preparing for the breakfast and the day's routine. See that gigantic young coxwain yonder as he souses his well-soaped neck and face into the cold water in the bucket before him, spluttering and blowing away like a grampus, then rubbing and polishing his muscular, sun-burned neck and broad white back and hairy chest with his rough, parti-colored towel. With his little circular mirror perched on a coil of rope, another sailor man is carefully parting his thick, curly locks, while a shipmate looks over his shoulder and gives a final twist to his black silk neckerchief, and a marine brushes his coat, and hums softly to himself meanwhile. The steam from the galleys is rising out of the hatches, and with it—mingled, it must be confessed, with a smell of oil and grease from the engines—an odor of hot coffee and broiling bacon, and the boatswain's whistle is heard again piping to breakfast.—Scribner's Magazine.

The Free List.

Henry C. Miner, theater proprietor, was standing in the entrance of his Fifth Avenue Theater the other day, when a seedy actor approached him.

"I beg pardon, Mr. Miner," he said, "have you a copy of the new tariff law?"

"I have," replied Mr. Miner.

"Will you be kind enough to run it through and see if I am on the free list? I may want to look in at the theater tonight."

WOMAN'S INTUITION.

Nearly Always Right in Her Judgment in Regard to Common Things.

An old gentleman over seventy came into the city from his farm without his overcoat. The day turned chilly, and he was obliged to forego his visit to the fair.

To a friend who remonstrated with him for going away from home thus unprepared he said: "I thought it was going to be warm; my wife told me to take my overcoat, but I wouldn't. Women have more sense than men, anyway."

A frank admission.

Women's good sense is said to come from intuition; may it not be that they are more close observers of little things. One thing is certain, they are apt to strike the nail on the head, in all the ordinary problems of life, more frequently than the lords of creation.

"According to Dr. Alice Bennett, who recently read a paper on Bright's disease before the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, persons subject to bilious attacks and sick headaches, who have crawling sensations like the flowing of water in the head, who are 'tired all the time' and have unexplained attacks of sudden weakness, may well be suspected of dangerous tendencies in the direction of Bright's disease."

The veteran newspaper correspondent, Joe Howard, of the New York Press, in noting this statement, suggests: "Possibly Alice is correct in her diagnosis, but why doesn't she give some idea of treatment? I know a man who has been 'tired all the time' for ten years. Night before last he took two doses of calomel and yesterday he wished he hadn't."

A proper answer is found in the following letter of Mrs. Davis, wife of Rev. Wm. J. Davis, of Basil, Ohio, June 21, 1890:

"I do not hesitate to say that I owe my life to Warner's Safe Cure. I had a constant hemorrhage from my kidneys for more than five months. The physicians could do nothing for me. My husband spent hundreds of dollars and I was not relieved. I was under the care of the most eminent medical men in the State. The hemorrhage ceased before I had taken one bottle of the Safe Cure. I can safely and do cheerfully recommend it to all who are sufferers of kidney troubles."

Having His Own Way.

"Why did you run away from home?" asks Joshua Whitcomb of the ragged young tramp.

"Because I wanted to have my own way."

"Well, you look as though you'd had it," is Whitcomb's sententious reply.

The boy who is so eager to have his own way, is continually met with, and many times it is an extremely hard way. The tyranny of home is of the mildest sort, he finds, compared with what he has to undergo in endeavoring to have his own way. Many times he falls into evil company, and in imitating their way and making it his own he discovers himself on the way to a reformatory or prison.

Ask the wretched old tramp whom you find sitting on the park bench, how he began his downward career, and if he be candid he will tell you it was by trying to have his own way.—Texas Siftings.

Catarrh

Is a complaint which affects nearly everybody, more or less. It originates in a cold, or succession of colds, combined with impure blood. Disagreeable flow from the nose, tickling in the throat, offensive breath, pain over and between the eyes, ringing and bursting noises in the ears, are the more common symptoms. Catarrh is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strikes directly at its cause by removing all impurities from the blood, building up the diseased tissues, and giving healthy tone to the whole system.

Dangerous tendencies characterize that very common affection, catarrh in the head. The foul matter dropping into the bronchial tubes or lungs is very liable to lead to bronchitis or consumption. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do but little good. The common-sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla. The powerful action of this medicine upon the blood expels every impurity and cures catarrh.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure Sick-Headache.

THERE are only 262,000 Indians in the United States.

Let every enfeebled woman know it! There's a medicine that'll cure her, and the proof's positive!

Here's the proof—if it doesn't do you good within reasonable time, report the fact to its makers and get your money back without a word—but you won't do it!

The remedy is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—and it has proved itself the right remedy in nearly every case of female weakness.

It is not a miracle. It won't cure everything—but it has done more to build-up tired, enfeebled and broken-down women than any other medicine known.

Where's the woman who's not ready for it? All that we've to do is to get the news to her. The medicine will do the rest.

Wanted—Women. First to know it. Second to use it. Third to be cured by it. The one comes of the other.

The seat of sick headache is not in the brain. Regulate the stomach and you cure it. Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the little regulators.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of

Prickly Ash Bitters!

a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, for the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Remember the name—PRICKLY ASH BITTERS. Ask your druggist for it.

A WOMAN BEST UNDERSTANDS A WOMAN'S ILLS.

The experiments of Lydia E. Pinkham that years ago gave to the world that blessing, the Vegetable Compound, were made through a feeling of sympathy for the afflicted of her sex. She discovered that nearly all the diseases of woman have a common origin, and therefore may have a common cure. That cure is known in all parts of the civilized world, and an average of 100 letters per day are received from grateful women.

The Rambler in Iowa.

Monstrous mountains are encountered in traveling west of Denver, and on various branch lines of railroads southwest and northwest, one is brought to view the mysterious sights among the high peaks, deep canons, shadowy glens, across pretty vales, and the little mirror lakes that nestle so close beneath the mountain slope. Now, the topography changes! The eye rests upon the unfathomable grandeur of the wild rolls of foot hills, that grow higher at every dip or wave. Then we are beneath the wonderous heights of a snow-capped mountain peak that fills us with awe and thoughts of sublimity and thanks, that we have thus been permitted to behold these wondrous beauties of nature. Now we see the wild elements tossing everything to and fro, as if to tear it to pieces. Then we pass into a beautiful park, where all is serene and mild, with rich farms and pretty cottages situated beside a tiny, purling stream that silently winds its way to a point where many shimmering streams are soon transformed into a large, deep-flowing river, surging with foaming waterfalls that continue mid the sentinel rocks and ranges that take them on and on from the view of the beholder. I will attempt one more scene known as the Toltec Gorge and Tunnel. Looking down the picturesqueness of the Los Pinos, as the advance is made around mountain spires and deep ravines, glimpses are caught of profound depths and towering heights. The train then plunges into the darkness and gloom of Toltec tunnel, which is somewhat remarkable, as it pierces the summit, and emerges 1,200 feet above the bottom of the gorge, while the opposite wall confronts us, with its massive bulwarks lifted high above us. When the train has passed through this tunnel, we find ourseleves on the brink of a precipice—a solid bridge or trestle work, se in the rock after the fashion of a balcony. From this elevated position the traveller beholds a most thrilling picture of gigantic proportions, composed of a tremendous gorge, whose sides are splintered rocks and monumental crags, whose depths are filled with the white, seething waters of foaming torrents, beneath, and the deep, blue sky above, while on either side of him are the majestic and mysterious sublimity of the mountains. Our next scene is the wonderful Needle Points. A range that are so tall that they are called the Needle Pass and Seam, standing sentinal to this narrow and lonely roadway. Viewing them in a clear, star light night, they appear so tall that the glimmer of the eye makes them seem as though the points were punctured like the eye of a needle, and the glimmer of the moment show them attached to beautiful silver threads. I assure you, it is worth a trip here to see the Royal gorge, where I stand with monstrous forms all around me; cliff and chasm on every hand, peaks and pinnacles surround, and at my feet the river rushes with its never ceasing roar. The Garden of the Gods is a place of mystery—a large park, an entrance to which, is gained through a gateway, with columns several hundred feet high, right and left, between which the visitor may pass On going into this peculiar place, the vision is met with many quaint objects of statuary The Statue of Liberty, Cathedral Spire, a dolphin, a bear, a seal, a lion, a griffin, and other curious forms by the hundreds, many of them tall and beautiful. My pen is utterly powerless to describe these wonderful freaks of nature, so clearly outlined against a cloudless horizon, with the golden light of the sun falling on these pretty objects, of real, colored cornelian, vivid in splendor, that once seen, lives in memory forever. Many other magnificent scenes of natural beauty might be brought to your notice, but it would require the capacity of a large book in a description of their incomprehensive construction. So, I will not undertake to say any more about my surroundings, but will inform my friends that they may expect to see me again in a few weeks at home, where I can talk much easier than I can pen my thoughts. I shall go from this place to Dakota. before I return. My cousin is still traveling with me. Of course money and pleasure is the object of our exploits.

With kind regards, I am

An Inevitable Canadian Conflict.

W. Blackburn Harte in the November Forum.

Annexation or independence would bring about the framing of a modern constitution; and that would mean the emancipation of the English in Canada from theocratic government, and the decline of the papal and French Canadian power. A collision between the two peoples is imminent and inevitable. It is impossible for the Jesuit propaganda to continue to paralyze the energies of the country and to impoverish the whole population, and yet to maintain the peace of the country. The French have made and unmade administrations, and only a policy of concession and procrastination has enabled the Conservative party to remain in office for so many years. The French are neither tories nor Liberals; they are French Canadians first and last, and they change their allegiance from one party to the other whenever such tergiversation promises to promote the aggrandizement of the church. It is sadly true that in Canada to-day liberalism and true liberty are dead; the Jesuits have strangled them. But an insurrection will take place sooner or later, as in Italy and in Mexico, where the Jesuits were once supreme. There are not only repetitions, but revenges, in history.

The Power of Tammany.

There was probably never an instance in which the intelligence and character of an American community were more generally united at the polls against its dangerous and irresponsible classes than at this election. There is not one, even among the conspicuous leaders of Tammany Hall, who would be accepted as a representative of the character, industry ability, and public spirit of the city. Nevertheless Mr. Choate wisely advised good citizens that the organization of Tammany is very complete, and its power very great. It hesitates at nothing, and it counts on the worst and lowest motives. It counts also upon the indifference of many good citizens, and the feeling that at such times one side is as bad as the other. But no reasonable man can hold such an opinion of this controversy. Every intelligent citizen must feel that defeat would be the disgrace of the city.—Harper's Weekly.

DR. FRUTH,

Of New York, the well known and successful Specialist in Chronic Diseases, and diseases of the Eye and Ear by request of many friends and patients, has decided to visit

AUBURN, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1890.

Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. One day only.

CHRONIC DISEASES, —AND— DISEASES of the EYE and EAR A SPECIALTY

Consultation and Examination FREE.

DR. D. O. FRUTH,

—OF THE—

PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,

NEW YORK CITY,

— Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaption or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz.: He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. Let those given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhœa, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphilis, St. Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the traces of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and relief you positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free. Western Address, DR. FRUTH, Toledo, Ohio.

REFERENCES—We, the undersigned, do cheerfully and conscientiously recommend Dr. Fruth as a gentleman of rare professional ability, ripe in judgment, humane to a fault, considerate in price and enthusiastic in relief of his fellow men, and we therefore urge the afflicted to avail themselves of his superior skill:—Granville M. AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

Daniel Altenburg and Levi Walsworth with their wives, who were sisters of James Latson, so long county coroner, moved to Auburn from Steubenville, Steuben county, Nov. 4, 1838 and found much difficulty in making their journey. A heavy snow had fallen and continued to fall so obscuring the road and bending overloaded boughs that one had to go in advance to keep the track. The women assisted to drive some stock they had brought with them, walking in snow and mud, keeping pace with the slow ox teams. Night came on and they were in the forest, with no way of making a fire, nothing for their animals to eat and no resting place but the wagons. The long drawn terrifying howl of a wolf was answered by others which gathered around them frightening the women and children. One yoke of cattle got entirely off the road and the wagon became so entangled among logs and trees that it had to be left and both yokes being hitched to one wagon they drove on to the vicinity of Isaac B. Smith's cabin in Smithfield township followed by a pack of howling wolves.

Mr. Smith took in the belated immigrants and kept them till morning when the abandoned wagon was recovered and three miles progress made when night returned and found them at Cedar Creek, where Uniontown now is. Here they saw a board shanty occupied by two men who were employed building a bridge and who gave them the hospitality of the cabin in which they some how contrived to bestow themselves. Surmounting the difficulty of arriving, they finally got through to Auburn where they remained till January 1839 when they moved into the cabin of Altenburg's, three miles east of the village. The cabin was chimneyless and open between the logs while nightly the woods rang with the howling of wolves. "From Jan. 1, to March 10" said Walsworth, "Our women saw no human beings but their own families with one solitary exception of a man who strayed in." They had ample experience of pioneers' troubles, being days on journeys to Union Mills, Lagrange county, for breadstuffs and after hard days work chopping, walking through the swamps to Auburn for a bushel of potatoes. Mr. Altenburg was one day at work chopping off a clearing when a tree fell upon him breaking his arm and several ribs, the result was the loss of an arm and he was fortunate in not losing his life. Two amputations and a year of the most intense suffering were endured by him and long after, severe neuralgia pain had tortured and almost distorted this early and long surviving settler. It is several years since he returned to Auburn and located in the north end of town in Rainier & Headley's addition. A third amputation proved fruitless and I am sure that few on Old Settlers' Day, some years ago, who saw him upon the platform but felt compassion in these life-long consequences of the accident. He died in 1888.

Another of the difficulties met at this time was scarcity of teams. The settlers had raised nothing of account to feed cattle in winter and they were forced to make shifts to get along without. This meant hard labor logging with handspikes in the clearings and digging holes among the roots of stumps with hoes and putting in the seed corn. There were crops raised entirely by use of the hoe.

It was a happy thought sometime ago by Mr. Heberling to treat the old settlers to a free ride behind a traction engine as a reminder of those days when they used cast iron mold board plows that would not scour, hoed the corn fields and reaped the wheat with the sickle.

In the clerk's office is an old book bearing the inscription printed along the back, "Record of ear marks." There one can see the hieroglyphic representation of the ear marks of Parks, Ingman and others whose ingenuity in this direction is only equaled by the skill of the delineator of bovine figures. The times are changed now and not all for the better. There was a healthy pleasure in the journeys on toward night, by the children for the cows, which socially herded together as they browsed the shrubbery and grass and made known their whereabouts by bell-ringing not so harmonious perhaps as the performances of the Swiss family, but as musical to the barefooted boys and girls who among the various sounds, quickly single out their own bell. Sometimes they were belated before the cows were found and as they started homeward, thoughts of wild beasts made them keep close with a feeling of companionship in the presence of the cows.

There are good fences in these times and one township and town after another has rescinded orders permitting stock to run at large and the cattle of their own accord seek the farm and rich meadows, flowing springs and streams supply good pasture to the many fine herds of blooded cattle, little by little purchased and raised by leading farmers.

There are many things of old time memories. They are not all in cutting roads, logging, clearing and filing ear marks; there is the memory of native cattle, swine and sheep which ill-contrast with the Durham cattle, Poland China hogs and merino sheep which constitute the stock of to-day.

It is the opinion of local authorities that nothing can save the beautiful birds of India from complete destruction but a prohibitive tax upon the export of their skins and feathers.

A Mystery Explained.

The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen. The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical, nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and fine book, containing many marvelous cures, free at F. E. Davenport's who also sells and guarantees Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart Cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures fluttering, short breath, etc. 3

The noise of the artillery at Waterloo was heard at Criel, 115 miles from the scene of the battle, and also at Dover.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles found herself sound and well, now does her own house work and is as well as she ever was.—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at Robbins & McCords drug store, large bottles 50c and $1. 2

A single hair can support a weight of two ounces, and is so elastic that it may be stretched to one third of its entire length, and then regain its former size and condition.

Height of Cruelty.

Nervous women seldom receive the sympathy they deserve. While often the pictures of health, they are constantly ailing. To withhold sympathy from these unfortunates is the height of cruelty. They have a weak heart, causing shortness of breath, fluttering, pain in side, weak and hungry spells, and finally swelling of ankles, oppression, choking, smothering and dropsy. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is just the thing for them. For their nervousness, headache, weakness, etc., his Restorative Nervine is unequaled. Fine treatise on "Heart and Nervous Diseases" and marvelous testimonials free. Sold and guaranteed by F. E. Davenport. 3

What We See.

The eye is the organ of vision. Through it the outward semblance of objects is conveyed to the mind, and we are said to see them. Sight is the most necessary and important of the five senses. And I would a great deal rather be both deaf and dumb than to lose my sight.

By seeing, we gain almost all our knowledge of form, color and beauty, which contributes so much to our comfort and happiness. To the deaf, this power of vision is especially useful—indeed it is all important! Shut out, as the deaf are, from the world of sound, from the sweet songs of the birds; the tone of parents', brothers' and sisters' voices; from the sweet interchange of words of friendship and love, how utterly helpless and desolate would be their condition without it.

Dependent as they are upon the eye, the deaf are more observant than others. They see things to which others are blind. They judge of character, by looks and acts, and are seldom at fault. Why then, should they not excel in any of the arts, since they are the better judges of form, proportion and color? Yet sight, like all the other senses, has its defects. If not so, why do we see so many eye-glasses in use? Are they merely worn as ornaments—serving the style ("Its English, you know?")

All persons do not see alike, owing to the way they have, from habit, of looking at things. Some are always looking on the bright side, while others do not. Very much of the benefit and pleasure we derive from sight, depends upon the way we are in the habit of observing.

To be successful in any department of active life, one must ever be on the alert, with eyes wide open. It will not do for a person to go blindfolded along the path of life—we may stumble and fall, and disappointment is sure to follow. Therefore, our happiness is measured by our manner of looking at things. To the cheerful dispositioned person, the world is bright and pleasing. Hope opens a bright vista before him, and life is joyous and happy.

Even if clouds obscure the sky of his vision, he sees the shining light beyond the murky depths of the darkest cloud. As the saying is, "He looks on the bright side of things, and makes the most of the present," while others give up to despondency. No matter how bright the sunlight may be, they go through life with downcast eyes and gloomy look, and lack of feeling fill the heart. For as Goldsmith says:

> "Laugh, and the world laughs with you,
> Weep, and you weep alone."

The eye is aptly styled the window of the soul, and through it peers, or rather is reflected, the image of the inner self. To see well and profit by what we see, the eye must be educated. Our happiness in this life consists principally in what we see, and if the eye is educated to see much in little, we shall be all the more satisfied with our lot and be the more indifferent to what is beyond our vision, and our own characters will be more clearly revealed, in how we look at the objects of life, and how they appear to us.

How do we look to ourselves? We cannot even see our own faces—only their reflection. When we turn the eye inward, and take a view of our inner self, is the scene that meets the gaze, a pleasing one? Do we see ourselves, as others see us? We are always ready to see faults and imperfections in others, but are we not often blind to our own faults? The person who is wise, will seek to gain a true knowledge of his inner self, and with eyes fully open to the truth, and if faults are seen, seek to remedy the defects till the image shines forth clear, perfect and beautiful. A bright, cheerful spirit, with but little else of the world's treasure is infinitely to be preferred to any supposable condition of life without it. Such spirits see enjoyment in all things. Earth's crimes and miseries are often exposed to view, but if we walk with eyes open, we will not be tempted, but rather like the sunlight show by the light reflected from our characters, their wickedness, and point them to a better and a happier way.

Speak gently to the erring
Oh, do not thou forget,
However darkly stained by sin,
He is thy brother yet.

A Cowardly Campaign.

The campaign just closed was even more unfair and cowardly on the part of republicans than the notorious campaign of two years ago. There was no such thing as a square, manly fight. True, their papers started out to tell the people the manifest lie, that the tariff is not a tax, or that it is paid by the foreigner, or that it makes things cheaper. But the people were too intelligent to receive that, and the plan was abandoned. Then came the sneering at and abuse of candidates, of men of the highest respectability. This too failed, for it nauseated people. The misrepresentations about the state and county debt followed, but the people knew all about that, and that republicans had made their share of these. Then came the trading and bargaining to secure an advantage for one candidate over another and elect one man and slaughter another equally good. This failed in the main, though in its results it beat Mr. Patterson. They could not use much money, for the new law had put an end to that. But fight they could not, for they had a cause they could not defend. They brought in no speakers, for no one would face an intelligent people like ours, and try to excuse the great wrongs being put on them by the republican party. So it became a campaign of skulking, and mudslinging, and bargain and sale—anything but honorable warfare. The republicans signally failed, as they ought to under such circumstances. The democrats made an aggressive fight, their papers used arguments, gave facts, avoided personal abuse or misrepresentation; we had speakers and urged the people to come out and be the judges whether we spoke the truth or not. By this manly course, we deserved success. We got it. It was the result of hard fighting and no skulking. Let the result teach all a lesson, that a cowardly campaign is not honorable.

SAYS the London Illustrated News: Americans are complaining that their heiresses all leave them to marry English peers, and a syndicate has actually been formed, with the motto, "American Girls for American Men," to check what they call "free trade in heiresses."

EXCUSES for schoolboys are sometimes oddly expressed. Here is the latest, brought by a tall, red-haired boy of about seventeen to his teacher: "Dere Cir—Pleze to eggcuce Henry for absents yisterday. We made sourkrout, and he had to tromp it down. Allso he had to Help butcher 2 pigs. Respeckful yuers, His Pap."

JOSEPH J. JONASSON, has been acquitted of the awful crime involved in the charge lese majesta. He got into a political dispute at a German restaurant and exclaimed, "I sneeze at the Emperor," whereupon he was arrested for sedition. A man who would use such a silly exclamation of contempt as that ought to have been convicted as a milksop.

THE pacification of France is a policy that remains dear to the German heart. Nothing so wins the good-will of a neighboring nation as an enlightened interest in what it is doing. The arrest of a German spy with plans of the fortifications at Cannes will prove to patriotic Frenchmen that Germany is not indifferent to their progress in the arts and sciences.

A JURY at Syracuse, a short time ago, found a verdict for the defendant, but the foreman blunderingly announced a verdict for the plaintiff, and the court recorded the same and gave judgment accordingly. When the mistake was discovered after the jury's discharge the judge said he could not change the record. The case furnishes a riddle for the lawyers.

AN utterly unprecedented accident was caused by a freak of the wind in Paxton, Ill. During a heavy windstorm the spire of the Congregational Church was raised on the wings of the wind, elevated to a considerable height, and then plunged point foremost through the roof. The novel sight drew vast crowds of spectators, who were axious to behold a church turned wrong end upward.

LAST year Philadelphia built 11,964 houses averaging in cost $2,172 each. In the same time New York built 6,722 houses, the average cost of which was $11,293 each; Chicago, 4,931, averaging $5,083; Brooklyn, 4,500, averaging $5,706; Boston, 4,431, averaging $7,312; Minneapolis, 4,355, averaging $2,006; Washington, 4,048, averaging $1,523; Denver, 2,741, averaging $3,942; Omaha, 2,498, averaging $1,083.

AT a London dinner recently an Englishman inquired as to the size of Texas: "Well," replied an American, "it is about as large as England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Switzerland, Portugal and Greece combined." It became at once evident that the questioner not only disbelieved the statement but was indignant at what he regarded as an attempt to chaff him. The host managed to pacify him.

THE news that comes from Japan of the ravages of cholera is horrible. This scourge is always sufficiently terrible, but the virulence of the epidemic among the Japanese is hideous. Out of 1,732 cases in one district there were 1,138 deaths, in another district 961 cases and 570 deaths, in another 349 deaths out of 600 cases. At the time of the sailing of the China there had been a grand total of 17,068 cases and 9,790 deaths. This is as deadly as those great plagues which swept Europe from time to time in the middle ages.

THE stockholders in the Eiffel tower enterprise are feeling blue just now in consequence of the steady diminution of their receipts. In the season now closing 665,000 francs were taken in. The cost of keeping the tower open was 350,000 francs and 300,000 francs were spent for repairs. Next season the small profit of this season will be wiped out, it is expected, and a considerable deficit will appear in place of it. In view of this probability 168,000 francs were reserved for future use from the profits of the exhibition year.

A COUPLE who had not been long in Millville, Pa., decided at a social party that a "marriage in jest" would be productive of great fun; so they were wedded by a sedate-looking gentleman, who proved to be a justice of the peace. To their amazement they discovered that the knot had been legally tied. They determined to stand by the ceremony, and to make the alliance still more satisfactory, they were remarried by the Rev. Clearville Park. The parties to this strange bridal are Charles Harris, of Bridgeton, Pa., and a young lady whose ante-nuptial name was Miss Nellie Butler, of Norfolk, Va.

THE pressure of natural gas wells in Indiana and Ohio is steadily diminishing, the diminution having amounted to between 30 and 40 per cent. Prof. Orton urges the imperative necessity of cities and States taking action to restrict the wasteful use of gas, but even the strictest regulation, he says, can not prevent the exhaustion of the supply in a few years. In this connection it is interesting to note that the Pennsylvania Company has taken the step of refusing to sell natural gas in Erie, Pa., except by meter, charging 22½ cents per 1,000 cubic feet, in order to prevent waste of gas. No factories are to be furnished at any point on its line, as all the gas will be used for domestic purposes.

A MURDER that is bold and original in conception and artistic in execution procures the murderer, it seems, no special favors at the hands of the jury. Arthur Day invited his wife to take a little pleasure trip to Niagara Falls. On getting there they strolled leisurely down to the bank of the chasm, and while gazing in silent awe at the mighty waters he gave her a push and down she fell into the awful abyss below. Here was a murder full of originality and of startling interest, but its merits—merits that would have excited the liveliest admiration of a De Quincey—counted for nothing with the practical-minded jury, and Day will go to the gallows like the commonest of murderers.

THE interest in lawn tennis is dying out in England, and it may be expected that the craze will soon decline in this country. Immense sums of money are, in the aggregate, spent for the accessories of the sport, and heads of families who are called upon to provide them will doubtless be glad to learn that interest in the game is on the wane. Tennis is not a great game for young people generally, after all. It is very poor sport if not played well, and the number of people who have the activity and skill to play well is small. Besides, tennis is going the way of rowing, cricket, foot-ball and base-ball, and becoming a game for professionals and champions. There are better sports for the lawn than tennis, and among them prominently appear archery and croquet, old-timers which commend themselves highly.

WE read that a Frenchman has manufactured a kind of biscuit containing all the ingredients necessary to support human life. "Portable food tablets," we understand is the name of the new product. Armed with this compact and convenient form of victuals, equally good, be it remembered, for breakfast, luncheon, dinner, supper, or any hybrid meal, one can set off on long excursions with a security that he never had before. A young fellow with a stout pair of legs under him would be able to spend whole days traversing the hills, for example, without being compelled to seek an indigestible meal in some low-lying tavern. It is notorious that people out driving in the country always have to turn around and go home for an early dinner. The "food tablets" will change that. Every well-appointed rural vehicle will hereafter contain a small tin box of this new human provender, which—together with a few oats for the horses—will annihilate time and space, and put back the hands of the clock from midday to morning.

GO ON WITH THE FIGHT.

SO SAY THE ANARCHISTS AT THE "MARTYRS'" GRAVES.

Strong Sentiments Expressed During the Anniversary Celebration at Waldheim Cemetery, Near Chicago—The Hanging of Spies and His Companions Called a Hellish Crime—A Red Flag on Mrs. Parsons' House.

[Chicago dispatch.]

"Weep not for us when gone, but on with the fight!" These last words of one of the executed anarchists are typical of the sentiments expressed by the speakers at the anniversary exercises held at Waldheim Cemetery over the graves of the "martyrs."

The demonstration, while orderly, proved that the feeling of discontent is by no means dead. At each reference to the "innocent boys lying yonder," or to "our brothers done to death," the 1,600 listeners expressed their feelings audibly. In addition to an express wagon load of floral pieces, many of the women carried wreathes, lyres, and other designs. No crosses, however, were to be seen. A handsome wreath of immortelles was the tribute of the socialists of Vienna, Austria.

After circling Market Square twice to get in good marching order the procession moved across Lake street, the bands playing the Marseillaise and other favorite airs of the would-be social reformers. Men wearing crimson "committee" badges sold round-trip tickets printed on crimson cardboard for 50 cents.

At the cemetery a table, a bench, and two chairs had been surrounded by a rope alongside the graves of the "apostles of freedom." The graves were covered with flowers and the table taken possession of by George Schmedinger, who opened the ceremonies by referring to the occasion as "the third anniversary of the murder of our brothers by capitalists."

He then introduced L. S. Oliver, a long-drawn-out individual, who aroused great enthusiasm by heaping abuse upon the Government, the law, its officers, and other signs of civilization now existing in the United States.

"We have no regrets to offer for the buried," he continued. "From their ashes in those graves comes the rebuke to the perpetrators of this hellish crime. It is sounding louder and louder from one end of the land to the other, and across the briny deep. When it culminates it will shake the earth from pole to pole. Remember that those boys stood there and sacrificed their lives for the freedom of those left behind. They faced the hangman with a fortitude that knows no equal. They had no regrets. Their silence has more force than any words spoken here to-day. Our children will wonder at the stupidity or villainy of the people who applauded the work of that horrible sacrifice. Though they build scaffolds at every cross-road we must go on. Courage, friends, onward! Onward! These religious and legal superstitions that ruin our men and women must be swept away. Let us say with Emmett, 'If this be treason, by the eternal gods make the most of it.' Those who drove our boys to death manufactured the law. They were convicted before tried; indicted for murder and convicted of anarchy."

After a brief intermission, during which the singing societies sang and Mauritz Schultz repeated a good deal of Oliver's speech in German, H. E. Bartholmy, the orator of the day, was introduced.

Mr. Bartholmy was formerly a lawyer, but gave up practice for the bench. He is now a tailor. He made a deep impression, his delivery being striking and his diction admirable.

"Emerson once said," he began, "it is not the fact so much as what you think of it. To thoroughly understand a fact, an event, or circumstance, it is necessary to have a clear conception of the preliminary causes, coexisting conditions, and succeeding effects. A minute and accurate knowledge of every battle fought in the late rebellion would necessarily be superficial, chaotic, and incomplete unless it were supplemented by a careful and candid review of the intellectual struggle and political activity which was going on prior to its culmination in a fraternal war. There are no isolated events in the history of the world. The most obscure phenomenon bears an intimate relation to the luminous epoch, and apparently insignificant detail is often an important factor in the consummation of a stupendous scheme. This principle of mutual dependence of one fact upon another permeates all nature, the inanimate world as the social organism, with its beauty and life-giving power, and is the foundation of all institutions, social and anti-social, which have thus far been the scorn and pride of the world.

"I prefaced my address with these preliminary observations in order that you might better understand the position I occupy, or at least endeavor to occupy, in considering what I regard no ordinary, insignificant event, but, on the other hand, the most stirring, significant and pregnant occurrence since the hanging of John Brown—the hanging of the Chicago anarchists.

"I believe that the execution of these apostles of a new and higher civilization was a historical necessity, and by this expression I do not mean that it was necessary to destroy them in order that society might live, to hang them in order that law and order might triumph and the stability of our institutions be preserved. I mean that truth comes into the world through pain and struggle; that the blood of the martyr is the seed of the church; that the gallows is more eloquent in its silence than the orator with his lips or the philosopher with his pen.

"Who can fathom the psychological effect of that wonderful event? Who can measure the momentum it gave to the thinking world? Who can number the hearts that were moved, the minds that were affected, and the converts that were made? At no time in the history of the world did the execution of a man or number of men create such a profound impression. The thinking world shook from center to circumference Nov. 11, 1887. I do not believe that any of the men whose bodies lie moldering in peaceful calm yonder or those in Joliet to-day were guilty of any graver crime than that serious offense in antagonizing public opinion in the cause of freedom, and progress, and humanity. Did I believe that a fiendish appetite to destroy life and property without regard for law, either human or divine, had captured their souls, and that with wanton recklessness they advocated the use of force to ameliorate social conditions, I would not say one word here to-day. But I do not believe this charge is true. The explosion of the bomb temporarily stupefied the public mind, and henceforth no logic, however potent, could eliminate the false impression which the shock created. They cried, 'That settles it. Hang 'em, hang 'em. These Anarchists are bomb-throwers, and if you insist on trying to defend them we'll have you arrested as a suspect.' Reason was temporarily suspended and fear and terror ruled.

"The propagators of Christianity were equally as much despised and persecuted 2,000 years ago as are the Anarchists to-day. The term Protestant in its day was as odious and repulsive as the term anarchy is to-day. The idea of abolition was received with the same criticism, censure and condemnation.

"Now anarchism on its negative side is a protest against the exercise of human authority over the natural and minute liberty of many. It exalts the individual above collective society, and holds that man as an individual is superior to the institutions he has created, that the right of the individual is supreme, and denies to Government the authority to interfere with that right. It would abolish private property in land."

THE NEXT CONGRESS.

The Result of the Recent Elections Shown at a Glance.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

The latest returns indicate that the Democrats, including the Farmers' Alliance men, will have 238 members in the next House, while the Republicans will have but 93. This will give the Democrats a majority of 145, and even if some of the Alliance men should vote with the Republicans the Democrats would still have nearly, if not quite, a two-thirds majority.

The Democratic majority is 145. There are 121 votes from the South. Hence it appears that without a vote from the South the Democrats would still have a majority of 24. This more fully appears from the following summary:

MARRIED HER BROTHER.

Strange Revelations Brought About by the Search for Missing Heirs.

A ROMANCE of unusually unfortunate and pathetic details was discovered when two detectives from Toronto discovered in Mr. and Mrs. Asa Barr, of Kansas City, Kan., the relationship of brother and sister and the heirs to fortunes left by a relative of their deceased mother. Twenty-five years ago two waifs, mere babes, brother and sister, were abandoned by German immigrants at Castle Garden. They were legally adopted, one by Asa Barr, the other by a Mrs. Evans. Mrs. Evans moved soon afterward to Philadelphia where she brought up her adopted daughter, giving her all the comforts of a home and a good education. Twenty years later the boy, grown to manhood and having taken his adopted father's name, moved also to Philadelphia, where he followed the trade of a painter. Chance drew the brother and sister together. Barr was captivated with the girl and wooed, won and married her. Soon after they moved to Kansas City, Kan., where Barr continued in his trade as painter. Not long after Mrs. Evans died. Quickly following her death occurred that of a relative in London, Canada, who died rich and intestate. His fortune would have passed to Mrs. Evans as the nearest relative, but her death having occurred, her adopted daughter became the heir. The attorneys sent detectives to trace the heiress, and in their investigation of the case discovered the true relationship of Mr. and Mrs. Barr to be that of brother and sister. They revealed to the unfortunate couple the facts. The terrible knowledge prostrated Mrs. Barr, and her husband is grief-stricken. Legal proceedings will at once be instituted to sever the marriage bond, and Mrs. Barr will go to London, Canada, to claim her fortune.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

THE new colors in underlinen are yellow and mauve.

TEA and morning jackets all copy the zouave.

BLUE is the color in highest favor this season.

FEATHERS are the chief ornament of everything.

TWENTY feathers are sometimes used on a single hat.

A NEW cloak called the Watteau is a decided novelty.

PANSIES in velvet are used for handkerchief sachets.

SLEEVES are to be bought in Paris ready to slip into any dress.

LINEN collars are very high and stiff, and studs are very small.

QUIET and inconspicuous watch chains are the only ones now in vogue.

THE sailor hat reappears in felt and serges to suit the demands of the season.

THE trimming on toques and capotes is high both in the front and the back.

THE jacket has been popular for some months past, and promises to continue so.

A SMALL pearl or a single diamond in the scarf are the only ornaments suitable for a man of taste.

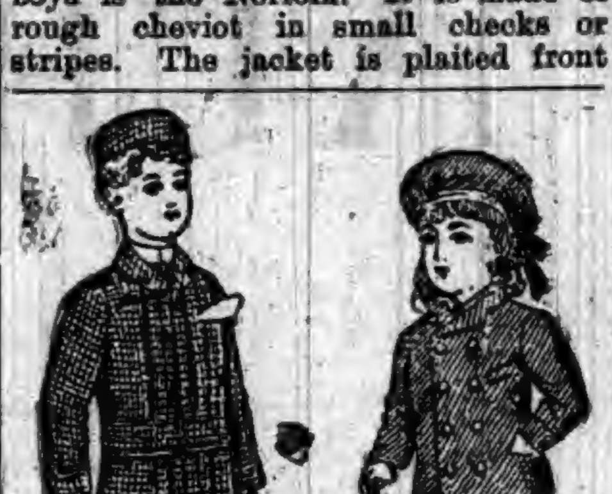
ONE of the new driving coats is of white cloth, has broad double lapels and large white buttons.

A NEW bonnet box concocted in France is arranged with hooks on the side to which the hats are securely fastened.

COSTUMES FOR BOYS.

Suits for Fall and Winter Wear.

A rough-and-ready suit for schoolboys is the Norfolk. It is made of rough cheviot in small checks or stripes. The jacket is plaited front and back and a broad belt of the goods is fastened in front, sometimes with a buckle, but oftener with two buttons. Capes come in colors to match the suit.



THE NORFOLK. THE REEFER.

Warm little suits for winter time are the reefers. The long trousers do away with the stiff leather leggins, which a great many think are injurious to free movement of the limbs. The jacket is short and made with a double breast, and for very cold weather another coat made a little longer and warmly lined is worn over this jacket.

Cattle in the Kitchen.

It is not unusual, in these days of fancy stock-breeding, to hear of stables costing as much to build as ordinary mansions, but, as a rule, the farmers' cattle are not cared for as they should be. Barns are not even rain-tight, and in some new sections cattle are forced to live as best they can through a long winter with no better protection against cold and stormy weather than a "lean-to."

In some European countries they go to the other extreme—notably in Holland, where cattle are housed quite as comfortably as human beings.

The houses in Holland are chiefly of brick, square in shape, one story high, with peaked, red-tiled roofs. On opening the door you are shown into a large room, with kitchen utensils in the glory of highly burnished splendor hanging about a stove or a cooking range, with here a table, a settee, and a few chairs, with a strip of carpet laid on the brick floor.

Ranging down this long room is a row of cow stalls on an elevated brick paved platform, with a trench back of the stalls about two feet wide and two feet deep. This room accommodates from twenty to fifty cows on a well-to-do farmer's place.

In the spring, when the cattle are turned out to grass, the stalls are scrubbed and scoured, the brick pavements painted and the walls and ceilings whitewashed. Lace curtains are arranged at the windows; often flower-pots or little jardinieres are kept there during the summer, and the room smells as sweet and is as clean as the milk-house of the most fastidious farmer's wife.

After the cows are housed in the fall they remain in until spring. You see no cow-yards. The cattle are either in pasture or in their stalls. When turned out, they are blanketed with sea-cloth curiously held in place by ropes running under and around the legs.

This large room mentioned above is occupied jointly by the cows and the servants. Opening from it, you enter a dining and sitting-room, generally carpeted, and, unlike the stable and kitchen, it has wooden floors. From this you enter the bed-rooms.

The beds are in an elevated alcove, with doors in front, cutting it off from the room. The bed is usually a bunk. In this province bedsteads are seldom used.

A Wine Card Subscription on a Church Plate.

There was an astonished rector in a leading New York church recently and there was an astonished parishioner afterward. Whether there will be a third astonished person in the man who was responsible for the surprise of these two is one of those things which remain to be proved.

It came about in this fashion.

Mr. A. is a wealthy gentleman belonging to a leading club in New York. Mr. B. is his intimate friend. One evening B. came upon A. when the latter was signing a lot of wine cards in the library.

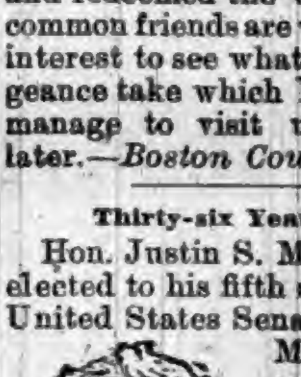
"What are you going to do with those?" B. asked.

"Oh, I hate the bother of signing a card every time I order anything," A. replied, "and I always sign a lot of cards and give them to the steward to fill out when I have things. It saves a lot of bother and they know that whatever they put on one of my cards I will pay."

B. made some remark about the carelessness of this way of doing business and, as he talked, he fingered the signed cards, managing to abstract one of them. This he filled in with a promise to pay $100 and on the following Sunday he dropped it in the plate at the fashionable church which both he and Mr. A. attended. The rector, when the wine card of the Blank Club was brought to his notice with the $100 subscription, was naturally astonished and took it at once to Mr. A. for an explanation. That gentleman came up to the occasion nobly. He paid the money and redeemed the card, but now their common friends are watching with much interest to see what form will the vengeance take which he will undoubtedly manage to visit upon B. sooner or later.—Boston Courier.

Thirty-six Years in Congress.

Hon. Justin S. Morrill has just been elected to his fifth successive term as United States Senator from Vermont.



SENATOR MORRILL.

Mr. Morrill is the oldest man in America in public life. He enjoys the distinction of having served in Congress continually longer than any other American statesman. He has now been a Senator for twenty-four consecutive years. Previous to entering the Senate he served twelve years continuously as a member of the House, stepping from that body on the day of the expiration of his term into the higher branch of Congress. Thus he has an unbroken record of thirty-six years in Congress. Mr. Morrill is over 80 years old, having been born at Stratford, Vt., on the 10th of April, 1810.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors."

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

FATED REAR COLUMN.

EXPLORER STANLEY TELLS A STRANGE STORY.

The African Traveler Answers the Charges Against Him in the Diaries of Major Barttelot and Explains the Horrors that He Has Hinted At.

[New York dispatch.]

Henry M. Stanley was seen by a correspondent at the Everett House, in this city, this afternoon, and from 2 until 5 o'clock he told the story of the inner history of the ill-fated rear column, which story Mr. Stanley gave in the form of a personal statement, personally signed. Mr. Stanley said: "You must expect such attacks as have been made on me and many more, because I know from conversations I have had with the surviving officers that many of them are very sore. Mr. Barttelott's book begins in this way, and it is no different to what others say. On page 2, introductory chapter, 'Life and Diaries of Major Parttelot.' Walter Barttelot says: 'Mr. Stanley has said that the rear column was wrecked by the irresolution of its officers, neglect of promises, and indifference to written orders. To a soldier of the Queen and a gentleman, this is a serious accusation and should not be allowed to pass.' It is on that the book turns; that is the reason for the book's existence. That sentence, which Mr. Barttelot finds fault with, was written in August, 1888, two days after meeting Mr. Bonny and the emaciated remnant of the rear column, when I found 102 men alive out of 271, and only one living English officer out of five. On learning then the details of what had transpired, I wrote that the irresolution of the officers, neglect of their promises, and indifference to the written order caused this awful collapse.

"You ask me to justify that censure which has been the cause of Barttelot's book.

"It is a very serious business, although I can quite understand that people should be answered, as I now propose to answer, in order to determine the truth. It is absolutely immaterial to me what view the people take of this censure, as I had enlisted all these men as my officers, and it was only to me they owed loyalty and obedience according to their contracts. I am alone justified in reserving the right to condemn or to award praise. At the same time, everybody is at liberty to express his or her views on this conduct, but no one could possibly have the same interest as I have to forget a great many offenses and gloss over many things in order to avoid scandal. Probably the best way in order to satisfy any legitimate interest in this question would be to tell the story of the rear column as I heard it at Yambuya, and then the public may understand the shocking effect it had on me when hastening to their relief I was met by this awful revelation.

"First, as to Major Barttelot himself. In this book, his diaries, on page 169, you will find the following entry by Mr. Barttelot: 'Bonny and I talked about our probable action in the event of Stanley doing certain things. I expressed myself openly.' On page 170, under date of Dec. 6, Mr. Barttelot states: 'After dinner Bonny and I walked again and referred to our conversation of Nov. 24. I made a determination never to partake of Stanley's hospitality while out here, as we have a private medicine chest. Jameson, in reference to our conversation of Nov. 24, expressed his determination to act as I should and also refuse Stanley's hospitality.' Wondering what all this meant I asked Mr. Bonny to be frank and say what it all meant. He replied: 'Well, sir, Major Barttelot asked me: "Don't you think Stanley is a Pritchard—a poisoner," and added that he had heard that one of your ways was to leave Africa alone, so that no one would know what had transpired, and he had heard the story of your leaving an officer in some part of Africa and never going back for him.'

"This gives a little insight into the feeling of Major Barttelot and of Mr. Jameson's clear comprehension of what had been hinted at. It seems they had picked up a skit from one of the irresponsible newspapers, saying it was odd Stanley never returned from Africa except alone. I am told Major Barttelot had expressed great curiosity to learn the probable effect of a dose of cyanide of potassium, and at one time was caught testing it on his tongue in order to ascertain whether its taste would be likely to be detected in a cup of coffee. I was told that the person for whom this dose was intended was Salim de Mohammed, the nephew of Tippu Tib. I was told also that Major Barttelot's life was twice saved by Mr. Bonny. Once because Major Barttelot had suddenly seized a woman, who was passing near him, and buried his teeth deep in her shoulder. I was told, also, that frequently Major Barttelot would cause his black followers to shrink before him by standing in their path, in front of the advancing natives, and grinning like a fiend—that is the expression that was used in describing it to me—while he would at the same moment brandish a long cypress staff that had upon it a sharp steel point. He was reported to me to be often running about the camp, prodding his people and then flourishing his stick and hitting indiscriminately without any apparent cause. A Manyama chief complained to me that he had been prodded seventeen times in one day with this steel-pointed staff, and that was two days before Maj. Barttelot was killed by Sanga. The little boy Sondi, whose death I have recorded in 'In Darkest Africa,' was a little fellow of 10 years. Maj. Barttelot refers to him in a general way as a clever little fellow. I have described him in my book as a wise-headed little fellow. Well, Maj. Barttelot was irritated at this little boy one morning and kicked him, and from the effects of that kick the boy died. John Henry, a mission lad, was flogged with 300 lashes and died very soon after receiving them.

"A Soudanese soldier was placed on guard while suffering the torments of hunger, and he stole a piece of the meat of a goat, for which he was flogged 150 lashes. He was sentenced to receive 300, but as he could not stand that at one time they left off at 150 for him to recover, with the threat that he would receive the other 150 as soon as he was in a fit condition. Meantime he was put under guard. One night he broke away, took his rifle, and ran into the bush. Search was made, and the next day or two he was caught, tried, and sentenced to be shot, and the sentence was duly carried into execution.

"There was scarcely one among the Zanzibars who had not been a victim of this system of remorseless punishment. They bore their wounds on back and on limbs, and, of course, as Major Barttelot had sent the medicines away down the river—two full cases—the means to alleviate them was wanting. For the want of these medicines many of the men died. Major Barttelot told Mr. Bonny, I am informed, that he recommended his brother Walter to look after Mr. Troup on his arrival in England, in order that Mr. Troup might not be tempted to disclose what was going on at Yambuya with the rear column. I am told that when the deserters from the advance column reached Yambuya and told Major Barttelot the graphic tale of my being killed by seventeen arrows, he exclaimed: 'Thank God, I shall be made Colonel now.' That statement has been sworn to by a person who heard it in the presence of witnesses.

"Soon after this Major Barttelot declared that he had a project to undertake in connection with Mr. Jameson to pay for the goods under his charge and send the other three officers home, and start them on an expedition of his own. But he was kind enough, I am told, to tell Mr. Bonny confidentially that if he cared to join him and Mr. Jameson he might, and the other two fellows could shift for themselves, meaning Mr. Ward and Mr. Troup. Another project was that Major Barttelot proposed to leave the surplus goods at Stanley Falls in charge of Mr. Troup, while he (Major Barttelot) and Mr. Jameson started on their own hook to explore.

"I am told that Mr. Troup applied to Major Barttelot for medicine while he was ill, and Barttelot refused to give it to him. I also heard there were frequent quarrels among the officers in the camp, and upon one occasion, on account of a protest from Mr. Bonny, Major Barttelot ordered a guard of Soudanese to arrest him. In the log-book signed by Major Barttelot and Mr. Jameson there is one record after another, in each day's entry, how people were ill-treated by flogging going on day after day without any intermission. He bought four slave chains from Tippu Tib for, I believe, £48, in order to put these people in chains. It is said that Major Barttelot confessed to Mr. Bonny that if many of the things done at Yambuya were known in England he would be instantly dismissed from the service. Upon which, it is said, Mr. Bonny asked why did he commit these things, since he knew they would disgrace him in the eyes of his countrymen.

"Now, coming to the day of the tragedy, Major Barttelot, during the hours that intervened between July 17 and the morning of the 19th, had kept the camp in a state of uproar. Things had been going on pretty well during his absence at Stanley Falls, but whatever good feeling existed before his arrival was completely dissipated by his return. He first fostered a quarrel on the Arab who owned the station of Benalya and demanded sixty slaves from the Arabs. I have rejected that word and put carriers in the log-book. The Arab complained that on account of such a large party of whites having come the natives had become frightened and had all run away and could not be induced to stay in the neighborhood. It was therefore impossible to catch any slaves, but Major Barttelot was inexorable, and insisted on a supply being given to him. On the morning of the 19th, at dawn, he heard drumming and singing, and sent some Soudanese soldiers to try and stop it. As this had no effect, he sent his little boy. Still no use, and finally he went himself, taking with him his loaded revolver and that cypress staff with a steel point which had already made such mischief, and with these weapons in his hands he walked to the scene of the singing. There he saw a woman beating a drum, accompanying it with her voice, as is the usual custom with the Manyemas at the dawn of the day, which they always open with wild music. Major Barttelot, on seeing the woman so engaged, ordered her to desist two or three times, accompanying each order with a prod of his steel-pointed staff, then with a blow of the staff, and finally he began to kick her. Attracted by the woman's shrieks, her husband, Sanga, seeing Barttelot with a revolver in his hand, thrust his gun through the loop-hole of a hut opposite to where this was taking place and shot Barttelot dead. Jameson then went to Stanley Falls, where Sanga was proved to have killed Major Barttelot, and was consequently sentenced to death. If Sanga had been brought before me, and if the story as reported to me personally and in writing was shown to be true, I should have acquitted him. Suppose such an incident occurred in the streets of any civilized city, would not any jury have acquitted the husband who thus killed the assailant of his wife?

"Since I have censured the whole, it is perhaps necessary if the foregoing does not contain a sufficient explanation for me to say why I censured them. It must be understood that any one of these officers with a little firmness could have arrested Major Barttelot's proceedings without violence. A mere letter from any one of them protesting against such acts, and threatening to report the circumstance to the committee at home, would have stopped it. It has been clearly shown from many accounts, even Mr. Troup's own narrative shows it, that they disagreed with many things Major Barttelot did, and it is probably true that they protested by word of mouth, but no amount of verbal protests would have the same effect as a written arraignment of these tyrannical proceedings. I am sure had Major Barttelot received such a letter he would never have dared to repeat them. Hence, as this was not done—because I have never seen such written protest—I must needs censure their conduct for not doing the utmost they could in order to stop them, inasmuch as each had declared his intention to be loyal and obedient and think of the interests of the expedition. I will leave this to the judgment of every reader.

"Assuming the facts are as they are stated in the foregoing, can any man conscientiously say that my censure of the rear column was harsh, or unjust, or undeserved, when I state this after hearing all these horrible things, and after seeing the effects of those acts on the rear column—when I said, two days after being brought face to face with this misery, that the rear column was wrecked by the irresolution of its officers, the neglect of their promises and their indifference to written orders?"

"Starvation and continued ill-treatment caused the condition of the men to which I have referred, and produced the ulcers which ate away the flesh so that their bones were almost exposed. Their backs were entirely gone. They were unable to stand, and still they were punished day after day. There is the log-book as it was given to me, with day after day the accounts of the most horrible punishments. The records are signed by all the officers. They did not appreciate the amount of it, making the daily entries, but as I read it over, all together, there it stares me in the face—a record of evils and a continuous story of horrors.

"The reason why I was absent from the camp for fourteen months instead of five, as I expected, was this: I left Yambuya on June 28 and arrived at Albert Nyanza on Dec. 13, 1887. Then I returned, since there was no news of Emin, a distance of 130 miles, where I built a fort, housed the sick, stored the goods and returned to the Albert Nyanza. I arrived there in April, 1888, and stayed there twenty-six days, having found Emin. Then I started to hunt for the rear column, and found it only ninety miles from Yambuya. Emin's own letters, published in 'In Darkest Africa,' explain how he came to my camp, and that he was not taken prisoner by me, as has been charged.

"As to this story about Mr. Jameson. A witness to the incident, a man, drew up in his own handwriting an affidavit, wherein he swears in the presence of witnesses to the following story: That Jameson, returning from Kasongo and conversing with Tippu Tib and another Arab about cannibalism, informed them that he did not believe there was any such thing as cannibalism, because, although he had heard much of it, he had never seen it, and no white man had ever seen it done. In reply to this Tippu Tib is said to have said: 'It is easy enough to prove it if you like.' Upon which Jameson asked how, and Tippu Tib responded: 'Pay for a slave and give it to those men there. They will show you.' Whereupon Mr. Jameson said he was very willing. Twelve cotton handkerchiefs were then given, and with them a little girl aged some ten or twelve years was purchased. She was given to the men, and Mr. Jameson is said to have then told them: 'Now let us see what you can do.' The child was tied so she could not move. Mr. Jameson took a sketch-book in hand, and when he was ready a knife was plunged into the child's heart, and Mr. Jameson is said to have stood there while the life blood spurted over the body. He is said to have made six sketches descriptive of the various scenes that took place, the cutting up and the disposing of the body.

"This appeared so incredible at first that when we expressed doubts a European came forward and said he had seen the sketches. Another European, upon being asked what he knew of it, said Jameson showed the sketches to him also. This was reported to the authorities of the Congo Free State and they took evidence regarding it."

Mr. Stanley concluded by saying: "If necessary I shall be glad to go into a court of law where the whole matter can be ventilated."

Ought to Be Suppressed.

"I don't think that men ought to say any more on the subject of ladies' big hats in theaters," remarked a bright girl to her escort as they were proceeding homeward from a place of entertainment the other night.

"And your reason is?" said the escort, interrogatively.

"Because the men are responsible for a theater nuisance that is three times as bad," said the girl, with considerable spirit. "You know what I mean, for you saw those rude men who sat next to us walk over me six times to-night. They went out between every act. They stepped on my feet, mussed and soiled my dress, knocked my fan out of my lap and stepped on it, knocked my hat awry, and the worst of all, each time that they returned they breathed fumes of liquor and tobacco into my face. I cannot understand how so many men that look like gentlemen can behave with such disgusting rudeness in a public place. Popular sentiment ought to suppress this going-out-between-the-acts nuisance before it makes much fuss over the ladies' high hats."—New York Times.

PHOTOGRAPHER (to lady before the camera)—Look pleasant, please. Brute of a husband—Oh, come, now; art is all right in its place; why not have a likeness look natural, if it's going to be a likeness?

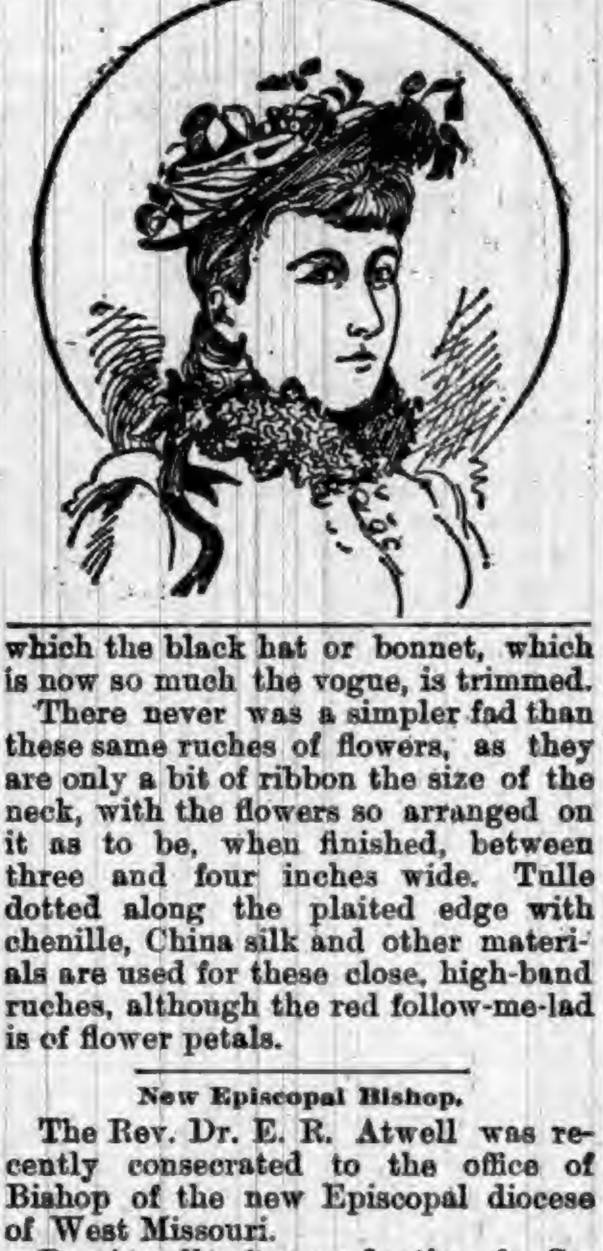
"FOLLOW-ME-LAD."

The Latest Novelty in Ruches.

The latest, daintiest, most chic novelty of the season is the "follow-me-lad." This full ruff ruche of silken flower petals, or some soft diaphanous material, has re-enforced the feather boa, which has taken unto itself added strength and more than double price, and thus it has come to pass that the woman whose neck is too short to wear either one or the other is not quite "the fashion," whatever else she may wear.

Of whatever material they are made they are tied close about the neck with inch-wide ribbon of the same color as the material used, either at the side or in the back with bow and ends, which give them the name "follow-me-lad." The handsomest of these, as seen in the illustration, is of the irregularly cleft, fringe-like petals of the chrysanthemum. The manufacturer of these pretty conceits has taken the liberty accorded to poets and decorative workers and has made them in black and of the various hues of different cloths. Roses, with their exquisite coloring and close-lying, curling petals, yield themselves readily to the forming of these ruches and are particularly pretty for evening wear.

All sorts of flowers are used for follow-me-lads, a pretty fancy being to have them of the same flowers which trim the hat or bonnet. This is particularly pretty for evening or reception costumes when the flowers used are in their natural colors. They are also in black of the same flowers with which the black hat or bonnet, which is now so much the vogue, is trimmed.



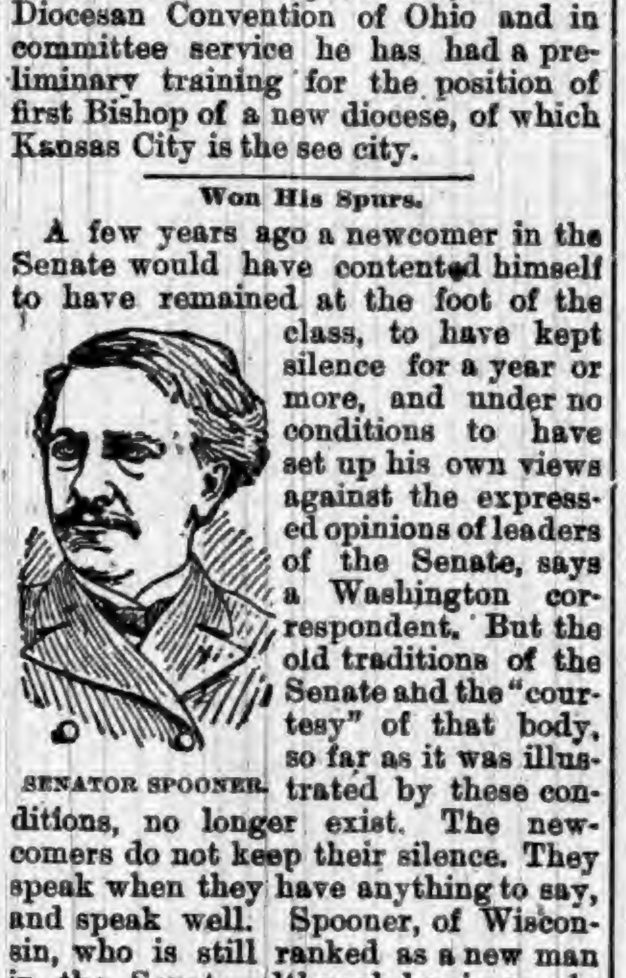
There never was a simpler fad than these same ruches of flowers, as they are only a bit of ribbon the size of the neck, with the flowers so arranged on it as to be, when finished, between three and four inches wide. Tulle dotted along the plaited edge with chenille, China silk and other materials are used for these close, high-band ruches, although the red follow-me-lad is of flower petals.

New Episcopal Bishop.

The Rev. Dr. E. R. Atwell was recently consecrated to the office of Bishop of the new Episcopal diocese of West Missouri.

Dr. Atwell, after graduating in Columbia, graduated with the class of 1864 in the Protestant Episcopal General Theological Seminary.

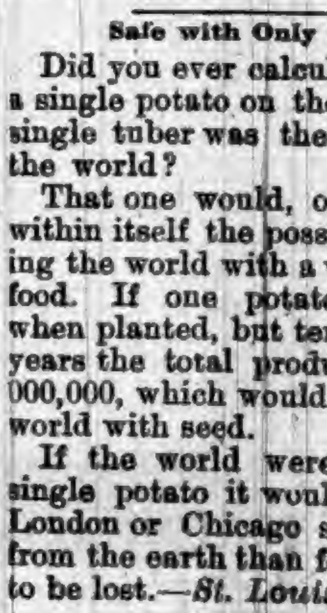
Dr. Atwell has gained prominence during his stay in Ohio, which followed his ministry in Vermont. He has become one of the most popular clergymen of the church in the former ing Committee, and has always been a State. He is a member of the Stand-deputy to the General Convocation, where he has answered to his name at seven successive sessions. He is Dean of the North Convocation, member of the Missionary Committee of the diocese, and recently accepted the post of honor as Canon of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland. In his presidency over the Diocesan Convention of Ohio and in committee service he has had a preliminary training for the position of first Bishop of a new diocese, of which Kansas City is the see city.



BISHOP ATWELL, OF WEST MISSOURI.

Won His Spurs.

A few years ago a newcomer in the Senate would have contented himself to have remained at the foot of the class, to have kept silence for a year or more, and under no conditions to have set up his own views against the expressed opinions of leaders of the Senate, says a Washington correspondent. But the old traditions of the Senate and the "courtesy" of that body, so far as it was illustrated by these conditions, no longer exist. The newcomers do not keep their silence. They speak when they have anything to say, and speak well. Spooner, of Wisconsin, who is still ranked as a new man in the Senate, although he is nearly completing one full term, is already recognized as one of the leaders of that body and has won his spurs. The older men look up to him in many things as an authority. He is one of the recognized orators of the Senate and is ranked as one of the most eminent lawyers.



SENATOR SPOONER.

Safe with Only One Potato.

Did you ever calculate the value of a single potato on the basis that that single tuber was the only one left in the world?

That one would, of course, contain within itself the possibility of restocking the world with a valuable article of food. If one potato would produce, when planted, but ten potatoes, in ten years the total product would be 10,000,000, which would stock the whole world with seed.

If the world were reduced to one single potato it would be better that London or Chicago should be blotted from the earth than for that one tuber to be lost.—St. Louis Republic.

WHAT CURES?

Editorial Difference of Opinion on an Important Subject.

What is the force that ousts disease? and which is the most convenient apparatus for applying it? How far is the regular physician useful to us because we believe in him, and how far are his pills and powders and tonics only the material representatives of his personal influence on our health?

The regular doctors cure; the homœopathic doctors cure; the Hahnemannites cure; and so do the faith cures and the mind cures, and the so-called Christian scientists, and the four-dollar-and-a-half advertising itinerants, and the patent medicine men. They all hit, and they all miss, and the great difference—one great difference—in the result is that when the regular doctors lose a patient no one grumbles, and when the irregular doctors lose one the community stands on end and howls.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

Nature cures, but nature can be aided, hindered, or defeated in the curative process. And the Commercial's contention is that it is the part of rational beings to seek and trust the advice of men of good character who have studied the human system and learned, as far as modern science lights the way, how far they can aid Nature and how they can best avoid obstructing her.—Buffalo Commercial.

It is not our purpose to consider the evils that result from employing the unscrupulous, the ignorant charlatans and quacks to prescribe for the maladies that afflict the human family. We simply declare that the physician who knows something is better than the physician who knows nothing, or very little indeed, about the structure and the conditions of the human system. Of course, "he does not know it all."—Rochester Morning Herald.

I have used Warner's Safe Cure, and but for its timely use would have been, I verily believe, in my grave from what the doctors termed Bright's Disease.—D. F. Shriner, senior editor Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe, Ohio, in a letter dated June 30, 1890.

Money Wanted, Not Blood.

A good story is going the rounds of the German papers about a rich French nobleman who always pretended to be a great friend of the Legitimist claimant of the French throne. It was proposed to get up a loan of twenty million francs to aid the claimant. An agent called on the rich legitimist, who replied pompously:

"My blood is always at the service of His Majesty."

"Yes, but we are not going to start a sausage factory," replied the agent.—Texas Siftings.

That Tickling

In your throat arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease, the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by building up the general health, and expelling the scrofulous taint which is the cause of catarrh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom these diseases seem to have a firm hold. Many unsolicited testimonials prove beyond question that Hood's Sarsaparilla does positively cure catarrh.

Foolish Martyrs.

There are martyrs and martyrs. Some were wise in the loftiest, some are silly in the most improvident sense. The word improvident exactly applies to the latter class, since they neglect to provide against threatened danger. We commiserate, but we cannot respect them. Among the silliest are martyrs to rheumatism, who might have prevented daily and nightly recurring torture by the early use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a blood depurent more efficient in removing the virus of this complaint from the circulation than any thus far brought to the notice of the general community and the medical profession. It promotes greater activity of the kidneys, the channel through which blood impurities, productive of rheumatism, gout and dropsy are principally expelled, and it imparts a degree of vigor to digestion and assimilation which has a most favorable bearing on the general health. It also remedies biliousness, kidney troubles and malaria.

Why He Wanted to See the Author.

The first performance of a new play was a perfect failure, nevertheless a well-dressed gentleman in the audience persisted in calling for the author. Another party sitting alongside of the vociferous gentleman said to him:

"In the name of common sense, why do you persist in calling for the author of this wretched play?"

"That's just it. I must see the man who is capable of writing such rubbish. The author! Bring out the author! Hurrah! Bravo!"—Texas Siftings.

WATER is somewhat purified, or rather cleansed, in freezing, but hard, clear ice contains visible suspended impurities, and more that are invisible. Snow ice is very apt to be unclean, and the only safe way is to keep food and water away from direct contact with ice, unless it be artificially made from distilled water, a recent process that promises to become very popular.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

AT a funeral in Utica, N. Y., the handles of the coffin pulled out, letting it fall to the ground with a crash.

CATARRH.

Not Local, but Constitutional.

Dr. Dio Lewis, the eminent Boston physician, in a recent magazine article says: "A radical error underlies nearly all medical treatment of catarrh. * * * It is not a disease of the man's nose; it is a disease of the man showing itself in the nose—a local exhibition of a constitutional trouble." Therefore, he argues, that the use of snuff and other local applications is wrong, and while they seem to give temporary relief, they really do more harm than good. Other leading authorities agree with Dr. Lewis. Hence, the only proper method of cure for catarrh is by taking a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, reaching every part of the body through the blood, does eliminate all impurities and makes the whole man healthier. It removes the cause of the trouble and restores the diseased membrane to proper condition. That this is the practical result is proven by thousands of people who have been cured of catarrh by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

MUSICAL.

There seems to be little going on in musical circles of late, but there is much talk, among musical people, of the marvelous cure of Miss B——, the high contralto singer, who has long suffered from a severe throat or bronchial affection, superinduced by Catarrh in the Head, and who has been perfectly cured by the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, coupled with the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For all bronchial, throat and lung affections, and lingering coughs, it is an unequaled remedy. When complicated with Chronic Nasal Catarrh, its use should be coupled with the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Of all druggists.

OHIO went republican by about 14,000.

DEMOCRATIC ideas have come to stay.

TEXAS gives 150,000 majority against McKinley.

INDIANA gives a democrat majority of about 18,000.

THE McKinley bill was loaded—and double shotted.

GOLD is being mined quietly near West Union, Ohio.

DEMOCRATS will gain at least three United States Senators.

OREGON, California and Ohio, all went republican by good majorities.

THE tariff is a tax, and the people evidently have found out who pays it.

DIXON, democrat, has carried Montana for congressman, by a small majority.

CANNED meat has advanced ¼ cent a pound, on account of the McKinly duty on tin.

THE people don't want to pay tariff or other taxes that are twice as high as are needed.

NEW MEXICO sends a democratic delegate to congress, and Oklahoma sends a republican.

BYNUM, of the Indianapolis district will be a candidate for speaker of the next House.

MILLS, the famous and able tariff reformer of Texas, will be a candidate for speaker of the House.

REPUBLICANS have one consolation out of the McKinley bill. It put Balm of Gilead on the free list.

McKINLEY was defeated for congress in Ohio. Warrick gets the place, and will vote for a lower tariff.

FROM Warsaw, Ind., we learn that Kosciusko county dropped over 400 on her usual republican majority.

MONTANA sends a democratic congressman, and has one democratic majority in the legislature on joint ballot.

SOUTH DAKOTA, has at last settled the location of her state capital at Pierre, Huron having failed again at this, the second election.

BRECKENRIDGE and Cate are sent back to Congress, from Arkansas. Both were unseated by the republican House during its recent session.

INDIANA legislature as now elected, show about 64, on joint ballot in favor of the democrats. No party ever had so great a majority before.

NEW YORK legislature will be democratic by 7, securing a United States Senator to succeed Evarts and a more fair re-districting of the state.

THE people are becoming educated, and intelligence will prove the death knell of republicanism. Let the campaign of education go right on.

REPUBLICAN papers must not forget that the state debt is still a little over eight millions, and about five millions of this is the result of republican administration.

DEMOCRATIC congressmen, all want to be speaker of the next House. Don't get up a strife, boys. The country will be satisfied with any of you. You can't be worse than Tom. Reed.

J. U. JOHNSON, in the Richmond district, and David Waugh in the Ninth, are all the members of congress the republicans get in Indiana. This gives the democrats eleven out of the thirteen.

SHIVELY, in the South Bend districts has an increased majority. That is what McKinley told them to do when he passed through Michigan City. But he thought he was in the district of Burrows, republican, in Michigan.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN, minister to England is home now and is going to resign his office. He says the expense of living and keeping up style with the English nobility is too great for the salary. He will resume the practice of law in Chicago.

JUDGE McCLELLAN has made a splendid canvass, and has gained at every point. He also made a brilliant record as a working member in congress. The people appreciate a man who works for their interest. Indiana needs such a man for governor.

REPUBLICAN state officers can now find time to work in their offices. As they will soon have to get out, it might be well enough to try and put in a little extra time, to make up what they have lost at horse races and such. We earnestly request the new democratic officers to attend to their duties and try and earn their salaries more honestly than have their republican predecessors.

THE democratic victory in Indiana not only secures the re-election of senator Voorhees, but probably of Turpie, also. Turpie's time expires March. 4, 1893, and there will be another legislature elected before then. But so many democratic senators are already seated by this election, that it will not be possible for the republicans to get control of the two houses, then. So it is a sort of double victory.

IN SEVERAL states it would appear, they have come into the democratic columns to stay. Among them are, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire. Among the possible ones for future elections, are Rhode Island, Iowa, Montana and even Nebraska and Kansas. A presidential election will not turn wholly on Indiana and New York. But both the last named states are now safely in the democratic line.

REPUBLICANS all over the country lay their defeat to the McKinley bill, to the dissatisfaction with Harrison and to the many republicans who staid away from the polls. Democrats believe the new election law helped them greatly as men cannot now be unduly or improperly influenced. It might be added that people are studying political questions more carefully and begin to understand that they must vote for their own interests, and not for the interests of eastern manufacturers.

Election Echoes.

Ezra Foltz says there was something inspiring about this election. He has a rooster, that seemed to take in the situation at once, and began crowing early in the morning, when the good news began to come in, and he kept it up more or less through the day. Along toward nine o'clock that evening he was still crowing, though so tired, he had to sit down. Uncle John McClellan tells a similar story. His roosters began about 3 a. m., and the whole neighborhood soon resounded with their joyful music.

We are all sorry to lose Patterson for he has been an able and energetic officer. But it is seldom safe to run a commissioner for a second term, if he has proved ever so faithful and efficient. It is an office that makes many enemies.

The election was the most quiet and orderly ever seen, and demonstrated fully, the good qualities of the new election law. There was no loud talk, no hustling for votes, or after voters, no man was marched up to the polls and made to vote as some other man wanted him to. There was some effort, so it is reported, that some of the shop hands in town were requested to vote thus and so, but no one knows whether they did or not. It is likely that most of them asserted their manhood, and voted as they pleased. The people found it was not so difficult to vote under the new law, as they had been led to believe. A few had to be shown how to vote, but they soon saw how easy and simple it was, and went into the booth and soon finished the job. Both parties admit it is a great improvement, and that it has done much to relieve Indiana of the odium of being a paradise for boodlers. It shows the wisdom of the democratic legislature, that has secured for the people of Indiana a pure election It leaves Indiana in the front rank in the matter of election reforms, leading all the states of this great republic. It is a proud position, but our state has shown herself worthy of it.

A few votes were thrown out, in some parts of the county, because the voter acting under the instruction to "stamp the head of the ticket," made a very natural mistake and stamped the rooster or the eagle, that being at the head. Of course, such tickets should have been counted, for the "intention of the voter" was plain. And as there is a record of four or more democratic tickets.

We are glad our democrats did not "jollify," for no amount of noise and fun would have made them any happier, or the victory more complete. Such gatherings are apt to run to excess, and certainly do not win votes. The victory was won by reason and facts—by educating the people, and not by noise. We have secured a victory by appealing to the good sense and judgment. It is proper we should show our pleasure in a more dignified way than by bonfires and fish horns. Besides, when we remember the disgraceful conduct of our republican neighbors in 1888, we should feel proud that our own party, has risen to a higher plane. And we believe the better elements of the republican party are ashamed of that demonstration, especially of those hoodlums who daubed the dwellings of respectable people with eggs.

Several respected citizens who have always voted the republican ticket, came out squarely for low tariff, democratic ideas of reform this time, and voted with us.

Those over loyal republicans who started up the British flag business again, down in Concord, can see about how much good their silly tricks did. The democrats gained there. The same remark might be made of the partisans who peddled a card that claimed to show the democrats opposed pensions to soldiers. It was a fraud for no one is so ignorant but he must know every democrat in the north and nearly every one in the south, has steadily voted for pensions.

Where, oh where, are the republican editors who published this on the eve of election? "If a democratic free trader says the McKinley bill will raise prices strike him dumb, etc." Several of our exchanges had this "patent, original" editorial just a few days before the cyclone struck them.

Dr. Teal made a splendid canvass, running ahead everywhere. He came within 47 of of carrying Elkhart county. His majority in his own. Noble county, was 216; in DeKalb 403. This makes his total majority, 672. As Mr. Kelley got the best majority on his ticket, it appears that the people, rather like a democratic legislature. The last legislature made more laws and better for the people, than any other assembly the state ever had, and the people seem to know it.

Now let the democratic legislature enact a reasonable fee and salary law, one that will give an officer a fair compensation for this work and his responsibilities and no more.

Election of Commissioners.

The majorities we reported last week, were inperfect, as the first figures unusually are. They gave Mr. Patterson a plurality 20 of over Mr. Lockwood. The figures at republican headquarters, however gave Lockwood 12 plurality. On Thursday the official count was made, which gave Lockwood a plurality of 2.

The Next U. S. Senate.

After the 4th of next March, the newly elected senators will be counted, and greatly reduce the republican majority in that body. They now have 14 if we count in the new states of Idaho and Wyoming. But after March 4, the republicans will have 45; the democrats 41; Farmers' Alliance, 2. On such questions as the tariff, we presume the Alliance men will act with the democrats leaving the republicans but a clean majority of 2. After March 4, 1893, the democrats are likely to have a majority.

When They go Out.

The secretary of state goes out Jan. 17; clerk of the supreme court, and attorney general, Nov. 23; state auditor, Jan 27; state treasurer, Feb. 10; superintendent of public instruction goes out March 15. State geologist and state statistician being new offices created mainly by the decisions of a republican supreme court, it is not certain when they will be sworn in.

The Deadly Coal Gas.

The family of E. D. Hartman had an almost miraculous escape from death by coal gas last Saturday night. Mr. Hartman was absent in Ohio and the family, consisting of his daughter, Mabel, his son Walter, grown, and the youngest son, Hubert, a lad of about four were left at home. They had that day put up the coal stove in the sitting room, and when they retired about ten o'clock, had no thought of anything being wrong. But about half past two in the night. Mabel was awakened by the little boy, who slept with her, kicking violently and struggling. She could not understand what ailed the child, and Walter, who slept in the next room, hearing the trouble asked what was the matter. She said she could not tell, but something was wrong. Walter told her to light a lamp, which she did, and then fainted as she came out of the room. He ran to help her, and fell fainting as he reached her. She revived and threw water in his face, and as he became conscious, she fainted again. They realized it must be from the stove. He managed to shut the door into the sitting room where the stove stood. By this time the boy had become unconscious. Walter caught him to take him away, when he again fainted and fell. His sister had now revived, and realizing something must be done, she got hold of some water and threw it into Walter's face, reviving him, when she again became unconscious. Alternately fainting and reviving, each assisting the other, they kept up the struggle for life. Mabel however, was not able to get up from the floor where she lay moaning, the gas finally making her deathly sick till she vomited. In the meantime Walter had dragged himself, carrying the limp form of the little boy and had got a window, which he opened and held the lad out into the fresh air and the falling rain. At this point, Mabel called for help, telling him that as soon as he could get done with Hubert, come to her. He saw something desperase must be done. If the boy was laid down in the room, he would soon die. Taking the chance of hurting him, he, with his remaining strength threw the child out onto the ground which was four feet below, and then tried to help his sister. The family of J. E. Rose, on the next lot, heard the trouble, and had called to see what was the matter. Not getting any satisfactory answer, except that they were in some terrible trouble, they hurried over. Mabel was gotten up, the windows opened, and Walter, recovering somewhat, went out to find the boy. He found him partly sitting up where he had fallen, but unconscious, and merely moving his arms. He carried the child to Mr. Rose's and started back, but fell in a faint when about half way. The night was dark and in the confusion, he was not found for a time. On recovering, he was got into the house, and all means taken to revive all of them. Dr. Swarts was summoned, and all three were soon out of danger, though they suffered more or less all that day. It was found the escape of gas was caused by the ashes having choked up the draft in the bottom of the stove, which is a base burner. It was a close call, and nothing but the little boy's struggles and later, the courage and presence of mind of the elder brother and sister, saved the three from certain death.

In a Japanese Theatre.

From "An Artist's Letters from Japan," written and pictured by John La Farge in The Century, we quote as follows: The doctor took us on Sunday afternoon to his club—whose name, I think, means the perfume of the maple—to see and listen to some Japanese plays, which are given in the club theatre built for the purpose. We went there in the afternoon, passing by the Shiba temples, and our kurumas were drawn up at one end of the buildings. There everything was Japanese, though I hear stories of the other club and its ultra-European ways—brandies and sodas, single eye glasses, etc. However that may be, on this side we were in Japan without mistake. We sat on the steps and had our shoes taken off, according to the Japanese fashion, so as not to injure mats, and we could hear during the operation long wailings, high notes and the piercing sound of flutes and stringed instruments; the curiously sad rhythm mingled with a background of high, distinct declamation. We walked in, with careful attention to make no noise, forgetting that in our stocking feet we could have made none had we wished, and we found the doctor's place reserved for him and us, and marked with his name, writ large.

Other low boxes, with sides no higher than our elbows as we sat on the mats, divided the sloping floor down to the stage. The stage was a pretty little building projecting into the great hall from its long side. It had its own roof, and connected with a large gallery or bridge, along which the actors moved as they came on or disappeared, in a manner new to us, but which gave a certain natural sequence and made a beginning and an end—a dramatic introduction and conclusion—and added greatly to the picture when the magnificent dresses of stiff brocade dragged slowly along to the cadence of the music.

A quiet, sleepy appreciation hovered over the scene; even the devotees near us, many of them older people and belonging to the old regime, showing their approval or disapproval with restrained criticism. I could see without turning my head the expression of the face of my neighbor, a former daimio, a man of position: a face a Japanese translation of the universal well known aristocratic type—immovable, fatigued, with the drooping under lip. Behind him sat former retainers, I suppose—deferential, insinuating remarks and judgments to which he assented with inimitable brevity.

Still, I thought that I could distinguish, when he showed that the youthful amateurs—for most of the actors were non-professional—did not come up to a proper standard, that his memory went back to a long experience of good acting. And so catching are the impressions of a crowd that I myself after a time believed that I recognized, more or less distinctly, the tyro and the master, even though I only vaguely understood what it was all about. For I need not tell you that the libretto would have been still more difficult for me than the pantomime before me, and very often it was but pantomime, the actor making gestures to the accompaniment of music, or the declamation of the choregus, who told the poetic story.

Trading in Damascus.

The oriental mind is disposed to mingle all the dealings of life with an amount of "sentiment" which would be scorned by the more literal business man of the west. A visitor at Damascus gives in Murray's Magazine the following description of a horse trade in that city:

A long dispute took place between the intending purchaser and the owner as the former attempted to beat down the price by a few piasters. The owner, however, seemed very sure of making a favorable sale, even if the present customer should withdraw. So he remained silent, with an occasional inconsequent remark, such as, "It matters not," "Wallah, whom am I to argue with thee?" "Wallah, my horse is as dust; take it without money."

All these expressions are equivalent to cold negatives, and might naturally have exasperated the other man, who had been wasting oceans of rhetoric in persuasion. Finally, he, in this turn, exclaimed, with heart warming show of generosity and philanthropy:

"Wallah, are we not brothers? Wherefore all this noise? Is it for money? Allah, why bid! You want 1,600 piasters? Here is the money. Take it!" Then he pressed the bulk of treasure into the other's hand and turned away. "Never mind about your horse. I care not for it. Shall we part enemies because of money?"

At this point the other, who now had his money secure, ran after his customer, fell on his neck, and, kissing him on both cheeks, assured him that the horse would henceforth be worthless to him; that, since his brother wished for it, he must take it as a present. And so the bargain was concluded.

Solvent Power of a Liquid.

A very simple experiment may be performed to show the solvent power of a liquid, namely, by taking a small vial of camphor water or a quantity of alcohol, with as much camphor dissolved as it will hold, and then adding to this a drop of water; it is as clear as water itself until a drop is given, when the solution is weakened so much that it cannot hold the camphor longer in solution and begins to give it up in a white cloud, allowing it to rain down to the bottom of a glass. Now, about the same process as this is effective when a specimen of drinking water is to be examined for a test of organic matter, which it may contain in solution. The solvent power for this impurity is reduced by giving the liquid something better to dissolve, or something to dissolve for which it has a greater liking, sugar being one of the best known substances in this respect: thus, when a spoonful is added to a flask, and corked up tight in the sunlight, the water drops the organic matter and adopts the ingredient it has a greater affinity for—all that is required being to watch for the minute black specks which will be seen floating in every portion of the liquid when water for drinking purposes is to be tested for purity.—Philadelphia Record.

The National Democrat which was established in Washington one year ago by Edmund Hudson, with the indorsement of many of the great leaders of the party, has entered upon its second year with a circulation of 40,000 each week. This is perhaps the largest circulation ever attained by a weekly newspaper during the first year of its existence. The National Democrat occupies a field of its own, and one that too long remained unfilled. It gives a complete record of political information, including the most important speeches that are delivered by democratic leaders in Congress and on the stump. It is rendering the party an important service, and should be read by all who wish to keep fully informed in regard to public affairs and who mean to defeat the wicked scheme of the republican leaders to secure permanent control of the Government, in spite of the fact that they are and must remain, the minority party in this country.

A sister of Frank Britt, night operator at the Wabash station, visited him over Sunday, returning to her home Tuesday. She resides at Bryan, Ohio.

MARRIED: October 30, 1890, at the residence of the bride's grandmother, William Saunders and Celesta Greenawalt both of this county, by Elder James Barton.

James Campbell, got hurt at Ober's mill this week while peeling logs. One of his fingers had the flesh cut off along the back. He will have a sore hand for some time.

MARRIED: November 5, 1890, at the residence of the bride's father in Fairfield township, William Duram of Michigan, to Miss Emma Harper of the same state by Elder James Barton.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

Dr. D. L. Miller, of Goshen, spent Sunday in Auburn, with his wife and the family of W. P. Harter. Dr. Miller was for a few months postmaster at Goshen, and is now enjoying sweet revenge for being prematurely turned out.

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

There is no more fruitful source of disease than vitiated blood. It involves every organ and function of the body, and if not immediately corrected by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, sooner or later leads to fatal results. Be warned in time.

Mr. Sawvel, the new treasurer, was here Monday looking for a house. He will try and get one of average size, as his family is small. Mr. and Mrs. Sawvel are people of the highest respectability and we feel sure our people will make them heartily welcome.

A. E Tanberg, of Jonesville, Wisconsin, has located in Auburn, and will engage in the abstract business here. He is located with Rickel & Sprott at present. He is a young man of evident push and energy, just such as will prove a valuable acquisition to our little city.

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Gibson. Program, "Outline History of England," Mrs. Moody; "Our English," Miss Ramsey; "The Knight of the Round Table," Miss Weaver; "Studies in Astronomy," Mrs. Clifton; "Select Reading," Mrs. Gibson.

The Cochran Brothers, B. F. and W. H. are doing a thriving business in contracting and building. They have lately finished Wash Link's dwelling, one for Al. Houghton on South Jackson street, and another for Dave Matheny. Any one who wants to build, should see the boys about it.

L. Bowers and Ed. Weeks have just returned from the west, having been out to visit Cyrus Olinger, at Mt. Ida, Kansas. They had a nice trip and pleasant time generally. We believe this is Mr. Weeks' first visit to that state, and he is favorably impressed. They found Mr. Olinger and family well. Crops there had been good except corn, and that was not so very poor.

Mr. and Mrs. Coffinberry will be gladly received as citizens of Auburn. They are social, neighborly and stand at the top in the best of society at their present home. They will be missed from Garrett, but Auburn will gain by their presence here. As citizens of Auburn, their influence will be valuable to create and keep up cordial and social relations between the two towns. Our citizens will be glad to assist them in this.

A. D. Goetschius, sr., one of the best known of DeKalb's early citizens came back from Montana this week. He has been out there a number of years, having moved there intending to make his home where several of his sons had located. About two years ago, his wife, and youngest son, A. D. Goetschius jr., returned, and have been on the old home farm in Jackson township since. We believe Mr. G. remained west because he had better health in that section. He was county commissioner of this county several years ago. He will find many friends to welcome him back to DeKalb.

Uncle John Miller and his good wife, leave their home near Corunna this week and go to Decatur for a visit with their children. Then they go to Roann in Wabash county, then to Goshen, and then to Kendallville, stopping each time a few weeks with the children. Then they will come here for a time, and visit his son L. J. Miller, and daughter Mrs. Isaac Johnson and their families, thus spending the winter among the children. We hope this worthy old couple will pass the most pleasant season of their lives. We shall do our part to make the time pass pleasantly by sending their favorite, the COURIER, after them as was done during the war—"follow up regiment."

See Wilson's new advertisement. He believes in giving good bargains.

J. B. Hoover is still feeble, though he gets out on the streets now and then.

The Lagrange Democrat was lively in its last issue. In fact it generally is.

Mrs. J. L. Davis entertains a number of her lady friends to a tea this evening.

Simmons Liver Regulator always cures and prevents indigestion or dyspepsia.

Dr. S. B. Johnson, dentist, will be in his office at Waterloo on Thursday of each week.

J. W. Jackman has thanks for a new subscriber, his neighbor Mr. Lower. These things all help.

Newton Henderson, formerly of Jackson township, is working in town now, at the Auburn Machine works. He is a son of the new commissioner.

W. H. Kiblinger went to Washington, D. C. this week to meet Mrs. K. and Katie and accompany them home. They will be back the last of this week.

The latest subscriber of absent DeKalb folks is Perry Link, Benzonia, Mich. They all like to hear from home, and know the COURIER is the one that serves them best.

W. H. McIntosh had some choice roses in bloom out in the garden, a rare thing for November. Mrs. McIntosh has thanks for a nice bouquet of them for the COURIER office.

John Leasure's family had a narrow escape from a coal gas accident last week. As the windows were left open no harm was done except to the house plants, which were killed.

Samuel Foltz, of Jackson was up here with potatoes last Friday, and the wagon box sprang a leak scattering several bushels along Jackson street. They are now valuable, and he had to pick them up.

James Henderson and wife called last Friday to shake hands with the COURIER over the result of the election. Mr. Henderson will be the next commissioner from his district, and will, we believe, be an efficient officer.

S L. Schoup and wife, of Garrett made us a friendly visit Friday. Mr. S. is a son of our friend Schoup of Corunna, and Mrs. S. is a daughter of the late Samuel Foltz, and of course both are friends to the COURIER.

Rev. N. J. Myers, of Elkhart, will deliver a free lecture at the Lutheran church, on Tuesday next, Nov. 18, at 8 p. m. entitled, "Friendship Illustrated from the Life of Pythias." All citizens and especially K. P. folks and their friends are invited.

The first successful blood-purifier ever offered to the public was Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Imitators have had their day, but soon abandoned the field, while the demand for this incomparable medicine increases year by year, and was never so great as at present.

Court is going on. The assault and battery case from Garrett has taken the time so far this week. In the case of Benner and Williams, failing to get a new trial here, has been taken to supreme court. Sheriff Plum took the two men to Michigan City Tuesday.

Ford & Maxwell at the new feed store on West Eighth street are starting out nicely. They already have a good trade in feed, flour, corn, oats etc., and expect to add coal of all kinds to their business. It will be a good thing if our people can get coal at all times as needed.

Treasurer-elect Sawvel, will sell his personal property at auction, on Wednesday of next week at his residence in Franklin township, 4 miles, northwest of Butler. The sale will be a large one, as he is getting ready to move to Auburn, and we suppose his farm crops will be disposed of with many other things.

G. W. Downs, now a citizen of Clay Center, Kansas, was over here last Tuesday. He has been in the county a month or so building and making other improvements on his Fairfield farm. He gives an interesting account of the overdone booms in Kansas, but thinks that a great country after all. His family are well and prospering.

The COURIER's election pictures last week, captured the public heart. They were rapidly taken up, and though we put out many extra copies, there were not half enough. The Garrett boys, were especially anxious to get them. The people of that live town ought to have a newspaper. They would appreciate it and give it a good patronage.

We have received late copies of the Anaconda, Mont., papers claiming that state would go democratic. They were sent by our friend Lee Goetschius. About the same time we had a letter from Geo. B. Goetschius predicting a "democratic victory in Montana, next Tuesday." We are glad to note that both were correct in their predictions, and have no doubt they did their full share to make it so.

Even the little urchins are highly taken up with the Australian system of voting. Quite a number of them on the "south side" arranged their "chute" and "booth", and went about familiarizing themselves with its requirements as if their votes counted. Boys will be boys, and most boys are inclined to copy the examples set by older ones. Hence, it is important that the impressions made on the young minds should be of the proper character.

Warsaw Daily Times: Prof. O. W. Nottingham has a grand penmanship school here. Over one hundred students are in attendance. The superintendent of our schools Prof. T. J. Sanders, the teachers, as well as all the pupils, speak in the highest praise of him. Prof. Nottingham is no doubt an exceptionally fine pen artist, a faithful teacher, and above all, a gentleman in the highest sense of the word. We hope Prof. N. will remain with us and give the commercial course which he sometimes gives, as we know it to be of great benefit to our young people.

Gene McDowell got his head banged in one of the machines at the Auburn Wind Mill factory this week. We did not learn the particulars.

Rev. A. W. Lamport of Richmond, Ind., made a short visit with his cousin Rev H. M. Lamport Monday of this week. Mr. Lamport used to preach here about 20 years ago.

W. L. Penfield has fully recovered and will from this, be able to attend to his law practice. His clients will find him hereafter in his office ready to attend to their business.

PILES, PILES, PILES: Loose's Red Clover Pile Remedy, is a positive specific for all forms of the disease. Blind, bleeding, itching, ulcerated and protrupiles. Price 50c. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

We publish this week a full report of the votes cast in the county giving each precinct. This should be preserved for reference. The table will not be kept, but we shall have a limited number of copies struck to accomodate our friends.

Mr. Coffinberry will build a residence of his own when he moves to town. That is a good plan, much better than renting. His bond is already filed for $10,000. Mr Sawvel will have his bond of $150,000 ready for the commissioners when they meet, which is to-morrow, Friday.

Sheriff Plum was at Goshen yesterday to meet the sheriffs of Noble and Elkhart counties to certify to the vote on joint representative. The law requires them to meet in the oldest county. Brouse's vote in the three counties was 9,193: Teal's 9,755, giving Teal a majority of 562.

In the course of human economy, there is one class of men, who, from all appearance seem to be troubled with but little, if any, of the world's cares, sorrows and despondency. They always appear jolly and good natured, and everything, no matter how much inconvenience it may cause them, seems to be all right and "just as it should be." They are the first to get hold of the "latest" in the line of humorous gags, and the jokes unceremoniously perpetrated are as numerous as the laughs they are calculated to create, at the expense of unfortunate victims. Of all men, there are but few that can compare with the modern barber. He is generally a terror to humanity, and leaves no thought unturned, that has any tendency to make somebody the subject of a season of mirth. A few evenings ago B. F. Stahl, the "south side" barber, was in the heighth of his glory, (?) and kept his patrons in an uproar during the whole evening. His instument of mirth was an ingeniously constructed rubber snake, whose "snaky" appearance was sufficient to startle the coolest nerve, when not expecting a thing of that kind. Let a man go in and sit down, about the first thing he would know a nasty looking "copperhead" snake would uncoil its length across his lap—a yell, a shudder and sensations not unlike the sliding of an icicle down one's back were common, and many expressions not altogether in conformity with virtue found utterance. The joke was a huge one, and apparently enjoyed by the victims as well as by those who were "onto the racket," and made it a point to "smile" noisily. All are agreed upon the point that "snakes" and "barbers" are creatures that have the "dead-wood" on the outside world, so far as having the ability to make a man shiver is concerned

Experience Social.

Remember the experience social at the M. E. church next Friday evening. A novel and interesting program has been prepared. Everybody invited. Admission 10 cents.

Good Farm for Sale.

The Samuel Goodwin farm one mile west of Waterloo containing 115 acres, in good condition, good house and barn, and other conveniences. Will be sold on reasonable terms. For information call at the farm or write to J. W. Goodwin, Pleasant Lake, Indiana. tf

Bill of Fare.

The M. E. ladies will place before you at their dinner Thanksgiving day the following bill of fare: Biscuit, soup, potatoes, roast turkey, turnips, pickles, celery, cold-slaw, plum pudding, mince and pumpkin pies, cranberry sauce and fruit, tea and coffee. Don't forget the date.

Dr. D. O. Fruth.

(Goshen Times.)

We have been so often bored by persons traveling over the country, professing to be endowed with abilities to cure every disease that flesh is heir to, that we require considerable satisfaction in regard to a traveling physician's reputation before we are willing to commend them to the public. After a long business acquaintance with Dr. Fruth and considerable knowledge in regard to his success, during the many years that he has been traveling through this part of the country, we are satisfied that he is an honorable exception to the common rule, and those who trust themselves in his hands may rely on a speedy cure, if their disease is curable. His large success in the past is ample evidence of his skill as a medical practitioner. He charges nothing for consultation, and deals frankly and fairly with all who call upon him for advice, and gives no encouragement unless confident of his ability to afford relief. We believe we are doing a service to such as may be troubled with chronic complaints, to call attention to the fact that Dr. Fruth now a regular visitor for years, will be again at the Swineford House Auburn, Tuesday, November 18th, from 1 to 9 p. m.

County Officers.

The first county officer to change is the Auditor. Mr. Walters commission dates from the 14th. of November, which is Friday of this week. But the commission for Mr. Coffinberry may be delayed several days later, as the governor will be very busy signing such papers for a week or two. The treasurer, Mr. Davis, having merely been appointed, holds his place till his successor is elected and qualified. We presume Mr. Sawvel will be ready in a week or so. Mr. Hook and Mr. Plum keep right on of course. Mr. Williams the new recorder and Mr. Moody the next clerk, must wait nearly two years or about the 25th. of October, 1892, Mr. Crane and Mr. Bishop serving till that time. Mr. Henderson, the new commissioner for the southeast district will take his seat at the beginning of the December term, that being the date at which Mr. Platter began. Mr. Lockwood, the new commissioner for the southwest district must wait a year later, as Mr. Patterson's three years do not expire till the first week in December of next year. Mr. Miser, the new coroner, will take his office when his commission comes.

It Can't Tell the Truth.

MR EDITOR: The Dispatch last week stated that the "Wagoner ditch" was a $4,000 debt of the town, etc. The editor when he conceived that idea, knew it was false when he penned it, he knew when he read it that it was false, and he knew that if his readers believed the statement that they were reading a false statement. He knows that every member of the town board, democrats and republicans, knows it is not true, and he knows that every man and woman interested in that ditch knows the statement to be false. The Wagoner ditch will cost the town about $750 or $800.

EPITOME OF THE WEEK.

GATHERED BY TELEGRAPH FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Terrible Railroad Accident in England—Died From a Rat Bite—Slave Days Recalled—Government Buildings at Honduras Captured by Insurgents—Too Miserly to Buy Food.

CAPITOL CAPTURED.

Government Building in Honduras Taken with a Slaughter of State Troops.

A special from San Salvador says: Honduras is again the scene of a revolution. The garrison of Tegucigalpa revolted, and under the leadership of Gen. Longina Sanchez took possession after hard fighting, of the capitol building and arsenal. Since then street skirmishing has been of daily occurrence, and Sanchez and his forces now have President Bogran surrounded in one of the wards of the city, and it is believed he will be forced to surrender unless other garrisons arrive at the scene of the revolt within two or three days. The garrisons of inspection of the Salvadorian and Nicaraguan frontiers are being pushed toward the capital by forced marches, only enough soldiers being left behind to prevent, if possible, uprisings. Several other army men have issued their pronunciamento and are hurrying with their forces to aid Sanchez. It is believed that the revolution will become general and Bogran be forced, if not captured, to leave the country. President Ezeta in regard to the revolution in Honduras, said it was fully confirmed by dispatches which showed the reported revolution in Tegucigalpa, adding details that the slaughter in the taking of the state building and arsenel were very heavy.

GUESSING CONTESTS

Are Not Violations of the Lottery Law.

Attorney-General Miller has sent to the Postmaster-General an opinion in answer to an inquiry by the postoffice department as to whether advertisements in the newspapers of "guessing contests in its various phases are in violation of the lottery law passed by Congress." The case is based upon clippings from the Cincinnati Enquirer offering money prizes to the persons sending the first correct number of votes or guessing the nearest number of votes cast for the Democratic or Republican candidate for Secretary of State of Ohio. After carefully construing the law Attorney General Miller decided that the case in question is not a violation of the lottery law as the offer is made in good faith. He is quite clear, he says, that estimates made upon the probable polititical action of these people in a pending election, cannot be said to be dependent upon chance within the meaning of the statute and therefore the enterprise in question was no infraction of the law.

TEN KILLED.

A Terrible Railroad Accident in England.

London special: News has been received here of a terrible accident on the Great Western Railway at Norton Fitz Warren station, near Taunton. A heavy ladened goods train crashed into a special passenger train from Plymouth, which was conveying to London the passengers from the Cape of Good Hope who had arrived by the steamer Norham Castle. Ten persons are reported killed and eight injured, several seriously. The utmost anxiety prevails among those who had relatives or friends on the Norham Castle to ascertain the names of the victims. Up to the present time, however, it has been impossible to obtain anything more than the most meager general particulars. The railroad company promptly dispatched relief trains with a large number of physicians on board to the scene of the disaster.

Riots in the Argentine.

Advices received at Paris by cable are to the effect that serious election troubles have taken place in the city of Rosaric, in the Argentine Repulic. Party feeling ran so high that frequent fights occurred between the supporters of the various candidates. The situation finally became so serious that the municipal authorities were unable to maintain order. The troops were then called upon and order eventually restored, but not until several persons had been killed and many wounded.

Slave Days Recalled.

An interesting relic of slavery days is the case of Elizabeth Betts against the executors of Elijah Harvey, deceased, at Kansas City, Mo. In February, 1859, Elijah Harvey gave to his daughter, Mrs. Betts, a girl slave, whom Mrs. Betts retained a number of years. The girl finally became unmanageable and was put up for sale. Harvey offered to take back the girl and gave his daughter $600 for her. The slave was returned upon these terms. Harvey died in 1887, without having fulfilled the contract. After her father's death Mrs. Betts filed a claim against the estate, and a judgment in the lower courts has just been sustained by the appellate court.

Too Miserly to Buy Food.

It has been learned that John Bischoff of Jersey City, who died last week of starvation, had property valued at $60,000, besides $10,000 in the bank. He lived the life of a miser and would not allow his wife to purchase the barest necessaries. He had one daughter who married against his wishes and he left her one house valued at $3,000. The remainder of his estate goes to his widow.

His Sentence Commuted.

The President has commuted to seven months' imprisonment the sentence of one year's imprisonment imposed for counterfeiting on Simon Shook by the Illinois Circuit Court in June, 1890.

Railway Collision.

Yarmouth (Mass.) Special: An accident occurred on the Hyannis branch of the Old Colony Road. A wreck train from Hyannis collided with the regular passenger train from Yarmouth at Curoe, near the Camp Station. The badly injured are S. D. McDonald, Charles Eldridge, Henry Howe, Freeman Chase and some others slighsly hurt.

Reign of Terror.

Terror reigns in the Chinese quarters of San Francisco, Calif. The members of the Sue Yong Tong Company and of the Hop Sing Tong Society are on the lookout to take each others lives. The gate of battle was thrown down, and Wong Fook Choy was shot and killed in the Washington Street Theater by Dick Ah Ting, while defending an actor from blackmail. The murderer, who was a member of the Sue Young Tong, escaped. Bah Gay, of the latter society, was shot and killed, and comrade Hi Choy Pu was set upon and badly beaten at the same time. Not content with taking a life for the one they had lost, the Hop Sing Tongs exacted another, and the night of election day Hark Ah Yoey was shot and lies at the Receiving Hospital in a dying condition. The Chinese Consul has addressed an order to the warring organizations commanding them to refrain from quarreling.

HORRIBLE CRIME.

A Mother Kills One of Her Children, Attempts the Life of Another and Suicides.

One of the most horrible crimes which has been committed in Philadelphia for many years was perpetrated early the other morning in West Philadelphia. A mother, undoubtedly crazy on religion, killed one of her children, attempted to murder another, and then tried to end her own life. Joseph Lamprecht and his wife, Barbara, had seven children, ranging in age from six months to eight years. Mrs. Lamprecht called her husband to breakfast and after he had finished the meal he started for his work. He had barely left his home when his wife caught up a large butcher knife and brandished it over her head, ran from one room to another, muttering incoherently and declaring that she wanted to go to Heaven. Mary, her 6-year-old daughter, had come down stairs to bid her father good-bye, and she was the first of the children whom the crazy mother saw. Catching the little one up in her arms, she forced the child's head back, and then deliberately drew the knife across her throat. Then she dropped the little one to the floor and made her way to the room occupied by herself and husband, and in which her 6-months-old babe was lying asleep in the bed. She drew the knife across the infant's throat and then called the neighbors for assistance. When they arrived the babe was dead, and the mother lay beside it with a gapping wound in her throat. The mother and Mary were taken to the hospital and both will die.

AN INDIANA MOB.

Masked Men Capture the Lafayette Jail.

LAFAYETTE [Ind.]—Special.—George Bennett, the "scab" engineer and painter, who killed ex-Patrolman William Scott and wounded John Werkhoff, a locomotive fireman, is a double murderer, Werkhoff having died of his injuries. The death of both these men exasperated their friends beyond endurance, and shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning a band of masked men, numbering between fifty and seventy-five, visited the county jail, intent on lynching Bennett, who was supposed to be confined therein. One of the lynchers personated a policeman, and, giving his name as such, induced the turnkey to open the door, and immediately the crowd rushed in, all of whom were armed. They found the keys to the cells and searched everywhere for Bennett, but he was not there. Sheriff McKee was suspicious of danger, and early in the evening removed him to a place of safety. The mob was well organized, and there was no talking nor hurrahing. The jail was guarded by masked men, and no one was permitted to go near the building unless he was known to be in sympathy with the lynchers. Bennett claims to have been persecuted because he took part against the strikers in the C., B. & Q. Railway trouble, and that he was hounded about until he was unable to make a living, either as an engineer or a house-painter. He has seemed indifferent to his fate ever since his arrest, but he was glad the Sheriff protected him.

Frightful Fire.

A fire which started in the Rudd House at Owensboro, Ky., fanned by a high wind, nearly destroyed the entire business portion of the town. As soon as the fire was discovered the guests in the hotel were aroused and an awful scene of panic ensued, the half-dressed inmates rushing to and fro trying to find a way of escape from the doomed building. W. H. Harris was killed by jumping from a third-story window of the hotel, and another guest, who jumped from a fourth-story window, received injuries from which he will die, while three guests were fatally burned.

A high wind was blowing at the time the fire originated, and after the hotel had been swept away the flames reached the Bank of Commerce building next door, and that, with the buildings occupied by Marks & Dreman, grocers, and Quicksert & Co., merchant tailors, were soon in ashes. The building on the corner, occupied by the Owensboro Messenger, was the next to be attacked and in a few minutes it was destroyed. The fire then spread around the corner and burned the buildings occupied by Marker's saloon, Smith, butcher; Williams, furnishing goods; John Reinhart, furniture; A J. Wadley's fine stone building, and Evans' livery stable.

President's Proclamation.

By the grace and favor of Almighty God the people of this nation have been led to the closing days of the passing year, which has been full of the blessings of peace and the comforts of plenty. Bountiful compensation has come to us for the work of our minds and of our hands in every department of human industry.

Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 27th day of the present month of November, to be observed as a day of prayer and thanksgiving; and I do invite the people upon that day to cease from their labors, to meet in their accustomed houses of worship and to join in rendering gratitude and praise to our beneficent Creator for the rich blessings He has granted to us as a nation, and invoking the continuance of His protection and grace for the future. I commend to my fellow-citizens the privilege of remembering the poor, the homeless and the sorrowful. Let us endeavor to merit the promised recompense of charity and the gracious acceptence of our praise.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord 1890, and of the independence of the United States the 115th.

[Seal.] BENJAMIN HARRISON.

By the President—JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State.

A Colored Brute.

A Democratic celebration at Fairmount, Ind., in honor of the election was marked by a bloody riot. While the procession was moving along the principal street a negro of herculean proportions ran to the procession brandishing a club and revolver, and commenced firing and knocking right and left. Al. Powell, a white teamster, who was walking in the procession, was shot and instantly killed. The greatest excitement ensued. A score or more shots were fired, and the engagement threatened to become general. William Campbell was shot in the arm, Bill Corn was shot in the leg, Jim Berry received a bullet in the face, and Jerry Frazer, colored, received a ball in his leg. The colored man who started the riot, whose home cannot now be ascertained, was shot twice in the back after he had killed Powell, and was placed under arrest. He was taken off to the calaboose with a howling mob at his heels and reports from Fairmont are to the effect that there is a good prospect for a lynching.

Train Robbers at Work.

Two night trains on the Georgia Railroad, one leaving Atlanta for Augusta at 11:30, and the other leaving Augusta for Atlanta at the same hour, were robbed the other night. The Southern Express Company takes no way packages, it being a through run, and the messengers sleep on such runs. Messenger Ficklen, is a heavy loser, a telegram from Atlanta says his packages amounted to $12,000. Ficklen says he must have been robbed between Conyers, which is about thirty miles from Atlanta, and Oconee bridge, about eight miles from Atlanta. Both robberies were evidently the work of the same man who possibly knew the run of the road. The trains were not stopped, the robber mounting them at a station quietly and getting off at the next. Messenger Smith on the up train loses about $100.

The Drummers Are Mad.

Great indignation is expressed among traveling men now in Seattle, Wash., at the retaliation of the authorities at Victoria. Since the passage of the McKinley law, every American drummer doing business in Victoria has been required to pay a license of $50. This only allows him to sell goods by sample until January 1st, when every foreign salesman must pay a fee of $100 for the privilege. Recently eight salesmen, including three from New York City and one from San Francisco, named Kemp, were arrested and fined $50 and costs. Drummers who have returned from Victoria report business dull and advise all members of the Traveling Men's Protective Associations to keep away from Victoria.

A Plot Frustrated.

Private advices from Johnson City, Tenn., the home of Congressman Alf. Taylor, make it appear that a plot to assassinate Mr. Taylor was discovered just in time to prevent it from being carried out. The plotters were overheard by a Baptist minister named Michaels, who informed Taylor's friends. The attempt was to have been made the night before the election and a score of armed men lay in wait for the would-be-assassins. They did not appear, however, and the excitement over the affair was quieted down. The campaign between Taylor and Butler, was the bitterest in the history of the district. Taylor's majority is about one hundred.

Ate the Baby's Head.

Mrs. Gus Cartwright, who lives with her husband near Rockford, S. D., left her baby to play with a Newfoundland dog while she went to a spring for water. On her return she discovered that the dog had attacked the child in her absence and literally eaten its head off. He was still crunching the bones of the skull and the brains of the little one were dropping on the ground. She gave one piercing shriek and fell senseless to the ground. The cry was heard by the husband, who hastened to the cabin. The little child was quite dead when picked up. The mother is reported to be a raving maniac.

Corner Stone Laid.

The corner stone of the magnificent Masonic Temple to be erected at the corner of Randolph and State streets, Chicago, was laid by Grand Master John M. Pearson, with the solemn and impressive ceremonies of the Masonic order. The ceremony of laying the corner stone was preceeded by a parade of local lodges, in which 5,000 participated. The temple, when completed, will be twenty stories high, and will be the largest building of the kind in the world.

The Mafia Murder.

Charles Matranga, Joseph P. Machen, Rocco Geraghi, John Carriso, James Carriso, Salvador Sanzeri, and Frank Romero, the Italians charged with the assassination of Chief of Police Hennessy, of New Orleans, were refused a preliminary examination by Recorder Briozer on the ground that the grand jury were making an investigation of the case. Lionel Adams and A. D. Generigues appeared as counsel for the defendants.

Opium Smugglers.

Jean Mattias and Louis Ferris, owners of the sloop Albert Ross, were arrested at Port Townsend, Wash., charged with smuggling opium from British Columbia. They were released on bail. A large quantity of opium was seized on board the steamer Olympia on her arrival. There is much smuggling of opium going on, especially since the duty was increased.

Chicago Anarchists.

Armfuls of flowers, sympathetic speeches, and a parade of 2,000 sorrowing friends marked the celebration of the third anniversary of the execution of the Anarchists, Spies, Parsons, Engel, and Fisher. Decorum characterized all the exercises. The speeches, in comparison with old-time fiery utterances, were mild almost to tameness.

Foul Play.

The body of John McKean, a worthless character of Orange, N. Y., was found partly submerged in a small brook near the Northfield road, about six miles from that city. The man's head was crushed in and there were other signs of foul play. The body lay lengthwise in the stream with the dead man's coat wrapped about his head.

Railroad Accident.

A railroad accident occurred at Harrisburg, Pa., by which the tower at Port Royal was wrecked and burned. The engine of a freight train ran into the tower after having been thrown off the track. Henry Longnecker, fireman, was killed, and George Lindsey, a brakeman, fatally hurt.

The Gas Scare.

There is plenty of gas after all in Pittsburgh, and the manufacturers are beginning to discover that the scare over the supposed scarcity was unwarranted.

DEMOCRATS FAR AHEAD

OVER A HUNDRED MAJORITY IN THE HOUSE.

They Will Outnumber the Republicans Two to One—A Farmers' Alliance Man Talks of That Organization—Completion of the United States Senate.

Twenty-seven of the forty-four States composing the American Union voted for State officers Tuesday. In some of the States the contests possess elements of peculiar political interest.

In Colorado, Kansas, Minnesota, and South Carolina the Farmers' Alliance had complete State tickets.

In Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, and Wisconsin the Prohibitionists had State tickets.

The following States had either a Union Labor, Industrial, or People's ticket: Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, and Wisconsin. The Industrial and People's tickets are another name for the Farmers' Alliance. Both are peculiarly Western. In Nebraska it is the People's party, while in Michigan it is the Industrial party.

Illinois proposed two amendments to the State constitution. One of the amendments authorizes the county of Cook to issue $5,000,000 of World's Fair bonds, and the other amendment ratifies the recent amendments to the banking laws of the State. In Kansas two amendments to the State constitution were proposed. One increases the number of Supreme Court judges from three to seven, and the second lengthens the biennial session of the Legislature to ninety days. Nebraska proposes four amendments to the State constitution. The amendments relate to prohibition or high license, provide for five Supreme judges, and increase the judges' salary.

Below we give the State tickets elected, as shown by reports to the daily press the morning after election. Later returns will probably change many of them, the returns this year being more than usually incomplete:

Total	100	216	13	2

The path of the election cyclone through the State legislatures makes the United States Senate almost as interesting ground for speculation as the House of Representatives. A week ago no one dreamed that the Democrats could see a majority of that body in sight for eight or ten years to come. A Democratic majority isn't yet in sight, but the political horizon stretches that way. The present membership of the Senate is 84, that body having 47 Republicans, as against 37 Democrats. The membership will be increased to eighty-eight by the addition of Senators from the new States of Idaho and Wyoming, and forty-five will therefore be a majority. Twenty-six Senators go out March 4, 1891. Of these sixteen are Republicans and ten Democrats, as follows:

Outgoing Republicans—California, Stanford; Colorado, Teller; Connecticut, Platt; Illinois, Farwell; Iowa, Allison; Kansas, Ingalls; Nevada, Jones; New Hampshire, Blair; New York, Evarts; North Dakota, Pierce; Oregon, Mitchell; Pennsylvania, Cameron; South Dakota, Moody; Vermont, Morrill; Washington, Squire; Wisconsin, Spooner. Total, 16.

Outgoing Democrats—Arkansas, Jones; Florida, Call; Georgia, Brown; Indiana, Voorhees; Kentucky, Blackburn; Louisiana, Eustis; Maryland, Wilson; Missouri, Vest; Ohio, Payne; South Carolina, Hampton. Total, 10.

Of the Republicans Allison of Iowa and Morrill of Vermont have been re-elected. Of the Democrats Blackburn of Kentucky and Wilson of Maryland have been re-elected, while a Democratic successor (Judge White) has been chosen to Eustis in Louisiana, and Brice has been selected to succeed Payne in Ohio. Of the remaining six there are no signs of a Republican Legislature in any of the States. On the other hand, the election of Democratic Senators to succeed Blair in New Hampshire and Spooner in Wisconsin is said to be assured. The Democrats also claim a Senator from New York, with possibilities in Illinois and Colorado. If all these claims hold good the Democrats would gain five Senators, and the Senate would stand: Republicans, 42; Democrats, 42. But the Legislatures of Idaho and Wyoming will choose Senators before March 4, 1891, and as Republican Legislatures have already been elected, the next Senate will be: Republicans, 46; Democrats, 42.

Under such a balance the elections of Senators after 1891 would be fraught with great importance, for a change of two would make a tie, and the Vice President chosen in 1892 might hold the casting vote of the Senate.

CLAIMS OF THE FARMERS.

Alliance Men Figure Out a Big Victory for Their Candidates.

The Farmers' Alliance people at the national headquarters of the organization in Washington are figuring out a great victory for the farmers in the results of Tuesday's elections. Mr. L. L. Polk, the President, is absent from the city, but Mr. D. H. Rittenhouse, the Secretary of the organization, talked freely with a reporter on the subject. He said that as the smoke clears away it becomes more and more apparent that the farmers' organizations have asserted themselves. It was the first opportunity given organized effort to show that boss rule has come to an end. The farmers' organizations desired to rebuke the party that defeated free coinage of silver and framed a tariff law that imposed greater burdens on the poor man than on the rich.

Mr. Rittenhouse, in reply to a request for some specific statements of what the Alliance accomplished in the election, said he could not give all the evidence, but the returns, he said, are sufficient to prove his statement. In the Eastern States, where the Farmers' League is strong, they and the Knights of Labor have aided in showing this Congress that their demand for free coinage was no idle one. This was most notable in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, where the two organizations are strongest. The Farmers' League and Alliance had just secured a good foothold in New York and New Jersey, and the changes are not so startling. The Grangers, Knights of Labor, the League, and the Farmers' Alliance were organized well in Pennsylvania, and the farmers and laborers gave bossism a rebuke of large proportions. In Ohio, he said, there is no State organization of the Alliance. Indiana and Illinois have been organized but three months. The Mutual Benefit Association did much good work there. West Virginia has just been organized. There the Alliance was not so powerful as in Virginia. In the Southern States the fights were made at the primaries.

Mr. Rittenhouse called particular attention to the effects in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Colorado, and other States. Just, he said, in proportion to the unity of organization so has been the cyclone.

The reporter asked Mr. Rittenhouse if he meant to say that the Farmers' Alliance is an auxiliary to the Democratic party. He replied not by any means. The Democratic party fought the Alliance in South Carolina and at other points; but the farmers desired to rebuke the party in power for its reckless disregard of the people's demand. This Congress was petitioned for free coinage from almost every Alliance in the United States. The petitions were referred. This ground swell does not prove that the Alliance and kindred organizations will support the Democrats in 1892. If the Democrats fail to give a greater volume of currency they will receive the same kind of punishment in 1892. "We are determined," he said, "to be felt, and if this House ignores our petitions we will send to Washington a House of our own."

WHAT CLEVELAND THINKS.

Views of the Ex-President on the Results of the Election.

To a reporter who asked for an expression of his opinions on the results of the elections ex-President Cleveland said:

"I am delighted. I challenge the right of any man in the country to rejoice more heartily than I over the results of yesterday. My gratification is that of an American, proud of his fellow-countrymen, who, though led away for a time by party prejudices and by blind confidence in cunning and selfish leaders, could not be deluded to their ruin.

"They have demonstrated that in dealing with them it is not safe to calculate that they are stupid or heedless of the welfare of their country. The necessity of tariff reform, with its consequent reduction in the cost of living, and the duty of the Democratic party to advocate it, have been fully demonstrated by the action of the people yesterday. Their decision has been deliberately made, and it is all the more significant because they have voted upon their reason and judgment and because they have proved that corruption is powerless as against their convictions.

"Of course, there is nothing for the Democratic party to do but to push on the battle at all times and in all places on the lines which they have laid down—that is, to insist upon a wise adjustment of tariff taxation to the reasonable needs of the Government, as opposed to the plan which enriched a favored class at the expense of the masses of the people. Until the victory is won the question of tariff reform will not be settled, nor the pledges and professions of the Democratic party to the people redeemed."

SOME very interesting and possibly important experiments have been made during the past five years by Dr. Gaucher, of Paris. Bacilli of tuberculosis were injected into several rabbits, producing the disease in all cases. Other rabbits were then inoculated in just the same manner, but were fed afterward with bran mixed with boracic acid. On killing these rabbits after a time, no trace of tubercular disease could be found. How far the boracic acid might be beneficial to the human victim of tuberculosis is not known, but in such trials as have been made lung decay has been arrested and improvement in every way has resulted.

All the work of a Christian should be Christian work.

—The new "Ben-Hur" spectacular tableaux was presented at Crawfordsville. It had been specially arranged for the stage by Gen. Lew Wallace.

—Three unknown men were arrested at Tipton, as supposed burglars, and two of them were identified as men who robbed a jewelry store at Covington.

—A number of cases of diphtheria in a neighborhood three miles north of Martinsville, are supposed to have been contracted from three cats that died very suddenly.

—Grand Meadows, the largest hay farm in Northern Indiana, containing 9,000 acres, was set on fire by hunters, burning up 12,000 tons of hay. Total loss, $90,000.

—Jimmy Bryce, son of Sheriff Bryce, of Spencer, in attempting to jump from a moving train was drawn under the wheels and both limbs were cut off above the knee. He may die.

—Mrs. Webb, a colored woman of Jeffersonville, suspended her son to the iron-work of a bridge by the arms, and belabored him with a club until his cries brought help to his rescue.

—Thomas McDonald, an O. & M. machinist, was run over and killed by a passenger train in the yards at Washington. He was intoxicated and had boarded the engine, falling to the track.

—Joseph Rowe, an unmarried man, a rolling-mill hand in Brazil, was shot at Terre Haute, by a saloon-keeper named Brinkman. Brinkman pursued Rowe and lodged in him the contents of a shotgun from the rear. He is reported fataly injured.

—Joseph F. Johnston, a farmer near Terre Haute, committed suicide by taking strychnine. The only known motive for the act was a temporary financial embarrassment. He was 58 years old and leaves two grown sons.

—W. R. England, of Seymour, has 150 copies of the history of the Twenty-second Indiana Volunteer Infantry, for free distribution to members of that regiment. Any member of the regiment sending a 2-cent stamp to pay postage will receive a copy.

—James Ballard, a merchant of Hillham, had an epileptic fit while out driving. He fell with his neck in the braces of his buggy-top and choked to death. The team turned off into a log road, tore loose from the buggy and ran away.

—Jesse Commons, an old and highly esteemed citizen of Rush County, is dead. He was one of the most prosperous farmers of that section of the State and has held several local positions of honor and trust. Cards had been issued for the celebration of his fiftieth wedding anniversary for the date upon which his death occurred.

—Near Goshen, William Thomas committed suicide because he was reprimanded for bad behavior in church.

—The small-pox scare in Dubois County continues, despite the opinion of the doctors that the prevalent disease is not small-pox. Local squibs are talking through the country papers and citizens in the vicinity of the patients contradict the doctors, averring that they will not visit the sick ones but treat them by proxy.

—Daniel Reynold, one of the oldest citizens of Dublin, died quite suddenly. He was on Main street, and attempted to walk home, about a quarter of a mile or more, and was stricken on the way. He died a few minutes after being assisted home. He was eighty-five years old, and for several years he had been entirely blind.

—C. B. Scherer, two miles north of Cicero, went to town leaving his two little boys, aged 8 and 10 years, alone at home. The elder boy got the shotgun, and attempted to shoot a bird. He put an extra charge in the gun, and when he attempted to shoot the gun exploded, tearing away the thumb and two fingers of his left hand.

—At Andrews, the well-known horse, Jim, owned by George W. Bell, which was ridden throughout the rebellion by Col. Whitaker, of New Haven, died at the ripe old age of 35. The Grand Army of the Republic post assembled at its hall and followed the remains to the place of interment, where he was buried with the honors of war.

—The Big Four Stone Company struck a very fine grade of blue oolitic limestone, at Mitchell, said to be far superior in quality to anything in Lawrence county, superior even to the best Bedford stone, which has the reputation of being the best building stone in the world. A large amount of capital will be invested as soon as the season will permit.

—A large barn belonging to William Getty, who resides in the edge of Jefferson, was destroyed by fire. Eight horses and two cows perished in the flames, besides 800 bushels of wheat, 800 bushels of corn, several tons of hay and many farming implements. The fire is said to have originated from a lantern which Mr. Getty used in feeding. The loss is estimated at $4,000; insurance, $500.

—M. G. Curtis, of Detroit, has been in Anderson for some time past, a guest at the Uray House. He is somewhat of a masher and was a little too profuse in his attentions to Mrs. Brundage, the wife of a barber who boards at the same house. Brundage took offense at Curtis' conduct, and, meeting him on the street, gave him a terrible beating. Curtis has a pair of very black eyes as momentoes of his experience in "mashing" married women in Anderson.

—Orrin R. Munger, of Anderson, through the looseness of the marriage and divorce laws, got himself out of a very tight box. He was arrested recently on the charge of bastardy, betrayal, abduction, etc., by Miss Mollie Moore. Munger was married at the time, but the other day he was granted a divorce from his wife and in less than half an hour had procured a marriage license and was married to Miss Moore. All the prosecutions and suits have been dismissed.

—About thirty-two years ago E. R. Minear, now a retired merchant of Greensburg, and his brother, Lafayette, went to California to hunt for gold. Both started from the State of Ohio, and while in the hills of California became separated and from that day the first named never received any word or message from his brother until recently, when a relative, A. P. Minear, arrived in Greensburg, and brought glad tidings to him that his brother was still alive and living at Lan Diego, Cal. This relative had gone in search of him, and found him living in that city, an old bachelor and quite wealthy.

—Sheriff Macy suffered serious and painful injuries near New Castle, as a result of being thrown from his buggy by a runaway horse which he was driving. The horse took fright at something near the road and ran away, throwing the officer, who is a very heavy man, weighing nearly three hundred pounds, violently to the ground, breaking his shoulder and otherwise bruising him. An elderly lady, whose name could not be obtained, was driving along the road near by at the time, and her horse became frightened at the runaway and threw her out, breaking her arm and inflicting internal injuries.

—Patents have been granted to Indiana inventors as follows: James Du Shane, South Bend, currycomb; Franz B. Fresmuth, assignor of one-half to William B. Burford, Indianapolis, mask attachment for printing presses; Lewis P. Jackson, assignor of one-half to W. H. Campbell and W. S. Brannon, Hartford City, paper-trimming machine; Robert H. Kersey, Lebanon, boiler-feeder and regulator; William Kessler, Lafayette, insulator for electric conductors; Frederick McGahan, Indianapolis, apparatus for suppling pure water to steam boilers, also electrical generator; William T. O'Brien, Rollins Prairie, collar-pad; James Q. Stewart, Rivervale, shaft-coupling; Amos Vanwier, assignor of one-half to B. B. Booth, Indianapolis, gate-latch.

—Mrs. Everett Wagner, the wife of a prominent travelling man, died at her home in Vernon, after a lingering illness, aged 31 years. The deceased was a lady of rare qualities, and is mourned by a large circle of relatives and friends.

—Burglars entered the room of F. B. Sherfick, at Baker's Hotel, Shoals, and stole $1,100 which had been paid to Sherfick for his livery stable. There is no clue to the thieves further than the probability that it was some one who knew when the money had been paid.

—Frank Callaway, a switchman in the employ of the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan Railroad, met with an accident at Wabash which will result in his death. He was standing upon the top of a box-car, passing over the Wabash River bridge, and, losing his balance, fell to the bed of the river, a distance of thirty-five feet. For an hour he was unconscious, lying with half his body in the water. Partially recovering, he called for help, and another switchman came to the rescue. One of Callaway's legs is broken, and he was horribly cut and bruised, suffering internal injuries.

THE MOTHER WANTS HER BOY.

There's a homestead waiting for you, my boy,
In a quaint, old-fashioned town;
The gray moss clings to the garden wall,
And the dwelling is low and brown;
But a vacant chair by the fireside stands,
And never a grace is said
But a mother prays that her absent son
Soon may be homeward led,
For the mother wants her boy.

She trains the vines and tends the flowers;
For she says, "My boy will come;
And I want the quiet, humble place
To be just the dear old home
That it seemed when he, a gentle lad,
Used to pluck the orchard's gold,
And gather of roses and lilies tall
Far more than his hands could hold,
And still I want my boy."

How well she knows the very place
Where you played at bat and ball;
And the violet cap you wore at school
Still hangs on its hook in the hall;
And when the twilight hour draws near,
She steals adown the lane
To cosset the lambs you used to pet,
And dream you are home again;
For the mother wants her boy.

She is growing old and her eyes are dim
With watching day by day,
For the children nurtured at her breast
Have slipped from her arms away;
Alone and lonely, she names the hours
As the dear ones come and go:
Their coming she calls "The time of flowers!"
Their going, "The hours of snow!"

Work on, toil on; give strength and mind
To the task in your chosen place,
But never forget the dear old home,
And the mother's loving face!
You may count your blessings score on score,
You may heap your golden gain,
But remember when her grave is made
Your coming will be in vain;
'Tis now she wants her boy.

JUDAS.

A Story of the Civil War.

I met him yesterday. He has attained name, and fame, and fortune. He didn't remember me, and I'm glad he didn't. He has done some remarkable work, and he has "succeeded." Yesterday I had the chance of shaking hands with the great man.

I did not shake hands with him; the fact is, I couldn't. There are some people you can't shake hands with, you know; there are some sins impossible to forgive some crimes so base that neither time nor repentance can ever blot them out. When I saw his photographs I said to myself, I've seen the face before somewhere; and when I saw him it all same back to me.

It was in 186—. I am not going to give you the exact year. I had shipped as an able-bodied seaman on board the (let us say) Columbia. The Columbia was a man-of-war, and belonged to the federal navy. We (the federals) had almost wiped out the so-called Confederate navy, but there were one or two blockade-runners that still bothered us. Among them was that notorious vessel the Harbinger, and hitherto the Harbinger had succeeded in showing the ships of the federal fleet a clean pair of heels. She had actually shot across our bows in a thick fog into which she disappeared; and we fired three hurried shots at her with our great Dahlgren gun, one of which carried away her funnel. I called her a blockade-runner just now, but we looked upon her as little better than a pirate. She began as a blockade-runner, but whenever she came across an unarmed United States vessel she sunk or burned her, taking the crews prisoners, and then shoving them ashore in uncomfortable places. We knew that she was lying in hiding in one of the numerous bayous of the western coast of Florida, and it had been reported that her engines had broken down. Of course, if we met her at sea a naval duel would take place, and either the Columbia or the Harbinger would have to go to the bottom. We knew perfectly well that Admiral Sykes, as he called himself, of the Confederate navy would never surrender. Couldn't, you see, because at least a third of his crew consisted of deserters from the federal army or navy, and had a price upon their heads, and as my American shipmates put it, "had just got to be hanged."

We had searched inlet after inlet; the men were worn out with reconnoitering in boats and rowing for hours in the glowing sun, in the muddy inlets and silent bayous which were badly marked in the charts, and where the soundings could not be depended on. One-third of the crew was down with fever, and deaths occurred nearly every day; but we knew that the Harbinger had to be taken. If we could only find her, and if her engines were really broken down, she would fall a comparatively easy prey. Our chief fear was that she might be able to repair damages and slip out past us under cover of a thick night, and recommence her depredations.

We had three weeks of it. The night was thickish, and I was on duty on the maintop crosstrees. Not a sound broke the stillness of the night. Ever and anon the light of the moon would break forth fitfully, only to disappear again between the driving clouds. There was a sort of Scotch mist of rain which wetted one to the bone and made me and the companion of my watch (there were a couple of us in the crosstrees) actually suffer from the cold, though it was a summer night.

"Pard," said my shipmate to me, "what's that?"

We could see an indistinct something moving slowly through the mist toward the Columbia; we knew it was a boat of some sort by the slight phosphorescent trail it left upon the calm water; we guessed it must be a canoe, for the strokes were not synchronous. I hurried down and reported to the officer of the watch. When we had first sighted the canoe it must have been some half a mile off, and I need hardly say that it was absolutely invisible from the deck. But the officer of the watch came up into the top, and it was plain enough that the advancing object was a canoe paddled by a single man; and then the officer of the watch raised a rifle to his shoulder and let fly over the man's head, he didn't mean to hit him, you know—only to frighten him.

"For God's sake don't shoot?" shouted the man; and he lighted a pine-knot and held it above his head. "I've come to surrender!"

The officer ordered him to come aboard and report himself. We flung him a rope and he clambered up the side.

A "mean white," evidently. He had on a pair of old tattered trousers black with dirt and grime and grease, and a blue canvas shirt in the same condition, almost in rags. He bore the look of a hunted beast, and he seemed half-starved; his face was decorated with the most tremendous pair of black eyes I ever saw in my life—the lids were half closed—and the eyes themselves were bloodshot. Somebody had evidently been knocking the fellow about; as he turned slightly, I noticed that his shirt was red with blood. The man had evidently been flogged; but though we could all tell that at a glance none of us pitied him.

"Well, mister," said the officer, "what are you hanging about for. Are you a spy?"

"Worse than that," said the man, "I've come to surrender, and to split on my comrades yonder. I can tell you where the Harbinger is if you'll make it worth my while. I was third stoker aboard of her."

"Put him in irons," said the officer coldly, "and set a sentry over him;" and he turned on his heel.

I din't bother myself about the deserter—I was too tired and too wet; and I turned into my hammock and slept like a top. When I came on deck next morning there was the deserter, the man who had come to us in a canoe through the fog, with a pair of handcuffs on him, standing on the bridge conning the ship, a quartermaster, revolver in hand, by his side. By the bright light of the morning sun the man looked, if possible, uglier than ever. Somebody had given him an old jacket, which hid the signs of the flogging; but the fellow looked thoroughly miserable and thoroughly wicked. We were running straight for the entrance of one of the innumerable bayous. Suddenly a silent order was passed along to clear for action. It was a most puzzling order; there wasn't a sail in sight; but it was carried out rapidly enough, the discipline on board the Columbia being good. In a few minutes every man was at his station. Our heavy guns were loaded and depressed. Suddenly the word was passed round among the men that the Confederate war steamer Harbinger was in the bayou, and that there would probably be a no-quarter fight in a few minutes. I was a volunteer; and, though I drew Uncle Sam's pay and Uncle Sam's rations, it was not for pay I fought, but for principle, and, I suppose I must add glory—you see I was only 22. I began to feel that, if there was to be a hand-to-hand fight with the Harbinger, it would become a historical affair like the Shannon and Chesapeake thing; I should get to be a hero; and the hero profession was the particular business into which, at that period of my life, I most longed to go.

Presently we entered the bayou. There lay the Harbinger, a big pair of shears rigged over the engine room, and a great crowd of men hauling away at something they were drawing up from it. So busy were they with the job that at first they didn't perceive our approach. The fellows rushed to their quarters, and several of the officers hurried on to the bridge. The Harbinger was anchored, you know, and her furnace fires were out. As we ran within fifty yards of her stern, so as to rake her with gun after gun, if needful, the bells in our engine room ordered the engines to be reversed, and we almost ceased to move.

"If you don't surrender," shouted our commander to the Confederate Captain, who stood upon the bridge, "I'll blow ye all into almighty blazes."

There were the three great Dahlgren guns; their shot would have passed through the Harbinger's decks, and she certainly would have gone to the bottom five minutes afterward.

"I guess I'll come down," said the confederate chief. He was a brave man, but he knew that resistance was useless.

"Tell your chaps to throw down their arms and go for'ard," cried our old man, "or I'll sink ye at once!"

Admiral Sykes had to give the order; it wasn't a time for joking, and our boss would have carried out his threat. Slowly and sullenly the confederate crew left the guns, and flinging their weapons upon the deck, marched forward in a body. Then our boats were lowered and we took the entire crew prisoners and put a guard over them of which I was one. I never saw such a tattooed, starved hungry-looking lot in my life before. They were quiet enough, poor chaps, at first, till suddenly one of them espied the man who had betrayed them standing on our bridge, the quartermaster still by his side, revolver in hand; and then a great yell went up from the whole crowd of prisoners, officers and men. They would have lynched him then and there if they could have got at him. They shook their fists at him, they ground their teeth, they cursed and swore and called names; they'd have torn him into little pieces if they could have got hold of him. And that chap had to stand by the quartermaster's side and face them. He looked dreadfully scared, and well he might. Those that cursed and swore loudest were naturally the five-and-thirty deserters that "had got to be hanged." Poor chaps! They knew who had fitted the ropes around their necks. Sykes had had to surrender unconditionally, and every one of those five-and-thirty men was hanged, except a couple who jumped overboard and were comfortably drowned before we could manage to get the prisoners below and put the hatches on.

Judas had a certain amount of pluck—yes, it is impossible to deny his pluck. He just clinched his fists, and, though his wrists were handcuffed, he stretched his arms out toward his old comrades and cursed back with a fine long string of Bowery oaths. He'd got a wonderful command of that sort of language, had Judas.

It was just this way. Judas had shipped as a stoker. He was an ambitious amateur; but he got high wages, which they didn't pay him; his rations were nominal and surprisingly irregular, being mostly pork and hominy; he got more kicks than ha'pence, and the morning of the day on which he deserted, Judas had had six dozen well-laid on at the capstan-head. So he slipped off in the darkness in the canoe, and he betrayed his ship and comrades—partly for money, partly for revenge.

Judas was an exceedingly clever fellow. He made out to the admiralty people that he had shipped aboard the Harbinger with the intention of betraying her from the very first—from patriotic motives. A real right down mean thing ceases to be a real right down mean thing when dictated by pure and patriotic motives. Congress voted $10,000 to Judas! He took the $10,000 and went out of the Iscariot business for good and all. He was a far-seeing man, too. When the war came to an end (as it did soon afterward), the patriots wanted to give him a public banquet in New York. But no, he wasn't grasping; he was contented with the dollars! The authorities found out afterward that the patriotism of Judas was all flapdoodle—he wasn't an American citizen at all, and his motives were dollars, not patriotism.

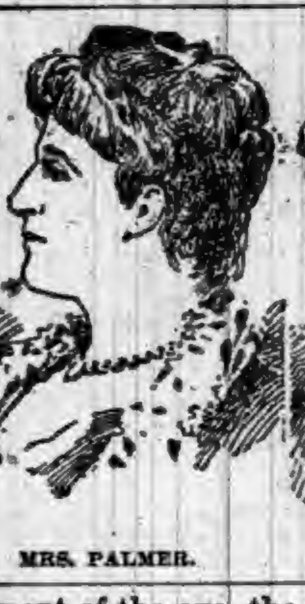
Then Judas disappeared. I met him, as I told you, the other day. We Americans are fond of hero worship, and we generally accommodate our heroes with a pedestal of the tallest kind, but I couldn't well look upon Judas as a hero. I knew all about him before he had become famous. Things get forgotten, but I can't forget those thirty-five poor fellows, and my own opinion is that Judas won't die in his bed.

FAIR LADY MANAGERS.

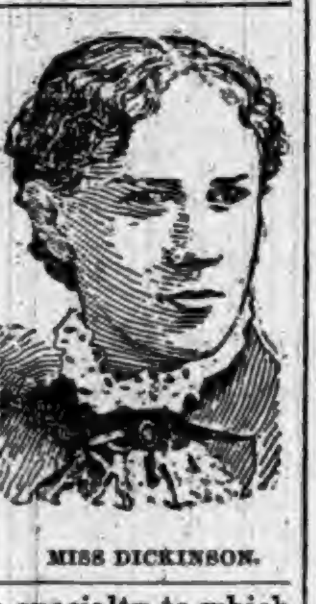
Women Who Will Assist in Directing the Columbian Exposition.

THE Chicago board of nine lady managers appointed by President Palmer, of the National Commission, to act with the 106 in the conduct of the exhibit of woman's work in the World's Fair are each of them women of attainments, says the Chicago Herald. More than this, they are also women of achievements, either as social leaders, organizers or prominent workers in some other avenue of effort. Mrs. Potter Palmer, who previous to her marriage, which took place in 1871, was Miss Bertha Honore, is a native of Louisville, Ky. Her father was of French descent, and her mother belonged to an old and aristocratic Southern family. She was educated at a convent near Baltimore, and when she had finished her education and entered society she was an acknowledged belle. One of the most beautiful of women, Mrs. Palmer's individuality is as charming as her personality.

Miss Frances Dickinson, M. D., who is the one representative of the Queen Isabella Association, received her medical education at the Chicago Woman's Medical College and went to Germany for instruction as to the treatment of the eye, the specialty to which she devotes herself. She is a woman of indomitable energy and of unquestioned ability.



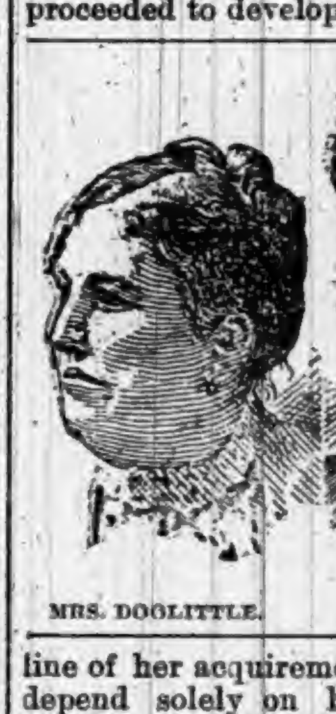
MRS. PALMER.



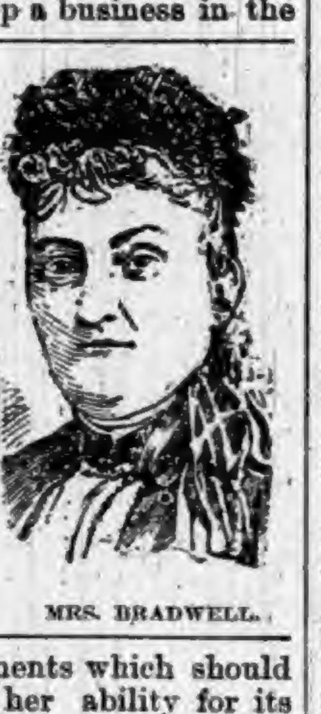
MISS DICKINSON.

Mrs. James R. Doolittle, Jr., is a native of Illinois. She graduated from Monticello Seminary, after which she went abroad to finish her education, spending between two and three years in Paris and Geneva. She is an accomplished musician and also a fine linguist, as well as a person of charming presence and winning manner.

Mrs. Myra Bradwell, after reading law in the office of her husband, ex-Judge James B. Bradwell, and thoroughly equipping herself at every point, applied for admission to the bar in 1869. Being refused on the ground that she was a married woman she did not continue useless insistence, but proceeded to develop a business in the line of her acquirements which should depend solely on her ability for its success. There was no paper at that time in the West devoted to law matters and she started the Chicago Legal News, of which she made a pronounced success and which she still conducts. Mrs. Bradwell made no further effort to be admitted to the bar, but a few months ago, on motion of the Court, every member of the Supreme Court of Illinois cordially acquiesced in granting her a license as an attorney.

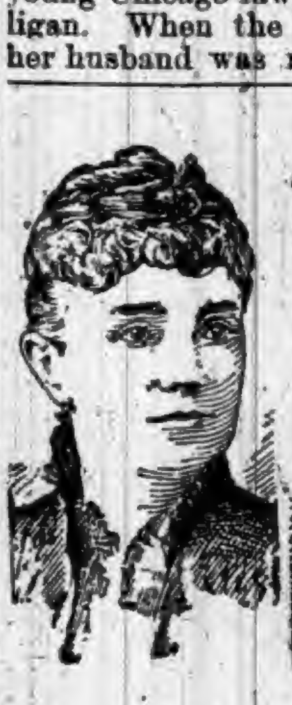


MRS. DOOLITTLE.

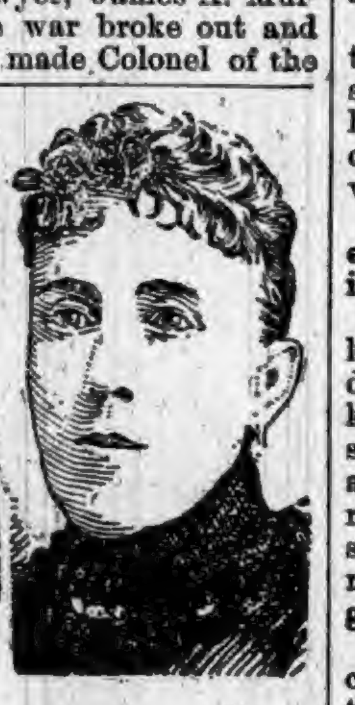


MRS. BRADWELL.

Mrs Marion A. Mulligan, who was the daughter of the late Michael Nugent, was born at Liverpool England. She came with her family to Chicago when but a child. When barely 18 years of age she became the wife of the young Chicago lawyer, James A. Mulligan. When the war broke out and her husband was made Colonel of the Twenty-third Illinois Volunteers, known during the war as the "Irish Brigade," she accompanied him, sharing not only his campaigns but also his fate as a prisoner of war. She was appointed Pension Agent by President Cleveland, and during her four years of service disbursed about $30,000,000.



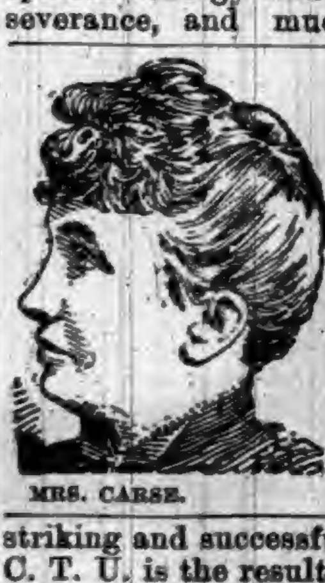
MRS. MULLIGAN.



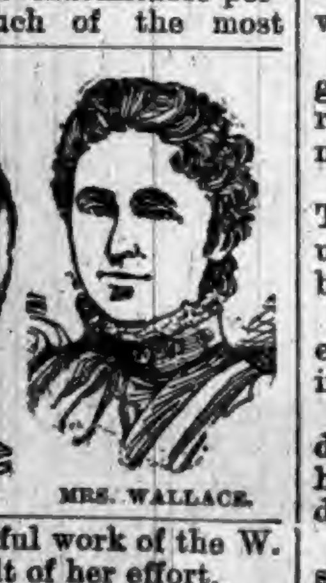
MR S. LEWIS.

Mrs. J. Sanford Lewis is by birth a Virginian. She is a fine business woman, and not only succeeded in retrieving a lost fortune after the fire but in accumulating one much larger than the original.

Being able to command her time, as her private fortune is ample, Mrs. Matilda B. Carse has for many years devoted her entire time to philanthropic effort. Mrs. Carse is a woman of splendid energy and indomitable perseverance, and much of the most striking and successful work of the W. C. T. U. is the result of her effort.



MRS. CARSE.



MRS. WALLACE.

Mrs. Walter Q. Gresham is a native of Kentucky, as were her parents before her. She was brought up in the Presbyterian Church, of which she is still a member. Quiet and conservative in her tastes, the only public work in which Mrs. Gresham interests herself is philanthropic effort.

Mrs. M. R. M. Wallace was married at the beginning of the war and accompanied her husband, Colonel Wallace, of the Fourth Illinois Cavalry, during the entire campaign. She is an ardent Universalist and is president of the Illinois State work of the women of the Universalist denomination.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

A Little Brown Mouse.

I was wide awake in the night-time;
And what do you think I heard?
It wasn't a dog that bow-wowed;
It wasn't a pussy that purred.

But a little brown mouse in a corner
Had found a crack in the floor;
And he nibbled, and nibbled, and nibbled
Till he made for himself a door.

He wanted to climb like a monkey,
And not on a stair would stop;
So he scrabbled, and scrabbled, and scrabbled
Till he got to the bureau top.

And then he pattered and pattered
With many a little click;
And he tinkled, and tinkled, and tinkled
The brass of the candlestick.

Then down he jumped with a clatter,
And scrambled close to the wall;
He rattled, and rattled, and rattled,
Like a kitten rolling a ball.

And then there was pulling and scratching;
This mischievous little pest
Was gnawing the threads of the carpet
To carry away to his nest.

Next day there came to his corner
A nice little furnished house,
With doors all open for welcome,
And table set fine for a mouse.

I sent him my best invitation—
"Walk in, fair mouse, if you please,
For the dinner is ready and waiting,
All seasoned with savory cheese!"

He wouldn't walk into my parlor,
But just like a rogue he spoke,
Or acted so: "No, I thank you;
I'm not a mouse for a joke!"

Scalping Squashes.

Winfield Scott Davenport! It was a very long name for a very little boy, but great-grandfather was responsible for it, for when he was given the privilege of naming his first great-grandson he said, in his most decided way, "Call him Winfield Scott."

You see, he had fought under that noted General, and was a great admirer of him.

As the child grew older, he displayed great liking for military matters. He and a little girl friend, Tiny, would make long marches around the yard, waving flags, tooting horns and charging valiantly on the old cat, the fussy turkey gobbler, and once completely routing a family of pigs that were rooting in the onion-bed.

The little "General," as his papa sometimes called him, dearly loved to hear stories about wars, and especially delighted when great-grandmother told about the Sioux massacre in Minnesota, where she lived when she was first married. The "General" thought Indian warfare must be very exciting. He had many imaginary battles, and to have seen him scalping invisible Indians you might have thought him a most ferocious warrior.

One October day he happened to be down in the vegetable cellar. Now the nights were getting pretty frosty, and papa had thought it safer to gather his winter squashes, and there they lay, a great pile of dark-green "Hubbards" and golden "Mammoths."

The General gave a little shiver of mock fear as he looked at them in the dim light.

"They look like a big lot of peaked-headed Indians!" he exclaimed. "Wouldn't it be fun to make believe scalp 'em!" Whereupon, with what he thought a very blood-curdling yell, he gave the Mohawk Indian warwhoop, about which he had read in Peter Parley's little history, and, brandishing his hatchet, made a charge on the pile.

Nearly every squash had a tough green stalk, about five inches long. This the General called the "scalp-lock," and he hacked it off, quite regardless that his blows sometimes cut great gashes in the squash itself.

An hour later, as this hero sat before the fire in the dining-room, making a worsted harness for Snowball, his pet kitten, Papa Davenport strode into the room, saying indignantly, "Who's been hacking away at my Hubbard squashes? Was it you, Winfield?"

A big lump came into the General's throat. He almost wished that that story of George Washington and the hatchet had never been written, because since then everybody felt that it would not do for a soldier to tell a lie.

So he said, slowly, with downcast eyes, "I—I did, papa—I—I was scalping 'em!"

"Scalping them! Child, didn't you know that when the stem is off they decay a good deal faster? I wanted to keep these squashes as long as I could so as to get a good price for them by-and-by. Now I shall have to sell them right away. I'm sorry, my boy, but I shall have to punish you for this bit of mischief. March out into the yard and get me a switch!"

Papa could be very severe when occasion required and the General knew that marching out and getting a switch meant a whipping!—Youth's Companion.

GRAINS OF GOLD.

[From the Ram's Horn.]

The most beautiful glass eye ever made cannot see anything.

The first question at the sepulcher was, "Why weepest thou?"

The sweetest bread ever tasted, is that cut from the loaf of toil.

God clothed man. Man stripped Christ, and gambled for his raiment.

Make your long prayers in private and your short ones in public.

Every time we try to deceive God, our chances of being lost increase.

Real wealth is that which cannot be taken from you by man or devil.

The happiest people are those who willingly suffer most for others.

It is not an easy matter for God to get His arms around a man who already has his arms around a bag of money.

It makes no difference what we are. The most important of all things to us is what we will permit Christ to be.

All the preaching that ever has or ever will be done may be boiled down into three little words—"God is love."

We know how much trouble the devil caused Job, but God alone knows how much trouble Job caused the devil.

When we get to the end of life, we shall find that the only things we have really lost are those we tried to keep.

Don't be in too great a hurry for results. You can't raise an oak tree and get a crop of acorns in a few minutes.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

W. M. Leedy, of Ft. Wayne, was in town Tuesday.

Election day some one had a runaway. No serious results however.

Dr. Shepherd, a former resident of Waterloo was in town last week.

Mr. Fothergill has sold to Mr. Myers an interest in his harness shop.

Wm. McOscar, of Salem, Oregon, was guest of Miss Aditha Anthony over Sunday.

Mrs. J. A. Dennison has visited her sister, Mrs. Levi Dennison a few days since.

Mrs. Frederick, from Michigan, has been visiting with the family of S. J. Locke.

Mrs. Ella Miller and son, Albert, of Bellfontaine, are visited Mrs. M's mother, Mrs. Henry Willis.

Mrs. W. Fisher who has been spending some days in Pleasant Lake with friends returned home Monday.

Dell Locke's baby has suffered from a large carbuncle, that made it very ill for a time. She is now better.

Frank Rigby and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of a bright baby boy. It was born last week Tuesday.

Our lawyers, Will Leas, C. M. Phillips and J. F. Shuman, are kept busy a good share of the time over at court.

More boils. Miss Nellie Koons is the latest sufferer, from one of Job's troubles of whom your correspondent has heard.

The meeting of the Epworth League will take place Tuesday evening of next week. Dr. T. J. Carpenter will give an address at that time.

Sunday of last week, Rev. Mr. Rhetts being absent from town Mrs. Rhetts filled the pulpit and read synopsis of her husband's sermon prepared for the day.

If anyone wants to know how Chris. Lugenbuhl voted, ask Henry Bechtel. It is getting so it takes about all day to vote Chris., especially under the new law.

Prof Davis' quarterly recital took place last week Wednesday evening according to previous notice. The program was an attractive one, the house was well filled, and some who have been present at every recital, consider this last better than the previous ones.

Last week Tuesday evening at a regular session of the L. M. C. at the home of Mrs. Mary Morell the quarterly election of officers took place resulting as follows: Mrs. Emma Keep, president; Mrs. Olive Jackman, vice-president; Mrs. Florence Waterman, secretary; Miss Mattie Maxson, treasurer; Mrs S. C. S. Winslow, critic; Miss Rose Blair, custodian of queries.

BUTLER.

The new mill is roofed and sided and will soon be ready for the machinery.

Mrs. Jones, of Garrett, filled the M. E. pulpit last Sunday morning and evening. Mrs. Jones is always very kindly received at Butler.

Geo. Blaker living east of town met with a serious accident one night last week, while hunting coon with several others. They treed a coon and a number of shots failed to dislodge him, when Mr. Blaker loaded his gun with more than an ordinary charge, and upon its discharge, it exploded, tearing off his thumb and fore finger, with a probability of the loss of the hand.

Some bold and successful thefts were committed north of Butler, in Franklin township last week. A team of valuable horses were stolen from the farm of Mr. Rohrbough. The thieves took the team to John Wagner's one mile east where they stole a new two horse double buggy and harness, then drove north two miles farther and stole two more valuable horses then started east, and were tracked about six miles when all traces disappeared and up to this writing no clue to their whereabouts has been discovered.

Considerable fealing has been stirred up between some of the farmers in the vicinity about hunting on enclosed lands, and it culminated last Saturday in Mr. Creager arresting Joseph Oberlin, who was fined, fine and costs amounting to about $8. Mr. Oberlin than had Mr. Creager arrested for cruelty to animals, namely bringing them to market with their legs tied, which is an offense punishable by fine, etc. Mr. Creager comes up for hearing next Monday, and may be one of many petty actions for similar offence punishable by our statutes, that are seldom if ever enforced. Moral, trail, or carry your arms reversed.

ST. JOE.

Hon. S. S. Shutt was in town on Saturday.

Dave Hammon has been at home several days nursing a sore hand.

D. D. Moody received two straight prohibition votes at the late election.

Will Olds and wife were over at our neighboring town of Hicksville on Saturday.

Vanfleet, of Garrett, has moved into the residence formerly owned by Wm. Smith.

Clyde Woodcox moved to Auburn Junction Wednesday. He has secured a job on the B. & O.

John Springer, who went to Pennsylvania a few weeks ago returned a day or two before election just to help the democracy swell the majority

A. F. Woodcox was taken sick the day before election and could not cast his vote. He regretted it very much as he wanted to be with the crowd.

Mrs. O. C. Walter, of Auburn, was over at their old home on Wednesday looking at the improvements in their residence which is being remodeled from top to bottom.

W. C. Patterson has his fine new house nearly completed, and by the way, his wife presented him a nice new baby boy on Friday, as one of the many attractions which the new home will contain. Will don't walk now, but flies.

SPENCERVILLE.

Henry Beams has moved into his new residence.

Will Burtsfield has moveed on Henry Beams' farm.

Mr B Kail has his residence nearly ready for occupancy.

Mr. and Mrs. J H Murray are on the sick list though not seriously ill.

Rev. S. J. Nelson will attend the conference of Lutheran ministers at Bryan, Ind., this week.

It is said that a certain Concord granger is deeply interested in a Jackson township widow.

The Rev. J. J. Fr[illegible]d will deliver the second of his series of sermons on the life of Christ next Sunday evening.

Wm. Rummell, father of O. W. Rummell died at his son's residence in Spencerville Tuesday morning Nov. 4, aged 81 years, 5 months and 9 days

DEKALB.

Fair weather after election.

Mother Hall is about the same.

The health of the people in this vicinity is good.

Things are moving along the same as before the election.

This week will finish corn husking if fair weather continues.

Several of our people attended quarterly meeting at St. Joe last Sabbath.

Mrs. Mansfield has moved into her property and will keep boarders again.

The farmers are busy husking corn and stowing away their vegetables for winter.

Mrs. J. Lawhead and Mrs. M. Owen, of Auburn, visited Mrs. C. Currie last Saturday.

Another old settlers' remains was interred in the new cemetery at St. Joe last Friday.

Get your stock in shape for market, as there are only five of the Shillings' buying at present.

A. Darling, of Perrysville, O., and Jerry Gifford, of Michigan are the guests of J. B. Gifford.

R. B. Clear moved his family back to Churubusco last Wednesday. They entertained a number of their friends before their departure. Music and conversation the leading event. At 8 o'clock the call bell rang and all sat down to a splendid supper prepared by Mrs. C. With regret we say good by, but with happy remembrances.

BUTLER.

Considerable sickness prevails at our neighboring town Hamilton.

Sid Bubb is putting up a neat little barn on his lot east of Oak street.

Philip Walter is building a barn on his farm two miles west of Butler.

Miss Minnie Champion is reported married to a Mr. S[illegible]r, a well known barber of Butler.

The bad weather last Sunday materially reduced the attendance at the M. E. quarterly meeting.

Corn is being sold on our streets at 50 cents a bushel. The crop is much better than anticipated.

Our schools are progressing very favorable and much good is being done. The rooms were all closed on election day one of the rooms being used for election purposes,

The residence of Samuel Healy, three miles north of Butler had a narrow escape from fire last Wednesday evening, caused by the burning out of a chimney, the damage was slight. It was insured.

A very quiet little fire took place in Butler last Sunday morning. A small stable on Mrs. Sarah [illegible]'s place on Canal street was burned down together with its contents, consisting of some mechanical tools owned by Mr. Byers, who had converted it into a carpenter shop or something of the kind with a stove pipe running through the roof. Among the things which were destroyed, were a large number of white rats and perhaps a few gray ones. No insurance.

FEAGLER'S CORNERS.

Farmers are husking corn.

R. O. Talbert has his corn in the crib.

J. W. Johnston is hauling his wood to market.

J. M. Brumbeck has raised his new barn. It will be a fine one when completed.

James Wiseman has set out a lot of fruit trees again. It is thought that he will probably hang himself in a few years, but not with a rope.

James Sheffer and Cora Chaney were united in marriage Wednesday Oct. 29th. Congratulations are now in order, and may the sky of their matrimonial world never have a cloud to obscure the brightness of their fondest hope.

Mr. Kelley to the People.

Hon. Freeman Kelley, believing as heretofore, that a representative should know what his people desire to have done, and being anxious to do all he can for their interests, asks that those who wish to meet him, name the time and place and send him word, and he will come and consult them. He asks the people in general, all over the county, as well as the Patrons of Industry and Farmers' Alliance to take an interest in these friendly consultations. A member of the legislature cannot do all that is asked of him, for there are 99 others in the House, and 50 in the senate. But Mr. Kelley assures the people he is willing to try.

Awful Slaughter of Republicans.

(Chicago Herald.)

When the Reed Congress reassembles next month the occasion will be funereal. Of the triumvirate known as the committee on rules, the men who controlled all legislation, only one remains, Reed himself. Cannon and McKinley are buried. Of the committee on ways and means, Major McKinley, its distinguished chairman, and Messrs La Follette and Gear have been beaten, while Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, who was also a member, declined a renomination. Rowell, of Illinois, who is chairman of the elections committee, which did the dirty work in the eviction from their seats of ten democratic members, together with Cooper, of Ohio, Lacey, of Iowa, and Greenhalge, of Massachusetts, his fellow conspirators, also suffered defeat. Of the nine republican members of the appropriations committee six, including the chairman, Mr. Cannon, have been relegated to obscurity. Judge Taylor, of Ohio, is the only one left of the republican end of the judiciary committee. All the other eight have been wiped out. The committee on commerce loses seven of its nine republican members, including its chairman, and it is the same way with the committee on rivers and harbors. Dorsey, of Nebraska, is the only surviving republican on the committee on territories, and also on the banking and currency committee. The framers of the force bill suffered no less. The chairman of the committee which originated it and whose name is attached to it, Cabot Lodge, managed to pull through by the skin of his teeth, but with a greatly reduced majority. Of the other seven members Rowell, Stewart, McComas, Frank and Smyser have been left at home and Haugen and Henderson alone are returned.

Of the sixty chairmen of committees in the present house no less than thirty-seven have failed of re election. Among them, besides those memtioned heretofore, are the following republican leaders: Conger, of Iowa, Baker and Farquhar, of New York, Perkins, of Kansas, Struble, of Iowa, McCormick, of Pennsylvania, Buchanan, of New Jersey, Carter, of Montana, Wade, of Missouri, Butterworth, of Ohio, Merrill, of Kansas, Delano and Laidlaw, of New York, Thomas and Caswell, of Wisconsin, Browne, of Indiana, Scranton and Yardley, of Pennsylvania, Sawyer and Sherman, of New York, Banks, of Massachusetts, and Brower, of North Corolina. Of the 172 republicans who voted or who were paired in favor of the McKinley tariff bill eighty-seven, or slightly more than half, were beaten at the polls Tuesday.

The Farmers' Institute.

Don't let our farmers or our townspeople forget the farmers' institute to be held in Auburn Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 3 and 4. Subjects of vital interests will be discussed. Among those who will assist will be J. W. Pierce of Peru, who will tell "What a Silo Can Do." He will have a model silo to exhibit, with samples of silage to exhibit, with samples of butter produced by cows fed on silage. He says ten of these meetings have been held in Miami county, and have done a great deal of good. We shall announce the other speakers, as they are reported, and we hope some of our own farmers will come prepared to help. Our people in Auburn should see to it that good music is furnished. The meeting will be in the Opera House. We might add that no one makes money by these meetings. Everyone who helps, gives his time, the money allowed by law, being used only to pay the expenses of those who help, such as car fare, and hotel bills. The law, we believe is a good one, and as it was gotten up by an Auburn boy, we ought, here in Auburn to make it a grand success. The bill was gotten up by Hon. W. W. Robbins, brother to the Robbins boys here, and well known to most of our people. Good meetings have been held all over the state.

CONSUMPTION,

IN its first stages, can be successfully checked by the prompt use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Even in the later periods of that disease, the cough is wonderfully relieved by this medicine.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."—A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middleton, Tennessee.

"Several years ago I was severely ill. The doctors said I was in consumption, and that they could do nothing for me, but advised me, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine two or three months I was cured, and my health remains good to the present day."—James Birchard, Darien, Conn.

"Several years ago, on a passage home from California, by water, I contracted so severe a cold that for some days I was confined to my state-room, and a physician on board considered my life in danger. Happening to have a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I used it freely, and my lungs were soon restored to a healthy condition. Since then I have invariably recommended this preparation."—J. B. Chandler, Junction, Va.

A Successful Chairman.

Chairman Kelley, and Chairman W. B. Chieeman were properly depicted in the COURIER of last week. The former has cause to rejoice; the latter, to mourn and hang his head. Mr. Chieeman entered on his work with a flourish of trumpets, that was amusing, for his followers seemed to think that one who could control his own little precinct in good shape, was just the man to run the campaign for a whole county. The first snag he struck was in the spring election, when he and his workers made such a signal blunder in the Stafford township election and the suit in contest that followed. He never recovered from this backset, but all through the campaign, it was apparent he lost the confidence of his people. His second great mistake, was his attempt to get the nomination for joint representative. He failed, of course. Mr. Kelley, on the other hand, went into the position quietly, his election to the place being the result of the votes of the committeemen all over the county. At once, however, republicans began to say, he would not work fair in the campaign, either for nominations or at the election. They said he had enemies to punish, and friends to reward, and that he would do both these, to the injury of the perty. This prophecy proved untrue. No where in the work of the summer, can it be shown that he did any of these things. The campaign was managed for the good of the entire ticket, and now that it is over, all concede that he served all alike, and did his duty to the party at large. Above all, he had not asked for an office while the campaign was on, as had his opponent, the gentleman at the head of the republican county organization. We have come out of the campaign with flying colors, and whatever idea of distrust or objection that might have stood against Mr. Kelley at the start has been wiped away, in the grand success that has crowned the campaign in DeKalb county. The people give him credit, and say, "Well done." And the COURIER joins with them, in according to him in an abundant measure, the praise for our share of the recent great victory.

Hazzard Once More.

Hon. J. B. Elam, Indianapolis, has been making a trip to the Pacific coast. On his return, he was interviewed by the Indianapolis Journal. The reporter, among other things, asked:

"Did you see any ex-Indianians?"

"Yes, I met them almost everywhere. As a rule they are acquitting themselves very well in their new homes. Of course, persons going there find that golden apples do not grow on the lowest branches, and cannot be obtained without some struggle. But a man of energy, not easily drawn aside by temptations, is likely to succeed in that country. Major Calkins was stumping the State of Washington for the republican ticket, and is a recognized candidate for the United States Senate. Miles Clifford and Eugene Krider, formerly of the Indianapolis bar, are among the rising attorneys of Tacoma. Mr. Krider is Reporter of the Supreme Court, and is now engaged upon the first volume of the Washington reports. Among the democratic leaders and managers there I found George Hazzard, the Auburn banker who was so often indicted and so often tried in the Indiana federal court. I discovered that Mr. Hazzard is especially prominent at Tacoma. Ward clubs are named after him and the "Hazzard Hustlers" are particularly active in local politics."

Leaves from an Ancient Book.

We have been lately studying the strange teachings of an ancient book, a volume on medicine, written in 1784 by "Nich. Culpepper Gent, Student in Physick and Astrology," and printed in London. The full title is "The English Physician Enlarged, with 369 Medicines made of English Herbs, that were not in any Impression until this, Being an Astrologo-Physical discourse of the Vulgar Herbs of the Nation, containing a complete method of Physic, whereby a Man may preserve his Body in Health, or Cure Himself, being Sick, for Three-pence Charge, with such Things only as grow in England, they being most fit for English Bodies." Then follows an account of "Seven things" taught by the book, among them being a statement of "what Planet governeth every Herb or Tree (used in Physick) that groweth in England." The book is the property of W. H. Leas, Esq. of Waterloo, and came to him by descent, through his wife's family, we believe. It is a curious study to go over these old pages printed in the old style, with the long letter s. used in most places, the quaint language and spelling, and at the bottom of each page, will be found standing alone, the first word of the next page. This last feature we suppose was to assist those who could only read with difficulty. The various plants and herbs are given in alphabetical order, and after a description of each, as to growth, appearance, time of flowering, etc., is always given the planet that governs it and then its medicinal properties. Take beets for instance. He says of the red beet. "The root thereof is red and spongy, and not used to be eaten." This sounds odd to us, who consider the beet, a valuable garden vegetable. He then gives the "Government and Virtues" of both white and red, which he says "are far different." "The red beet is under Saturn and the white under Jupiter, therefore take the virtues of them apart, each by itself." He says the white is used for chilblains, canker, ulcers, "and is much commended for baldness and the shedding of hair." Among the qualities of the red beets he says, "The juice of the root put into the nostrils, purgeth the head, helpeth the noise in the ears, helps stinking breath if the cause lies in the nose, if any bruise hath been there, as also want of smell coming that way." Of the beech tree he says "It is governed by Saturn and therefore performs his qualities and proportions in these operations. The leaves are good for swellings, to discuss them and the nuts do much nourish and fatten such beasts as feed on them. The water that is found in the hollow places of decaying Beeches will cure both man and beast of tetters or scurf if they be washed therewith." It is interesting to see that dandelion and dock, are highly commended as they are even in this day. Both are governed by Jupiter, and both are good "pot-herbs," Bloodwort, which he classes with docks, "is exceedingly strengthening to the liver, and procures good blood being as wholesome, pot-herb as any grows in a garden; yet such is the nicety of our times (for sooth) that women will not put it into the pot because it makes the pottage black; pride and ignorance (a couple of monsters in the creation) preferring nicety before health." Fig leaves and figs, he commends highly, as do our advertisements of "Syrup of Figs" in this year 1890, 106 years later. But he goes ahead of our modern ideas by adding. "They say the Fig Tree as well as the Bay Tree is never hurt by lightning, as also if you tie a bull, be he ever so mad, to a Fig Tree he will quickly become tame and gentle." Of lavender, he says: "Mercury governs this herb and it carries his effects very potently. Lavender is of special good for all griefs and pains of the head and brain. Two spoonfuls of distilled water of the flowers helpeth them that have lost their voice, as also tremblings and passions of the heart. The chymical oil drawn from Lavender, usually called Oil of Spike, is so fierce and piercing that it must be cautiously used, some few drops being sufficent given with other things, to cure either inward or outward griefs." And so we could go on indefinitely. Of course the strangest and most striking passages are those more intimately connected with the technical part of the subject, and cannot be given here. But it is a curious old volume.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The Christmas (December) number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly is bound in a special illuminated cover of beautiful design, in lithographed colors and gold; and the contents amply fulfill the promise of this elaborate exterior. The leading article is a richly illustrated narrative of "Dr. Talmage in the Holy Land," describing the Palestine of today as seen by the great preacher during his recent visit. The life-story of Louisa. "the ideal Queen and the ideal woman of Prussia," is told, accompanied by Mme. Lebrun's exquisite portrait, and many views. "An Old-time Chronicle" is gleaned from the famous Paston Letters, familiar to all students of mediæval English literature. Other articles having profuse pictorial embellishments are: "Bits of the Black Forest." "Canine Pets," by Edwin H. Morris, "The Early California Missions," by Caroline Stevens Walter, "One Christmas in Egypt," by Colonel J. Milliken, and "China-painting" by Lilly Marshall. There are short stories by Lucy Hooper, Nora Marble, Etta W. Pierce, Fanny Isabel Sherrick, and others, and illustrated poems by W. E. Henly and Georgia A. Davis.

Oscar Denison went up to Ann Arbor, this week to attend the funeral of his nephew, Irvin Denison, who died from injuries received in a difficulty between students of the University and a military company belonging to the city. He was a student at the University and had come out of his room to see what was the trouble between a lot of students and the members of the military company. The soldiers had been out to give one of their comrades a belling and had met a squad of students. Each party, by mistake thought the other was in for a quarrel, and each tried to drive the other off. The students fell back past where young Denison was standing, looking on, and for some reason one of the soldiers struck him on the head with a gun, giving him fatal injuries. He was a son of Mr. Denison's brother, who lives in Toledo.

For a long time our people have been annoyed with much petty thieving. On last Saturday night, Perry Lower drove to town with a horse and buggy. When he got ready to start home, he discovered that his $1.25 whip was missing. They hunted around a little while for the whip, when the actions of a certain man attracted their attention. It was learned that his name was Frank Smith, who resides near Butler. He had his horse in an old ice house back of the North saloon. Mr. Lower and another man took a lantern and went back there and found the whip hid near the place. This man seemed to take great interest in the search. So they waited for him to return for the whip. In due time he came around and hid it in another place. He was followed into the saloon, where he was arrested, and taken before Squire Daniels, who after examination held him to the next term of court in a bond of $200, which was signed by the saloon-keeper. On the same evening Mr. Eberly had a good lap robe stolen, which has not been found.

WHEN people say "calculate" they use a word which goes back to the very infancy of our race and the very beginning of the science of arithmetic. It comes from the Latin calculus, a pebble. When men first began to reckon and to compare numbers they could think of no better way than to lay pebbles along side of one another on the ground, and hence the word for counting.

AND now British capital proposes to place England within four and a half days of this country. Capt. Large vessels of the same line will also run on Lakes Huron and Ontario.

A FRENCH physician says that he has demonstrated that rheumatism can be cured by the sting of bees. The virus of the bee acts, he says, like a vaccinal inoculation, and a sufficient amount of it will render the patient entirely free from rheumatic attacks. He says, however, that it would require the services of a good many bees to cure a well-established case of rheumatism, and the remedy appears to be worse than the disease. Bees may be good for hives—bee hives—but few people would care to use them for rheumatism or any other human ailment.

ACCORDING to the annual report of the Pullman Palace Car Company, 5,023,057 people were carried in their cars last year, against 4,242,542 the year before. The figures are interesting, as showing how extensively the more luxurious modes of railroad travel are coming to be used by the people. The palace car was originally monopolized by the rich, but it is no longer considered a luxury beyond the reach of persons in ordinary circumstances. The public generally enjoys all the comforts of traveling, and they appear to be willing and able to pay for what they get.

THOMAS G. WOOLFOLK has for the second time been sentenced to be hanged. He is the man accused in Bibb County, Georgia, of murdering ten people of his own family. On the night of August 7, 1887, Woolfolk took an ax, and going from room to room in his father's house, butchered every one of its inmates while they slept. They were his father, step-mother, three half-sisters, three half-brothers, one infant in arms and an aged aunt. The evidence was circumstantial, but the long delays and retrials have come about more through the horror with which people shrank from the belief that a son and a brother could commit such an awful act.

WILLIAM T. CHAMBERLAIN, of Norwich, has invented and perfected a gun which promises to be the most durable, simple and effectual gun ever made. It is called the electric hydrogen gun. There are three methods of firing the arm. By the first method, Mr. Chamberlain claims, the projectile is sent from the gun by a pressure equal to 37,000 atmospheres, by the second process by four times that force, and by the third method it is transformed into an air gun with a pressure of from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds. The gun is simple, without other machinery than the chamber and barrel. The demand for new valuable weapons is so great that some of the great powers may find in this arm the executor they have been anticipating, while Mr. Chamberlain may find in it the fortune the shadow of which has kept his brain active and his hands busy for many a day.

THE new National Park takes in the entire drainage area of the Yosemite and much more. It embraces the whole of the upper Tuolumne River, with the Hetch Hetchy Valley and the greater part of the Toulumne watershed. It includes Mount Lyell and its glaciers, Lake Eleanor and the Mariposa, Merced and Tuolumne groves of big trees. It stretches from Lake Eleanor to Wawona and beyond, and from Hazel Green below Crane Flat to the highest ridge of the Sierra. It is about fifty miles in length by thirty-five in width, and considerably exceeds the State of Rhode Island in area. This magnificent reservation will be by far the most beautiful park in the world. It will lack the weird marvels of the Yellowstone—the geysers, the painted rocks and the stalagmitic formations—but in the magnificence and the charm of forest, cliff and waterfall it will be beyond comparison.

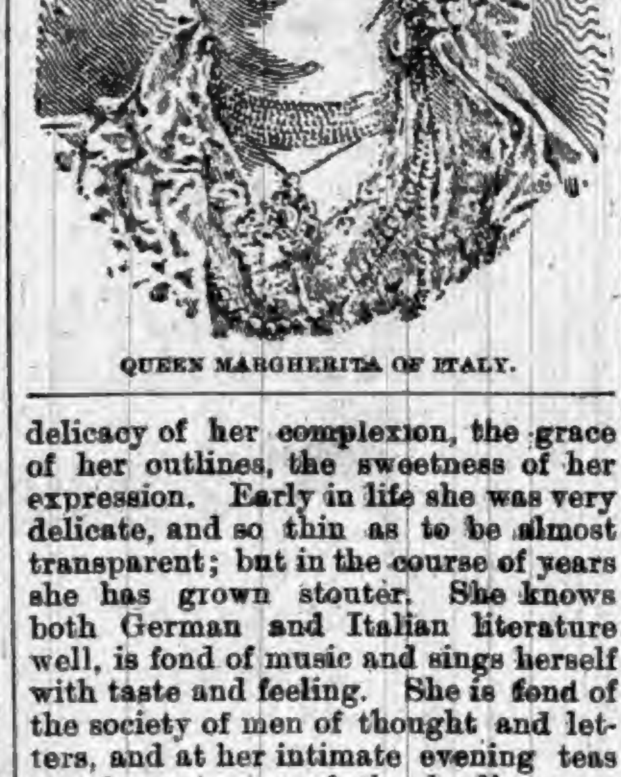
THE solemn antics and mummeries of the "vegetarian philosophers" are enough to make the face of the earth broaden into a smile. Yet vegetarians are useful, and their good work will be felt long after their fad has been buried in the dust of ancient history. These worshipers of cereals, raw and cooked, of nut and fruit diet, while they will not cause mankind to return to the eating habits of our simian prototypes, will do this much good: They will instruct the ignorant and the wasteful in ways of economy; they may bring about some reform in the matter of excessive meat eating and beer drinking and cause people to pay more attention to the products of the earth, which are now too much neglected. There is no doubt that much of the corn fed to pigs would do more good if eaten by people. The vegetarians will finally disappear in the clouds of the fad, but they will leave much grain for the world in their theoretical chaff.

A PROMINENT New Jersey cranberry grower says that the New Jersey berries this year are unusually fine, and will bring $4 per bushel. Jersey berries can be kept in good condition from now until May or June of next year, with little or no shrinkage, and no loss to the owner. Cranberries are grown in the poorest lands of the country, but yield a large profit. The culture of cranberries is rapidly becoming the chief industry of the lower counties of the State, particularly Atlantic County. The swamps and marshy lands are hardly fit for any other use, but make excellent bogs. The people are beginning to realize that the barren lands which have hitherto been only an expense can be utilized, and large sums of money made from a very small investment. A grower who has had long experience in making and managing bogs said recently that a first-class bog can be made for from $600 to $800 an acre, according to the quality of the bog.

THAT a sense of the dignity of American citizenship still animates the Americans abroad who revere the traditions of the past is occasionally made manifest. Those who attended the reception given by Prince Leopold, who represented Emperor William, to the doctors, in attendance at the Berlin Medical Congress say that the action of the head of the American delegation of physicians and gentlemen, as compared with the servility which marked the action of the English, French, Italian, and other European delegates, was such as to make every American proud of his citizenship. The American scientist bowed with the same dignity that he would show if he were introduced to a fellow citizen, while the leader of the English delegation, who was a "Sir" in addition to his professional distinctions, groveled. "It made one sick of rank to see it," was the remark of one clever American doctor on repeating the incidents of the reception in the Shell Room of the new palace. "One might expect subserviency from the peasantry, but not from scientists."

BEAUTIFUL MARGHERITA.

Of the beauty of Queen Margherita of Italy, says a writer in the Leisure Hour, all the world has heard, and she is still beautiful, thanks to the delicacy of her complexion, the grace of her outlines, the sweetness of her expression. Early in life she was very delicate, and so thin as to be almost transparent; but in the course of years she has grown stouter. She knows both German and Italian literature well, is fond of music and sings herself with taste and feeling. She is fond of the society of men of thought and letters, and at her intimate evening teas may be met some of the leading men of the land, who drop in to chat away an hour without ceremony.



QUEEN MARGHERITA OF ITALY.

A very cordial friendship exists between King and Queen, and the former relies much on his wife's judgment, which is frequently clear and sound. Some pretty anecdotes are told of their domestic life. Upon one occasion, however, the husband gave the wife one of those quiet rebuffs into which enters a sense of humor, and which are on that account less hard to ber. It appears that Humbert once asked one of the Queen's secretaries what would be an acceptable Christmas present for her Majesty. This gentleman, a truer friend than courtier, had the courage to suggest to the King that the Queen had a large number of unpaid milliners and dressmakers' bills. The King took the hint, and begged that they should all be given to him. On Christmas morning Humbert placed all these bills, receipted, under the Queen's table-napkin. There was no other present. It is said that she took the hint, and has been less extravagant since.

"ONE is beautiful but poor. The other is cross-eyed and rich. I'll marry the cross-eyed one, to show that I am self-sacrificing."

A TARIFF TRICK.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION ON THE NEW TARIFF LAW.

The Enormous Increase of Duty on Knit Goods, and How It Was Secured—The Board of Appraisers Completes the Job—A Good Chance to Pay High Prices.

The longer the McKinley tariff law gets in its work the more clearly the tricks in it come to be seen and understood. One of these tricks has recently been uncovered by a decision of the Board of Appraisers.

The effect of this trick is to impose a still higher duty on knitted wool underwear and hosiery than the bill seemed on its face to demand. It will be remembered that under the old law these goods came under the paragraph which fixed duties on "flannels, blankets, hats of wool, knit goods, and all goods made on knitting frames, balmorals," etc. The duty imposed in this paragraph on all knit underwear and hosiery, if "valued at above 40 cents per pound," is fixed at figures ranging from 18 cents a pound and 35 per cent. ad valorem to 35 cents a pound and 40 per cent. ad valorem.

In the McKinley law, however, the word "fabrics" is substituted for "goods" in the old law, the law now reading "knit fabrics, and all fabrics made on knitting machines or frames." McKinley fixes the duty on such "fabrics" valued at above 40 cents per pound at 44 cents a pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem. The old duty was itself so oppressive that imported goods costing $30 a dozen had to be sold in New York at $72 a dozen. This, however, did not appear to be enough protection for the domestic manufacturers. But these men were not satisfied, and so they struck for higher protection. The hey-day of protection then came in with McKinley and Reed, and was taken by the manufacturers as an invitation to make more extravagant demands than they had ever made before.

Those demands were made and were promptly and fully honored by the high tariff party; but, in honoring those demands, much more was given to the manufacturers than at first appeared. There was a trick in that word "fabrics" which has never been laid open to public view, and which, it is said, was carefully planned beforehand. It seems now that the manufacturers never intended to be satisfied with the largely increased duty of 44 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem. It was intended from the first that the word "fabrics" in this paragraph should not apply to knitted underwear and hosiery, although these had been dutiable under this paragraph in the old law.

There is another paragraph in the bill which covers "wearing apparel." In the old law this read "wearing apparel, except knit goods;" in the new law these words, "except knit goods," were quietly left out, and the way was thus prepared for the decision of the appraisers that knitted underwear and hosiery should be taxed under this paragraph.

The effect of this decision is to place an enormously higher duty on the kind of goods here referred to. The duty is raised to 49½ cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem. A high tariff paper, the Boston Commercial Bulletin, justly calls this "a terrific increase in rate."

The steps by which this increase in duty was reached may be seen by the following:

	Cts.		⅌ c.
Under the old law, three grades....	18	and	35
	24	and	35
	35	and	40
Apparent duty under new law.......	44	and	50
Real duty by new decision............	49½	and	60

This decision was reached after some of the domestic manufacturers had directed the attention of the appraisers to the language of the two paragraphs. A letter from Senator Aldrich, the leader of the high tariff party in the Senate, was produced, in which the Senator said that it was the intention of the makers of the tariff to tax knit goods as wearing apparel under the higher rate of duty. This was of course done; and the people will now have to pay an enormous duty on all knitted underwear and hosiery made of wool.

Is this one of the provisions of the tariff law which, as the protectionists assure us, the people will like the longer they pay it and the better they come to know it? They are taking consolation to themselves for their crushing defeat on Nov. 4 by saying that the new law had not been in effect long enough for the people to understand what a good good law it is, and that by 1892 the people will see the good features in it which they failed to appreciate in 1890. The blindness and folly of these tariff makers passes belief. They do not see that the longer the people pay these duties the less they will like them. The people said on Nov. 4 with unexampled emphasis that they prefer cheapness rather than dearness; and there is not the slightest probability that they will change their minds on that subject by 1892—nor, for that matter, by 1993. "McKinley prices" are doomed.

Wasting the People's Money.

For years a system of taxes, originally imposed for the purpose of defraying the extraordinary expenses of a great war, and which in the first instance would never have been tolerated for any other purpose, has been continued. The result has been that a large amount of money, desirable for the wants of trade, has been withdrawn from circulation and locked up in the United States Treasury; and for some years past there has been no way of releasing it for public uses except by buying bonds and so reducing our public debt. On its face this seems all right, although there is no good reason why the present generation should have the whole burden of our national debt imposed upon its shoulders, and future generations, who will, in point of numbers and wealth, be better able to pay it, should be totally exempted. It does not, moreover, seem a good business policy to take money by taxation from the people worth, say, eight or ten per cent. to them to keep, for the sake of paying off bonds drawing only four per cent. interest. But be this as it may, there have not been for some years any bonds that the Secretary of the Treasury could call, to pay or redeem, at his pleasure, because there have been none due. And so the only way he has been able to obtain any bonds for redemption has been by offering to their owners a premium or bounty in addition to their lawful principal and accrued interest to come forward and surrender them. Plain people, who do not keep the run of financial affairs, and who do not note how large the premium is getting to be, may be somewhat surprised to learn, that in September, 1890, the Secretary of the Treasury paid a bounty of over 26 per cent. on more than $4,000,000 for the privilege of paying $16,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds, not due until well into the next century. And the community approved of this procedure, because it believed that by so doing a disastrous money panic was averted. And the same plain people may be more surprised to further learn that, as the result of this same policy, namely, of taxing the people to take from them high-priced money, and then paying a high price to get rid of it to the bondholders, the amount of money which the United States Treasury within the last three years has presented to the bondholders, whom public opinion has been accustomed to regard as having been already sufficiently favored by exemptions from taxation and otherwise, has been in excess of fifty-one millions of dollars, necessitating fifty millions of unnecessary days' work, which the present generation of American people have had to perform during the same period. Does it not become these same people to seriously ask themselves how such a policy of taxation harmonizes with the idea of intelligent government—of government for the protection of industry and promotion of the interests of the whole people? How does such a policy promote the interests of the American farmers, whose farms are reported to be shingled all over with mortgages, and who, by a policy of high and unnecessary taxation, have to sell in the cheapest market and buy in the dearest?

DAVID A. WELLS.

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. 8.

The Election and the Outlook for Tariff Reform.

DEAR FARMER BROWN—Since my last letter was written the people of the United States have rejected McKinleyism and "McKinley prices" with an emphasis that leaves no doubt as to what they think of either. Never have the people of this country visited so swift and unmistakable a condemnation upon any measure on which they were asked to pass judgment. The Republican leaders fancied that they received in 1888 a commission from the American people to impose higher tariff taxes than the country has ever had, and they went forward to this work of raising duties with a confidence by no means justified by their slender majority. Confident that they had passed a tariff bill that would receive the applause of the people they put it into effect with unparalleled haste, fancying that the people would see what McKinley calls its "beneficence" and approve the bill by their votes. Their mistake must now be evident to the blindest among them.

In the numerous explanations that the Republicans are now making of their defeat, there is abundance of confessions that it was the McKinley tariff bill that brought disaster upon their party. This is openly acknowledged by leading Republicans in Massachusetts, where the tariff was practically the only issue before the people. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, which is one of the foremost Republican organs of the country, makes this confession: "It was through the tariff law that most of the damage was inflicted on the Republicans. There was no excuse for any increase in duties on any article. Every advance of this sort which was made weakened the party, hampered the labors of its advocates and champions, and placed the organization on the defensive from the beginning of the canvass."

What, then, is the outcome of the election as bearing on tariff reform? It can be predicted with confidence that on March 4, 1893, a Democratic President will be placed in the White House, and a Democratic Senate and House of Representatives in the Capitol. President and Congress will be distinctly and unequivocally pledged to a reform of the tariff in the interests of the great army of consumers. President and Congress alike will be thoroughly committed to the broad principle that the people should be compelled to pay no taxes except such as go into the treasury. They will hold to the doctrine that to tax the many for the benefit of the few is simply robbery, and is an outrageous abuse of the powers of government. As the political field looks to-day nothing can prevent the election of a President who holds such views. It is almost equally certain that at the same time the Senate of the United States will pass under the control of the Democrats, and that the Democratic Senators will thoroughly support the Democratic House of Representatives in a radical reduction of the tariff.

But you may ask, Are we to have the McKinley bill and McKinley prices till 1893? The Congress just elected will meet on the first Monday in December next year. That Congress cannot make a thorough revision of the tariff, as the Senate and President will still be Republican. But there will be tariff legislation—of that you may be sure. The policy of the Democratic House will most probably be that outlined by Senator Vest, of Missouri. He says:

"The Democratic party should proceed deliberately and cautiously to attack the outrageous taxation of the McKinley bill by the enactment by the next House of special bills. These bills should be sent to the Senate, and let the Republicans there take the responsibility of defeating them if they dare. Let the House put salt, lumber, and other articles on the free list by special bills, and then let the Republican Senate wrestle with them."

There will doubtless be a series of these bills in the direction of free raw materials and lower duties on the necessaries of life. These can without doubt pass the Senate, as Senators Plumb, Paddock and Pettigrew will certainly be strengthened in their low-tariff views by the result of the elections. Other Republican Senators who voted for the McKinley bill under pressure will perhaps fall in line and vote to please their constituencies. Republican journals themselves pointed out before the elections that the elections might make tariff reformers out of some of the Republican Senators. The Cleveland (Ohio) Leader, one of the most uncompromising high tariff organs in the country, said during the recent campaign:

"United States Senators are not indifferent to what they deem changes of national sentiment. They do not wait to be voted out of office before yielding to the desires of their constituents. What if the elections this fall should seem to show that the McKinley law is not what the country wants? How long would the Senate stand its ground, especially when some of the Republican members were very weak-kneed on the tariff question before the last session ended?"

There will be some bills, then, for tariff reduction. If the President should be so bold as to veto those his course would only anger the taxpayers and intensify their demand for tariff reform, and their demand would find emphatic expression in 1892.

Furthermore, when the Democrats have taken full control of the Government and have carried out their ideas of tariff reform, we shall have a tariff far lower than the Mills bill offered us in 1888. Mr. Mills himself has just said, in view of the great tariff reform victory: "We must not dally with half-way measures; we must open every market for all our products."

Meanwhile the work for tariff reform will go on without interruption. The forces which were influential in bringing about the victory of Nov. 4 will be kept in activity without ceasing for one day. The most energetic organization engaged in the tariff fight is the Reform Club of New York. This club has attracted to it many of the tariff reform leaders all over the country. Organized in January, 1888, it took an active part in the election of that year. It has kept up the fight continuously since then; in the campaign just closed its efforts were redoubled, and its blows were delivered with telling effect. It has conducted joint debates on the tariff throughout New York State, and it has sowed tariff-reform documents all over the West. It has supplied hundreds of newspapers with tariff-reform matter, and this work will go right on just as during the campaign. In fact, the club is now fighting already the great Presidential battle of 1892. The work of educating public opinion to intelligent views on the tariff question will be pushed in every possible way. The ground gained on November 4 is to be held. There is to be no retreat. The victories of the past are to be an inspiration to greater ones in the future.

So, then, there is hope for a relief from tariff burdens. The horizon is bright with the promise of dawn. The work will go forward more easily now. On November 4 we reached the top of the long, long hill; now we start down on the other side. When we reach the bottom all unjust burdens of taxation shall be removed. Yours truly,

RICHARD KNOX.

Republicans on Cheapness.

Now that the elections are over and "McKinley prices" are becoming higher, and the Democratic newspapers have no motive in the world to continue their "conspiracy to put up prices," it would be well for Republican voters to remember their party doctrine on the subject of cheapness.

The following extracts from the utterances of leaders of the G. O. P. are worth preserving by those innocent people who fancy that the tariff is not a tax, and when they are made to pay "McKinley prices" they should turn to these words of wisdom to strengthen their faith in the "American system of protection."

Here are some of the choicest gems of wisdom that we owe to our high-tariff statesmen:

I cannot find myself in full sympathy with this demand for cheaper coats, which seems to me necessarily to involve a cheaper man and woman under the coats.—Benjamin Harrison, in an address at Chicago in 1888.

We want no return to cheap times in our own country. * * * Where merchandise is cheapest men are poorest.—Hon. William McKinley, Jr., in House of Representatives, May 7, 1890.

Into this contest for cheapness the Republican party does not propose to enter.—Hon. Julius C. Burrows, in House of Representatives, May 8, 1890.

The cry for cheapness is un-American.—Henry Cabot Lodge, at Lowell, Oct. 13, 1890.

The curse of cheapness! The vulture loves his carrion not more than the free-trader longs for cheapness.—Bulletin of the Protective Tariff League, Oct. 17, 1890.

The attainment of cheapness of commodities is not the best purpose of the protective system.—The Manufacturer, organ of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Club, Oct. 16, 1890.

Cheapness is the fetich of the Englishman. Let us then have done with this cheapness and with its advocacy.—Henry Carey Baird, in Philadelphia, Oct. 16, 1890.

Cheap! I never liked the word. "Cheap" and "nasty" go together. This whole system of cheap things is a badge of poverty, for cheap merchandise means cheap men, and cheap men mean a cheap country, and that is not the kind our fathers builded. Furthermore, it is not the kind their sons mean to maintain.—William McKinley, Jr., at Kalamazoo, Oct. 14, 1890.

"These be your gods, O Israel!"

Increasing the Consumption.

How the cheapening of commodities increases the demand for them is shown by David A. Wells, in his "Recent Economic Changes," by pointing to the lowering of the price of tea in Great Britain, caused by lowering the duty. In 1832 the duty on tea was 2s 2⅛d (about 50 cents) per pound, and it has been gradually reduced to 6d (12 cents). In 1851 the English people consumed 58,000,000 pounds of tea, or slightly less than two pounds per head of the population; in 1886 the consumption was 183,000,000 pounds, or five pounds per head. The lowering of the duty had brought down the price, and had put tea within the reach of people who could not previously afford it; in this way the quantity used was greatly enlarged.

Mr. Wells points out another case which shows how the removal of a tariff tax cheapens and increases the demand for it. In 1883 we removed the trifling tax of 1 cent per hundred on matches. This is reported to have reduced the price about one-half, and to have increased the consumption to the extent of nearly one-third.

Senator Evarts once ridiculed the Democrats for objecting to a certain tariff tax by saying it was "only a 3-cent joke." The cases just cited show that when these "3-cent jokes" are removed or abolished, the people get the advantage of cheaper prices and larger consumption. A tariff tax is a good thing—to abolish.

The Worst Month.

"To me," remarked a man of appreciative discernment, "February is the most disagreeable month of the entire year."

"Why?" some one asked.

"Oh, well, you know it has a fewer number of days than the other months."

"What difference does that make?"

"My friend, I see that you don't get down closely to the business affairs of life. The sooner one month ends, the sooner the first of the next one comes around. I am a quiet man and do not like callers, and it makes me nervous and ill at ease when, the first of the month, men who really have no cause to enjoy my society come around and discuss practical subjects. I make no complaint of a leap year February, but the February that falls on the lot of ordinary occasions is distressing."—Arkansaw Traveler.

McKinley Did It.

Last spring when Maj. McKinley and his associates were in their high carnival of tariff making the New York Dry Goods Economist, which is a protection paper, said: "Not all the Cobden Clubs in Great Britain, backed by all the British gold alleged to have been spent in America by the Cobdenites, ever did one-half as much to spread free trade ideas in this country as has been accomplished in three months by the Hon. W. J. McKinley and his associates."

The outcome of the elections confirms these words and makes them read now almost like a prophecy.

Where Knowledge Fails.

Knowledge is power; knowledge is food, drink, and raiment to him who hath an abundant supply. It has built the mighty city where once the forest stood, it has put a girdle around the earth, and built a peanut roaster that runs by clock work. It plows the sea, walks on the ocean's bed, and makes the planets come down and talk of things not dreamed of in the philosophy of other days; but it can not, and never will, be able to keep a country schoolteacher fat while he has to board round and take his chances with feast and famine.—Ram's Horn.

AN artist, as the creator of his works, leads a higher life than his lower earthly fate exhibits to us; those creations of his mind to which we cannot rise spring forth in mysterious atmosphere.—Schlegel.

EXPERIMENTS with brake shoes for the purpose of doing away with the disagreeable noise made when a train is being checked, show that gun metal shoes are the most satisfactory.

THE artist always loses in the world. Society is a crucible in which gold melts.—From "Ariadne."

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

All these and many other complaints cured by this wonderful Nervine Tonic.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors."

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

O'SULLIVAN "SQUEALS."

ONE OF THE CRONIN MURDERERS MAKES A CONFESSION.

P. O'Sullivan, the Ice-Man, Tells How He Enticed the Doctor to the Carlson Cottage, but Claims He Did Not Know Cronin Was to Be Killed—His Statement.

[Chicago dispatch.]

The cabal of Cronin conspirators has been broken.

Patrick O'Sullivan's love of liberty is stronger than his allegiance to the Irish Nationalists. He has made a statement of his connection with the murder of Dr. P. H. Cronin, and by so doing has thrown light in dark places. He is angry, defiant and determined. He is serving a life sentence in the prison at Joliet. He says that he is guilty of nothing more than aiding in a conspiracy to identify an alleged British spy and to secure some "papers." O'Sullivan now realizes that the securing of papers was not the chief purpose of the conspiracy and that Cronin was not a spy.

A few days ago an intimate friend called upon the iceman and was furnished with the facts which are the cause of O'Sullivan's great confidence that he will be given his liberty. The story was told with every indication of sincerity, and may be accepted as the first break in the oath-bound compact.

O'Sullivan says that he never was involved in any conspiracy to murder Cronin. He was a member of the Nationalists, and it was common talk among the members that Cronin was a British spy and an enemy to the order. He believed the statements made to him, and as an ardent friend of the Irish cause he came to look upon Dr. Cronin as a traitor to the people of his native land. He was told that Dr. Cronin could be identified as a British emissary, if necessary, and that upon his person could be found papers which would not only prove him to be an enemy of the Irish Nationalists but which, unless secured, might be used as evidence against prominent Irishmen. Drawn on by the enthusiasm of his oath-bound associates, O'Sullivan says that he entered into the conspiracy with Daniel Coughlin, Martin Bourk, Patrick F. Cooney, and others whose names he will give at the proper time. Daniel Coughlin had absolute charge of the matter and the others acted under his instructions.

O'Sullivan does not tell who was next in authority above Coughlin. The iceman says that he was not acquainted with the inner workings of the conspiracy. He was the dupe. It was he who was assigned to look after the securing of the Carlson cottage; he was sent to make a contract with Dr. Cronin to furnish medical services for his (O'Sullivan's) employes at the rate of $50 a year; he was the one who was to send a card to Dr. Cronin's house in order to inveigle the victim into the ambush of the murderers; he was the man forced out into the open while the others remained under cover and perfected their plans of assassination unknown to him.

O'Sullivan says that up to the very hour of the murder he was in ignorance of the real motive of the preparations which the conspirators had been carefully making for seventy-two days. He knew that the Carlson cottage had been rented and furnished by Martin Bourk, and he also knew of the other arrangements for leading Dr. Cronin into the trap. But Coughlin repeatedly assured him that the intention was to get possession of Cronin and examine him for documents which were valuable to the Irish cause and which would prove the treachery of the man who professed to be a friend of Ireland.

O'Sullivan was at the cottage on the night of May 4, 1889, but he was not in the front room when the fatal blow was struck.

The mysterious driver of the white horse had been sent to Dr. Cronin's residence, carrying one of O'Sullivan's business cards. The iceman either does not know or refuses to give the name of the driver. The remainder of the narrative can be put in O'Sullivan's own words as he has told it within the last few days:

"There were three of us in the front room of the cottage at 8 o'clock that evening," said O'Sullivan. "They were Martin Bourk, Patrick Cooney and myself. We were waiting to see whether our plan was successful. I was feeling pretty nervous, for I did not like the way Bourk and Cooney acted. I did not see any weapon, and I will always say that I did not go there that night to commit murder. When the buggy bringing Dr. Cronin drove up the street toward the cottage I weakened and began to realize that there might be trouble—a struggle at least—and so I went out through the back room and down the rear stairway. I stood back of the house trembling with horror as I heard the sounds of the struggle from within."

O'Sullivan's story in regard to being in the back yard at the time of the killing is corroborated by the testimony of Mrs. Carlson and of the German washerwoman, who saw Dr. Cronin enter the cottage. Both of them testified at the trial that some one was standing at the rear of the house at the time of the murder.

In continuing his story O'Sullivan says that after remaining outside of the house for a time, undecided what to do, he went in and found Cronin lying, apparently dead, on the floor of the front room. The walls of the room were spattered with blood and there was a pool of blood on the floor. Dan Coughlin was in the room. He had been waiting up the street and had come in at the front door just after Bourk and Cooney, "the Fox," had completed their bloody work. As O'Sullivan came in the back way Coughlin walked up to the body of Dr. Cronin lying on the floor and began kicking the dead man in the head. O'Sullivan caught hold of him and told him to stop. Coughlin paid no attention to the iceman, and continued stamping upon the head of the lifeless man. Then O'Sullivan drew a revolver and said: "You scoundrel, you have killed this man, and now you are kicking his dead body. If you don't stop, I'll shoot you." Coughlin ran out of the room at the point of O'Sullivan's revolver. O'Sullivan left the house and had nothing to do with putting the body into the trunk and disposing of it. It was his understanding at the time that Martin Bourk struck the first blow, which dazed and stunned the victim, although it did not prevent him from struggling until he received his other death wounds. O'Sullivan will swear upon the witness-stand, if an opportunity is given him, that he did not furnish the weapon with which the murder was committed, and that if one of his ice-picks was used it was without his knowledge. The mysterious wound upon the back of Cronin's head was caused by a kick from Coughlin after the victim was dead.

The above is, in substance, the story told by the Lake View iceman after nearly a year of penitentiary reflection at Joliet. It is the story which he wished to tell the jury when he felt the coils of circumstantial evidence tightening about the defendants in the trial. He says that he placed all the facts at the disposal of the attorneys and that they told him it would be unwise for him to testify. Hopes of acquittal were held out to him, and so, doubting and fearing, he kept quiet under protest. If he had been placed on the stand the whole mechanism of the Clan-na-Gael conspiracy would have been laid bare. Some one might have gone to the gallows, but O'Sullivan thinks he would have gone free. His own life and liberty, his little property and his many friends in Lake View are dearer to him just now than any oath-bound obligation to men who, as he claims, deceived him.

The prosecution in the Cronin case could never understand why O'Sullivan had been so indiscreet in making his contract with the doomed physician and then sending his business card by the driver, thus furnishing the strongest kind of circumstantial evidence against himself. His present statement, if accepted as true, furnishes the explanation of his conduct. He did not observe the secrecy to be expected of one who was planning a murder which was sure to be investigated thoroughly. When Dr. Cronin had been missing over night, T. T. Conklin, with whom Dr. Cronin had boarded, picked up O'Sullivan's card from the mantel and went out to the Lake View iceman in regard to the physician's disappearance. It is claimed by O'Sullivan that if he had been a part of the conspiracy to murder he would not have been so careless in having his identity revealed to the Conklin family; neither would he have selected the Carlson cottage, only a few feet from his own house, as a safe place to do the dangerous job. O'Sullivan was careful in his endeavor to keep suspicion away from Cronin's mind, but he did not cover up his tracks, and he thinks this fact ought to speak eloquently in his behalf. It is certain that the State's Attorney could not satisfactorily explain the iceman's boldness in carrying out his part of the deeply laid plot, while the others were so quiet in their operations.

O'Sullivan's verbal confession has been in the hands of certain well-known gentlemen for several days. Some of them are interested, at least in sentiment, in the identification and punishment of all who were connected with the great conspiracy, which had its origin, they say, with men whose political and social station was far above that of Coughlin, O'Sullivan, Cooney, Bourk and Kunze. One of them, who is acquainted with the O'Sullivan version of the tragedy, said last evening:

"At no time did we believe that O'Sullivan was in the room at the time of the murder. He was in the back yard crouched against the building and cowering with fear. He lost his nerve when he saw the buggy approach. When he saw Coughlin kicking the lifeless man he drew his revolver and attempted to aid the victim of the murder. We believe O'Sullivan's story, but when I picked up a morning paper and read that he was anxious to make a public statement on the witness stand the news seemed too good to be true. I only hope that O'Sullivan will speak out and name the men who used the iceman and the others as their deluded tools."

Flowers in the Slums.

The organization known as the King's Daughters, which includes among its kindly offices those of reading to the sick in hospitals, distributing books and papers, singing in hospital wards and elsewhere, has added a new feature to its work during the present summer heats, says a writer in Frank Leslie's. In New York the daughters have organized a committee on tenements whose duty it is to visit and distribute flowers among the people who live in stifling apartments, far removed from the freshness of nature. Some of these ladies have located themselves in the very heart of these districts and from their headquarters send out daughters of the king every day with flowers, which are eagerly welcomed by the poor and unfortunate ones upon whom they are bestowed. The flowers are largely received from sympathizers with the work in the country, and the express companies carry them without cost when addressed to the King's Daughters, Mariner Temple, 1 Henry street. A newspaper reporter, who recently accompanied one of these ladies in her tour, gives some very touching illustrations of the eagerness with which the floral gifts are received. In one case two old and infirm women in white caps took the flowers with withered hands that trembled, and rose and courtesied, and one of them began to cry. They called her "sister" and "deary," and blessed her for her good heart. One Irishwoman in the same tenement said: "Yes, indeed, but they are pretty; but I see something prettier," at which the King's Daughter looked around to see what it could be, and found the reporter smiling at the woman, and flushed when she understood what she had meant. "Stop your laughing," protested the woman; "it's no blarney, but the truth. I've seen your sweet face around here before, and we know you're a good lady, and its yourself and not the flowers we're glad to see." Another woman called her "sister," mistaking her, maybe, for one of the Sisters of Charity; and the other woman on the floor, who had been quarreling in a very high voice with the first one, grew silent and said: "Thank ye, miss; my husband will be glad to see them when he comes home." Then she ran off into the back room and brought out a flower pot with some green leaves in it. There was no flower, but the leaves were growing green, and she held it up for the visitors to admire. "They were all," says the reporter, "painfully grateful for the flowers. It would interest some people to know how much flowers are to some other people. They could understand it if they could see the children fighting for the rose leaves that fell on the landing of the stairs where the flowers shed them."

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Some Comical Expressions by Little Men and Women.

Little Hester has grown-up brothers and sisters and nephews and nieces who are older and bigger than she is herself. It has never occurred to her to be surprised at this; it is part of her world as she found it. She has not yet discovered that this state of things is somewhat unusual. Not long ago one of her married sisters sent for Hester to come and see a new baby, and accordingly the child was taken by her nurse to visit this new relative. She looked at the baby in mingled astonishment and delight. "Well, little sister," asked the baby's mother, "how do you like your new nephew?" "Oh, I like him," the child answered, earnestly, "but he can't be a nephew; he is too small. But, perhaps," she added, upon second thought, "he is big enough to be a grandson." And as "Hester's grandson" is the new baby known in the family.—Youth's Companion.

At one time, while loitering near the border of the pond in the Public Garden, which is not far from his residence, Mr. B. observed several small boys on the curbstone, in stooping postures, paddling the water with their hands. The temptation to tap the back of one of these bending urchins was great, and Mr. B. did tap one briskly. The boy straightened up like a flash, looked around and called out:

"What did you strike me for, sir?"

"So that you might rise and take this piece of money, my lad," said the old man, handing him a dime.

The boy, entirely appeased, grinned broadly, and instantly all the other boys flocked up to Mr. B., each one shouting at the top of his voice:

"Say, mister, hit me; will yer, mister?"—Boston Transcript.

Pat's Burglar.

I am going to tell you a story about my little boy Pat.

Pat was four years old on the 9th of July, but he insists that the "glorious Fourth" is his birthday. I heard him tell his sister that was why "ev-vybody" shot off fireworks. When I try to tell him the real reason for our greatest of national holidays, he always answers quite calmly: "Oh, yes, I know about dat—but I comded to you from hebben to-day, and you'se more gladder bout dat, isn't you?" There were real tears in his eyes when he added: "You 'most furdot it was my burfday, didn't you? Other folks didn't, though; jist lissen to de fire-crackers." I couldn't resist that—so from henceforth he shall celebrate his birthday on the Fourth of July.

But about the burglar. Mignonette had been reading aloud to Heartsease and Pat. While I think of it let me say that "Pat" is not my boy's real name, but he is round and chubby, and quite like a sturdy, pretty, burly Irish boy in looks, and so, his own name being a fearfully long one, we took to calling him "Pat." The story she read was "Editha's Burglar," and such a time as the children had discussing what each one would do if some night a burglar should appear! Mignonette couldn't decide, while Heartsease was certain she would be "fritened dwedfully." But Pat declared that he would kill anyone "what wanted to steal his mamma's things!"

I changed the conversation as soon I could, for talking of burglars does not lead to sweet dreams, and by-and-by we all went to bed.

Towards midnight I was awakened by a loud cry of "Mamma, mamma, come here, quick!"

It came from the nursery where "Pat" sleeps, and it was "Pat's" voice.

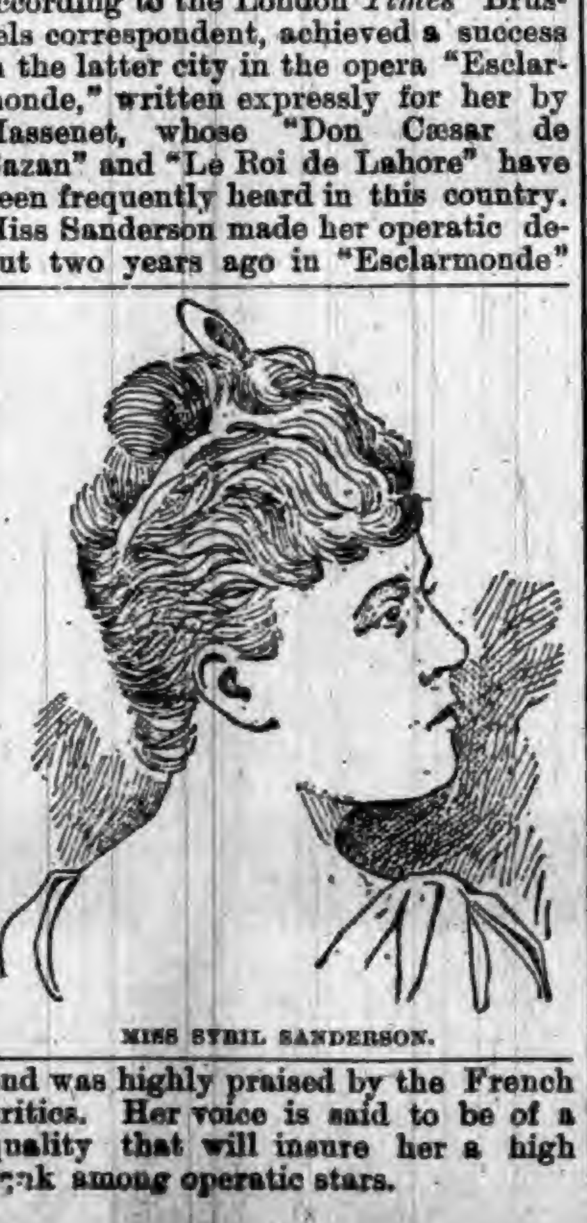
Up I jumped, but before I could get to the nursery, again, Pat shouted: "Hur-ry up, mamma! I'se dot a burga-lar wight by de fin-ders!"

Now who do you think the burglar was? Himself.

He had been sleeping, as he had been in the habit of doing, with one of his arms under his head—which had caused it to grow cold and numb; and awakening suddenly from a dream of burglars, and groping around in the dark with the other hand, he had found his own little stiff fingers, and he had held on to them firmly, thinking from their unfamiliar feeling they belonged to some one else, and that that some one else was a thief.—Detroit Free Press.

AN AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA.

Miss Sybil Sanderson, the beautiful young California girl whose remarkably melodious voice created a sensation in San Francisco four or five years ago, when she was an amateur, has, according to the London Times' Brussels correspondent, achieved a success in the latter city in the opera "Esclarmonde," written expressly for her by Massenet, whose "Don Cæsar de Bazan" and "Le Roi de Lahore" have been frequently heard in this country. Miss Sanderson made her operatic debut two years ago in "Esclarmonde" and was highly praised by the French critics. Her voice is said to be of a quality that will insure her a high rank among operatic stars.



MISS SYBIL SANDERSON.

A DOCTOR'S CONFESSION.

He Doesn't Take Much Medicine and Advices the Reporter Not To.

"Humbug? Of course it is. The so-called science of medicine is a humbug and has been from the time of Hippocrates to the present. Why, the biggest crank in the Indian tribes is the medicine man."

Very frank was the admission, especially so when it came from one of the biggest young physicians of the city, one whose practice is among the thousands, though he has been graduated but a few years, says the Buffalo Courier. "Very cozy was his office too, with its cheerful grate fire, its Queen Anne furniture, and its many lounges and easy chairs. He stirred the fire lazily, lighted a fresh cigar, and went on.

"Take the presciptions laid down in the books and what do you find? Poisons mainly, and nauseating stuffs that would make a healthy man an invalid. Why in the world science should go to poisons for its remedies I cannot tell, nor can I find any one who can.

"How does a doctor know the effect of his medicine?" he asked. "He calls, prescribes, and goes away. The only way to judge would be to stand over the bed and watch the patient. This cannot be done. So, really, I don't know how he is to tell what good or hurt he does. Some time ago, you remember, the Boston Globe sent out a reporter with a stated set of symptoms. He went to eleven prominent physicians and brought back eleven different prescriptions. This just shows how much science there is in medicine."

There are local diseases of various characters for which Nature provides positive remedies. They may not be included in the regular physician's list, perhaps, because of their simplicity, but the evidence of their curative power is beyond dispute. Kidney disease is cured by Warner's Safe Cure, a strictly herbal remedy. Thousands of persons every year write as does H. J. Gardiner, of Pontiac, R. I., Aug. 7, 1890:

"A few years ago I suffered more than probably ever will be known outside of myself with kidney and liver complaint. It is the old story. I visited doctor after doctor, but to no avail. I was at Newport, and Dr. Blackman recommended Warner's Safe Cure. I commenced the use of it, and found relief immediately. Altogether I took three bottles, and I truthfully state that it cured me."

Fish Culture at Lake Sunapee.

The status of the Fish Commission of New Hampshire when Mr. Powers first became its active spirit can be best described by the relation of an amusing incident, says Frederic M. Dey, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. He was anxious to obtain possession of all State property belonging to his department. After repeated demands to his predecessor in office, which were always followed by unnecessary and inexplicable delays, he was at first informed that upon a certain day the "property" would be forwarded to him by freight. He awaited its arrival with some impatience, and when at last it came he found himself the custodian of two old beer barrels, which had been remodeled into portable tanks (?) and which were not worth the expense of their transportation. They comprised the entire assets of the New Hampshire State Game and Fish Commission at that time. The new incumbent gazed upon them in contemptuous silence, and presently noticing that an old coffin handle had been attached to one of the barrels, he tore it off, placed it in his pocket and walked away. That same coffin handle is fastened upon one end of the "salmon box" at the Sunapee Lake hatching house to-day, and is jealously guarded as a most precious relic of the past.

During the fourteen years that have elapsed since Mr. Powers placed the assets of the Fish Commission in his coat pocket a vast amount of work has been accomplished, and at the present time the State contains three large hatching houses, while appropriations have been made for the construction of several others. And still the work goes steadily forward, impressing one with the conviction that in a few years more the State of New Hampshire will have become the ideal resort for anglers from all parts of the world.

The Minstrel Man.

He loved her as his own soul, and he called at her Austin residence last Sunday to put an engagement ring on her dainty finger.

"Can we sail down the stream of time together, pet, in the same gondola?" he whispered sweetly.

"Yes, George," she sighed, as she leaned her golden head against his diagonal vest pattern, "down to the shoreless sea of eternity, and beyond in the mystic spirit land our souls shall intertwine, and (leaping to her feet suddenly)—Oh, my! there he goes now!" and the young girl rushed to the window and looked out longingly for several minutes.

"What is the attraction?" said the young man, somewhat annoyed.

"He's just too sweet to live!" murmured the maiden, two much absorbed to hear George's voice. Then he got up and saw the end man of the minstrel troupe passing along on the other side of the street, so he calmly sat down and allowed the show to pass.—Texas Siftings.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Vigorous Men and Women.

The vigorous are they who pay attention to the laws of health, of which one of the foremost is, Take care of your digestion. Should a temporary attack of the enemy, dyspepsia, surprise you, foil his subsequent assaults with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. From the stomach come the fundamental supplies which minister to vigor, and, thoroughly transmuted into blood actively circulated, are the maintenance of the system. Pallid in countenance, nervous, attenuated in figure, appetiteless, poor sleepers, are the dyspeptic. Re-enforced and built up by the great stomachic, the wan and thin increase in color and bulk, appetite improves, nervous symptoms disappear, sleep grows tranquil and refreshing, and the intranquillity of mind and despondency notable in invalids gives place to light-heartedness, a capacity for racy enjoyment of the good things of this life. Use the Bitters for malarial, bilious, rheumatic and kidney troubles.

"Yes, but I want him to keep on chewing tobacco all the same. He kisses three or four more women, and the tobacco makes them sicker than it does me, for they haven't got used to it yet, like I have."

Nearly Everybody

Is troubled more or less with catarrh in the head. It originates in a cold or succession of colds, combined with impure blood. Disagreeable flow from the nose, tickling in the throat, offensive breath, pain over and between the eyes, ringing and bursting noises in the ears, are the more common symptoms. Catarrh is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strikes directly at its cause by removing all impurities from the blood, building up the diseased tissues and giving healthy tone to the whole system.

A Desirable Role.

A loquacious woman who had nearly talked her husband to death, surprised him the other day by the announcement that she was going on the stage.

"I will if you will appear in a part I select for you."

"What is that?"

"Dumb Girl of Seville."

A Poverty-stricken Millionaire!

This seems a paradox, but it is explained by one of New York's richest men. "I don't count my wealth in dollars," he said. "What are all my possessions to me, since I am a victim of consumption? My doctor tells me that I have but a few months to live, for the disease is incurable. I am poorer than that beggar yonder." "But," interupted the friend to whom he spoke, "consumption can be cured. If taken in time, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will eradicate every vestige of the disease from your system." "I'll try it," said the millionaire, and he did; and to-day there is not a healthier, happier man to be found anywhere. The "Discovery" strikes at the seat of the complaint. Consumption is a disease of the blood—is nothing more nor less than lung-scrofula—and it must and does yield to this wonderful remedy.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is not only an acknowledged remedy for that terribly fatal malady, when taken in time and given a fair trial, but also for all forms of Scrofulous, Skin and Scalp Diseases, as White Swellings, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas and kindred ailments.

Ringing Noises

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound or snapping like the report of a pistol, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also results from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for catarrh, which it cures by eradicating from the blood the impurity which causes and promotes this disease.

"For 25 years I have been troubled with catarrh in the head, indigestion, and general debility. I concluded to try a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me so much good that I continued its use till I have taken five bottles. My health has greatly improved, and I feel like a different woman." Mrs. J. B. Adams, 8 Richmond Street, Newark, N. J.

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effort to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I am never without the medicine in my house, as I think it is worth its weight in gold." Mrs. G. B. Gibb, 1029 Eighth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh with very satisfactory results. I have received more permanent benefit from it than from any other remedy." J. F. Hubbard, Streator, Ill.

THE AUBURN COURIER,

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY....NOVEMBER 20, 1890.

THE term of office for Mr. Bratton, the present prosecutor expires Oct. 28, 1891.

KOSCIUSKO county, gave a republican majority of from 285 to 656, a great falling off in their usual majority.

AN ENGLISH warship, was wrecked last week off Cape Finisterre, and of the 250 on board, all but three perished.

THE Detroit Free Press says the republicans have found out that the "tariff is a tack," and that they have just sat down on it.

BAD wreck of a freight train at Kansas City, Monday morning. Went through the bridge into the Kaw river. Several were killed.

THE ingrain carpet weavers of Philadelphia have struck against a reduction of wages. The McKinley bill don't seem to keep up wages as promised.

DR. KOCH, of Berlin, Prussia, is still creating a sensation with his cure for consumption. It is a fluid, and is injected into the arm as in inoculation for small pox.

"W. H. S.," the wild liar, who got up the articles about Judge McClellan and had them in the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, has been bouced from that paper. His lies were too rich for their blood.

BOYD, democrat has only 144 majority for governor of Nebraska. All other state officers republican by majorities of 2,000 to 5,000. Not much like their old majorities. Legislature in the hands of the Independents.

IN Minnesota, the democrats get but one state officer, the auditor. The republican candidate for governor has about 1,500 majority a big decrease over their 24,532 in 1888. The legislature has 24 majority for democrats and Alliance.

NEBRASKA shows up with a democrat for governor, republicans state officers, and the legislature with a majority of Alliance men. The Alliance men, also claim that in some way their votes were not all counted or they would have governor, also.

THE count in Connecticut shows a great many marked ballots. They had peculiar pencil marks on them, and must have been so fixed on purpose, as great pains had been taken to have the marks show in a certain way. It may cause some trouble.

IN THE city of New York, money is being raised to buy the site of the ancient city of Delphi, in Greece. It will take $80,000, and the amount is nearly all subscribed. They will excavate the ground to see what ancient art and other treasures can be found.

LEMCKE, treasurer of this state has just made his annual report. He gives receipts for the year at $4,711,304, and the exdenditures at $4,471,948. This shows a balance on hand of $239,356. The election being over, it appears there is not such an empty treasury after all. as republican papers claimed.

SIOUX Indians are looking for a Messiah just now, and are considerably excited. The terrified white people out there are praying that the Messiah, may be a man of peace. In the meantime they have asked Uncle Sam to send out a regiment or two of regulars to be ready for whatever may happen.

BRAZIL has been a republic for one year. She celebrated this last Saturday. The temporary president, Gen. Fonseca, who had been at the head of the provisional government so far, turned the government over to the congress on that day, and that body will conduct the affairs of the country hereafter.

THE people have evidently learned not to believe a thing republican papers say. All through the campaign these papers keep warning the people against democratic legislatures. But the people went to work and elected a democratic member wherever they could find a good man. In the two houses, the republicans have 43, and democrats 107.

THE great Thurman banquet came off last Thursday, at Columbus in grand style. Several hundred guests were present including Cleveland, Lamont, Joseph E. McDonald and noted democrats from far and near. Many speeches were made. the most notable being by Cleveland and Thurman. Both were wildly cheered. Thurman declared he is out of politics. As he is seventy seven this is no doubt a wise thing for the great Ohioan to do. But the hold Cleveland still has on the people, was made plain at every mention of his name. It looks as if he would be forced into the nomination in two years whether he wishes or not.

REPUBLICAN papers just now, all have the article headed "History Repeats Itself," in which they show that other tidal waves have come in "off years" and yet the republican party got the election two years later. This may all be true of a part of these "tidal waves," but not of all. There was quite a tidal wave in favor of the democrats in 1874, and two years later, Tilden swept the country for the democratic ticket. In 1882 the democrats got the benefit of another "tidal wave," and two years later, 1884, Cleveland was elected. Now in 1890 the tidal wave is with the democrats again, and we have every reason to believe that 1892, "history will repeat itself" to such an extent that the democrats will elect the president.

SENATOR PAYNE, of Ohio, is very ill at his home in Cleveland. His recovery is doubtful.

THE next congress will contain more northern democrats than southern ones. The solid south is likely to be repeated in a solid north.

A NEW silver bill, one for free coinage will probably be passed this winter by the present congress, as republicans are feeling the pressure from the people.

GRANITE cutters in Connecticut are on a strike. McKinley's high tariff don't give them any better wages. It was not made that way. It was made for the owners of the quarry.

A NEW law should be made to regulate better, the matter of fees and salaries for officers. THE COURIER did not make a big noise about this before election and then suddenly drop it when the election was over. That sort of thing might make a few votes, but it would never amend the law. But we believe, as do many others, that the salaries of some officers are needlessly high. It is now the duty of the legislature to make this right. We have a strong majority in both houses, and if we do not see to it that a good law is enacted, no one will be to blame but ourselves. Gov. Hovey will not dare to veto such a law. Indeed we are told he favors it. But we do not mean by a reduction of fees or salaries that our officers should be put on starvation wages. We believe the salary should be liberal, but not extravagant. It should be high enough to pay a good man to leave his business and work two or four years for the county. But it should not be high enough to make him in one short term, the richest man in his vicinity. It should be carefully framed. There should be none of the botch work that has characterized some of our laws on the subject. A man who has held important county offices should be consulted, and his experience put into the hands of the committee that is to frame the law. Let us have a sensible law, as sensible as some of those made by the last legislature. One that will save the people as much money as did the school book law—one that will guard their rights and help to keep pure the ballot box as thoroughly as does the new election law. But give us a good law and we will be satisfied.

Sioux Indians for War.

Word comes from Dakota that there is likely to be trouble with the Sioux Indians. Settlers living on the border of the Sioux reservation bring stories of alarm of the Indians, which is borne out by Joseph Buckley, who speaks their language. Buckley came in to-day and says that every Indian on the reservation will shortly go on the war path, and they have got posession of Custer's rifles, which the U. S. army have never found. Local hardware men have, in the last few days, sold their entire stocks of ammunition to the Indians.

The New County Officers.

Treasurer Sawvel last Friday furnished $150,000 bond for his good conduct and management of the treasurer's office. The real amount as marked down was $188,000. The names are among the most solid and substantial in the county. They are: John Leas, Wm. H. Leas, Eli Walker, Geo. Walker, James Blake, M. E. Krontz, John W. Baxter, James B. Baxter, Thomas Bubb, Daniel Tomlinson, T. H. Tomlinson, C. C. Walter, Isaac Sawvel, John Phillips, Douglas Kelley, Jacob Lutz, David Oberlin, John W. Boyle, Daniel Anthony, A. M. Barnes, W. S. Dancer, M. Boland, C. A. O. McClellan, Albert Robbins, A. J. Baxter, Fred. Gfeller, Orso Treeman. He takes the office this week. Mr. Coffinberry gave bonds in $10,000, Judge McClellan, L. J. Miller and J. L. Davis being on his bond. His commission came Friday, and he was sworn in the the same day. The term of Mr. Walters would expire Saturday, so the change came in all right. The sheriff and surveyor both filed their bonds, and they of course keep right on. We presume that clerk Moody, and recorder Williams will not file their bonds till they take their places, two years hence. Mr. Henderson we presume, will see.

The Democratic Press.

As showing the power of an able, inteligent and fearless press, and its influence in the "campaign of education," just closed, we copy the following from the speech of Congressman Springer, of Illinois, at the Thurman banquet at Columbus, Ohio, last Thursday, he said:

I did not expect to be called upon to respond to any sentiment on this occasion, and therefore will be very brief in response to that which has been suggested. To the press of the country we owe much for the result of the recent election. (Applause.) The press has at last taught the American people that a protective tariff is a tax. (Applause.) Mr. McKinley in his recent interview stated that the late elections had gone against the republican party for the reason that the people did not understand his bill. (Laughter.) The fact is that the recent elections went against the republican party is that the people did understand his bill. (Laughter and cheers), and for this understanding of the nation we are indebted to the press of the country. (Applause.) To the press we are indebted for the facts that on Tuesday last 150 majority of representatives were returned to the Fifty-second congress opposed to the McKinley bill. We will be also indebted to the press for guiding that party in the future to wise and patriotic legislation (applause), it will restore to the house of representatives its deliberative character. (Applause.) It will reestablish constitutional and conservative methods of legislation which have prevailed for one hundred years and make the house of representatives what it ought to be, a deliberative body. It will also point the way to future success.

Vote of Indiana.

The Indianapolis Sentinel of last Thursday gives the vote of the state for all parties and on all candidates. It will be seen that Judge Mitchell heads the list, with Oscar Henderson as second. The largest vote was cast for Secretary of State Matthews, and the total vote for all the candidates for secretary of state foots up 477,643, a falling off of almost 9 per cent from the campaign of '88.

Commissioner Patterson.

As our readers now know, Commissioner Patterson was defeated by two votes. This is a narrow margin, and therefore, a great temptation to enter into a contest in the courts. We understand that many of our party friends have urged Mr. Patterson to make this contest, believing that enough errors could be shown to give him the place. It is quite likely this would prove to be the case, as the records on the various tally sheets, indicate a few more errors that would favor democrats, than for republicans. But there are other things to be considered. Under the new law many innocent errors may have occurred that would be difficult to settle, and a contest under such circumstances would be very unsatisfactory, and even if successful, would leave hard feelings and dissatisfaction. Mr. Patterson has no desire to enter into such a condition of things. He feels hurt, of course, to see how those who should have been most in his favor, went against him. But the great success of his party, not only in the county, but all over, makes him think that amid general rejoicing there should be no contest. And so he will rejoice with the victors and not mourn over his own defeat. He believes as every patriotic man should, that party welfare is greater than personal interests. He will not contest. He will serve out the remaining year of his term, to the best interests of the people and the county, and at its close, turn his important trust over to his successor with but the one wish that the county's interests may still be uppermost in the hearts of those who succeed him. While we greatly regret Mr. Patterson's defeat, we cannot help but admire the patriotic course he is taking, and the high spirit of honor, which impels him to it. It is the spirit that should actuate every democrat who has ever been honored by his party. Such an example should be studied by every democratic officeholder, as well as by everyone who has held office, or who expects to do so.

A Lucky Lady.

MILAN, TENN., Sept. 23.

Mrs. G. W. Combs, of Humboldt, Tenn., a former resident of this place, has recently fallen heir to half a million dollars left by her Scotch grandfather. She has forwarded proof of her relationship to the lawyers and will receive her inheritance to-day.—Evening Mail and Express, New York, Sept. 23, 1890.

We are Mrs. Combs' lawyers and by her seeing our advertisement became the agents of her good fortune. We have a number of similar claims in our hands and expect to gain them. If your ancestors came from the old country write us and enclose 25 cents for reply. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain alone, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

THE Butler Record claims in an article (copied of course) that "156 new manufacturing establishments have been created by the McKinley bill in three weeks." Then it adds the equally silly statement, that, "The democrtic press is anxious to change all this. It would have the 156 new enterprises chilled to death by a repeal of the protective law." And follows with a lot of other drivel as inane as this. Now, we challenge the editor to name a single democratic editor who wants to do any of these things named. It is on account of stuff as senseless as this, that republican voters who read, have abandoned their party and come over onto the side of education and intelligence. Democratic papers don't talk to their readers as if they were ignoramuses, or imbeciles. If we did, our voters would become disgusted, just as republicans have become. The masses are now much more intelligent than the great mass of republican editors. That is what is disrupting that party. It is such talk as the above, that is reacting, and turning the best men men over to the democracy. Let them come.

Will Send Him to School.

(Chicago Herald.)

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 12.—It has now been developed that C. McKay, the alliance man who was elected judge of the Twenty-fourth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Barber, Harper and Comanche, has no knowledge of law. But the alliance is not discouraged over the little discovery and it has raised a purse to send McKay to the Ann Arbor. Mich., Law School to take a course in law. His term begins in January, so that he has sixty days to master the law and prepare himself for the administration of justice in one of the largest judicial districts in the state. There are alliance county attorneys elected in several counties of the state, it is said. none of whom are eligible, as the law plainly provides that a county attorney must be a member of the bar. The lawmakers evidently never anticipated that a man who had not studied law would ever be elected a judge, hence the statues do not provide that a judge shall be so qualified, and McKay or any other man. no matter if he be as ignorant of the law as necessity itself, is eligible to a judgeship.

Hazzard Once More.

Hazzard is irrepressible. He bobs up serenely at every possible opportunity and from all corners of the globe, indeed if the globe had more corners it would not furnish too many for the ever present and always willing George Hazzard The latest from him is in a Spokane Falls dispatch to the Chicago Herald, dated Nov. 14, which says:

George Hazzard, of Tacoma, says arrangements have been concluded and the capital raised by some prominent New York railroad magnates, among whom is mentioned Henry Villard, to build a railroad from Puget Sound to Alaska. It is expected the line will be located next spring. The company has a capital of $150,000,000 and it is understood that a line of ferry boats will be put on to carry entire trains across Behring Sea, where they will connect with a Russian railroad across the desert wastes of Sibera. The latter part of the project is still uncertain, but a road to Juneau will be commenced early in the spring. Besides the seal fisheries, mines and lumber, it is claimed there are coal banks off the Alaskan coast that are practically inexhaustible. Mr. Hazzard predicts that in five years the great fish industry of the Atlantic coast will be transferred to north Pacific waters.

Fees and Salaries.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

The democratic press of the state is practically a unit in favor of abolishing the fee system and remunerating all officers with reasonable salaries. The leading democratic members of the legislature have boldly come out in support of the movement to redeem the pledges which the democracy, in convention assembled, made to the people. The enactment of a salary bill is a foregone conclusion. Those who hope to stave off this reform by the creation of a commission to investigate the question and report to the legislature in 1893, are doomed to disappointment. The incoming legislature is composed of men who have the ability to grasp the question and the firmness to resist the pressure that some of the recipients of enormous fees may bring to bear upon them. Conventions of auditors and sheriffs will not prevent the democratic members of the legislature from discharging their duty. With the next legislature, the people are "in it."

To frame a reasonable salary bill and classify the counties according to the business transacted, and to equalize the salaries according to the skill and responsibility attached to the office, will be no easy task. But the majority in each house will be so large that the joint committee appointed to frame the bill will be able to sit daily, without the interruption of roll calls. Of course, the committee will be empowered to send for persons and papers, and give hearing to the officers affected by the change. The revenue of each office by counties can be ascertained, and so can the clerical and other expenses of conducting such offices. In some cases, the question of population will have to be deviated from. A county having fifteen townships will give the auditor more work than one having ten or twelve, although in the latter there may be a city making the population of the two counties equal. However, this will be a question of detail, which can be adjusted by making numerous classifications. This should not stand in the way of relieving the tax payers. If it is necessary, there can be as many classifications as there are counties.

Cheaper Tile.

Until December 20, we will sell all sizes of our tile at a reduction of ten per cent. from former prices. Parties who wish to take advantage of this liberal offer can come in, purchase their tile, and have them counted out and piled away, and then come and haul them at their convenience. A CRANK got on a spree the other night and went up to the White House, and tore around at a great rate, threatening and cursing the president. Like Guiteau, he was a disappointed office seeker. He was very properly kicked out and finally locked up.

THE fact that Judge Mitchell leads the democratic state ticket and has over 21,000 majority suggests, 1—That the democratic denunciation of the partisan supreme court was indorsed by the people; 2—That there is no burning desire to restore the Hon. R. Wes McBride to the judicial bench; 3—That the lie that there was no soldier on the democratic ticket failed, like many of its companions, to have the desired effect.—Lagrange Democrat.

Popular Election of Senators.

[Chicago Herald.]

"We favor the election of the U. S. senators by the people" was one of the planks adopted by the last democratic state convention. The people, having approved the platform by 20,000 majority, it becomes the duty of the incoming legislature to adopt a concurrent resolution requesting Indiana's congressmen to vote for a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution for the election of U. S. senators by popular vote. Public sentiment in favor of this reform is spreading to such an extent that if all the democratic senators who will sit in the Fifty-second congress vote to submit to the proposed amendment it will be successful, for enough holdover republican senators have already committed themselves to this policy to give the measure a majority in the senate. The Farmers' alliances in the south and northwest have taken up the question, and, in all probability, the amendment would be ratified by the legislatures of two-thirds of the states if submitted.

No better argument in favor of changing the mode of electing the United States senators than the muddle which the election of one in New Hampshire has thrown the legislature into. The people of that state voted on Nov. 4 for a lower tariff, but they will not for months know whether a protectionist or a man representing their sentiment will be elected. The same is true of Kansas and South Dakota. The people of Illinois have declared for Gen. Palmer, but an accident or a death of one man may send a republican to the senate, as was the case when Logan defeated Morrison in 1885. The democratic states of New York and Connecticut are misrepresented in the senate, because of this infamous system. There are men in the senate who would never be thought of by their constituents, if they had to submit their chances of election to the people. Gerrymandering is the offspring of the present system of electing the U. S. senators by state legislatures.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned, having been restored to health by simple means, after suffering for several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease, CONSUMPTION, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To those who desire it he will cheerfully send, free of charge, a copy of the prescription used, which they will find a sure cure for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, CATARRH, BRONCHITIS, and all Throat and Lung Maladies. He hopes all sufferers will try his Remedy, as it is invaluable. Those desiring the prescription, which will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing, will please address, REV EDWARD A. Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

Boils, carbuncles, and other skin eruptions indicate that the system is endeavoring to reject poisonous acids, and that Ayer's Sarsaparilla is imperatively needed. It is the most reliable of all blood medicines. Ask your druggist for it, and take no other.

Harper's Bazar, published November 21st, will be a Thanksgiving number. Among its contents especially appropriate to the season will be Thanksgiving stories by Bessie Chandler, Hamilton Ormsbee, and others, with full-page illustrations by A. B. Wenzell and C. S. Reinhart. The number will also contain a superbly illustrated poem, "The Old Red Settle by the Fire," by Hezekiah Butterworth, and other special features of an interesting and attractive character.

Mrs. Ernest Sheets spent Sunday with her relatives at Butler.

If your blood is impure regulate your liver with Simmons Liver Regulator.

Mrs. E. P. Dickinson, of Waterloo, was in town a short time yesterday afternoon.

For a mild tonic, gentle laxative and invigorant take Simmons Liver Regulator.

To cure constipation, sick headache and dyspepsia Simmons Liver Regulator has no equal.

Mrs. D. Swihart and sister, Mrs. Newton Eastman were the guests of Mrs. M. Houston, Tuesday. Mrs. Eastman resides in Chicago and will visit friends here about two weeks.

Marshal Headley resigned his office Monday on account of continued ill health. He has not yet fully recovered from the severe sickness he had last summer. He expects to go away for treatment.

We have a jubilant copy of the Wyandotte Union, published at Upper Sandusky, Ohio, evidently sent by our friends Mr. and Mrs. Cramer of that place. It shows that Ohio democratic papers have their crowing roosters trotted out about as we have in Indiana.

Why not earn money in spare time and evenings as local agent for warranted trees and plants? Men and women do well without experience. Send stamp for terms to J. Eugene Whitney, Rochester, N. Y. He is reliable, and pays salary to successful agents. tf

The Lady Godiva must have had exceptionally long hair since it completely concealed her lovely person. Since Ayer's Hair Vigor came into use such examples are not so rare as formerly. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but gives it a rich, silken texture.

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. Chrysanthemum social.

Mrs. Frank Hogue is still in poor health.

Work is being pushed on the new block by the postoffice.

Herb Weaver's little child has been quite sick, but is now better.

Pains in the region of the kidneys are cured by Simmons Liver Regulator.

Mrs. Judge McBride, of Elkhart, has been here this week visiting her sister, Mrs. John W. Baxter.

There is a petition up to have an arc light put up east of the Ninth street bridge. It would be quite a convenience.

Lewis Sapp, one of the wide awake young democrats of Garrett gave us a friendly call Monday. Always glad to see the boys.

Mrs. Mary Rhodes, whose obituary we publish to-day, probably settled in this county at an earlier date than any other woman now among us.

G. W. Frick and his son Charlie, both good friends to the COURIER were in town Tuesday, on business. Always glad to meet the old neighbors.

W. P. Harter has gone east to bring home an immense stock of holiday and other seasonable goods. Then look out for rushing business and good bargains.

Mrs. Kent, a sister of G. H. and F. J. Yeebera, residing at West Unity, and Mrs. Cooney of Bryan, have been here a few days visiting in the two families above named.

Uncle John Nelson, of Newville township was up last week and got his cane, the gold headed one that Fred Bauer found. He was well pleased to get the keepsake into his posession once more.

Mrs. Phil, Plum took Maud Boyer to the reform school for women, at Indianapolis Sunday evening. She will stay there eight years, according to orders of the court. It will be a blessing to her.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

W. H. McIntosh has been on the sick list a week or two, but we hope it will not prove serious. He has not been in robust health for some time, and like many old soldiers, will not likely be sound again.

The B & O. is the oldest road. It has just made its sixty fourth annual report which shows up well for the road, for though their expenses have been heavy for the year, they have paid half a million on the bonded debt.

W. E. Rush was around on the streets Monday, skipping like a sixteen year old boy. It was however, his seventy-sixth birthday and he was feeling gay. That is pretty good old age, but we hope many more years may be added to his stay with us.

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Hebel. Program, Outline History of England, Mrs. Moody; Our English, Miss Ramsey; The Religious History of England, Mrs. Henry; How the Saxons Lived, Miss Barclay; Select Reading, Mrs. Henry.

We have some late papers from Los Angeles, Cal., sent we presume by Hull Sheets, just to let us know how things are flying on the Pacific coast. They also give a good idea of the way the late election was run out there. What they need, evidently, is the Australian ballot system.

J. L. Davis received a letter from T. B. Totten, Huntsville, Kansas, containing an invitation to the wedding of Mr. Totten's daughter, Hattie D. Totten to a Mr. Henry S. Schall, to take place Dec. 2. Mr. Totten resided in Auburn many years, and our people will be interested in hearing from him and his family.

T. R. Marshall of the well known law firm of Marshall & McNagny of Columbia City, accompanied by Ex-Judge Heusch, of Ft. Wayne, were in Auburn last Saturday on some law business. Both are able young lawyers, and staunch democrats. The latter has just been elected to the legislature from Allen county.

If any of our Montana friends remember of sending us the Anaconda Standard of Oct. 12, and the Butte Miner of Oct. 16, they can guess about how long they were on the road, when we tell them they reached the COURIER office, Tuesday Nov. 18. A well organized tramp could have walked through and brought them in that time. But now that election is over, we hope the postal people will have more time to work.

The Dispatch says we should be consistent and not advertise that the McKinley bill raises prices and in the same paper say our advertisers are selling cheap. That's all right. Our advertisers do sell cheap, because they read in the COURIER for months back, that prices would go up, if the new tariff bill passed. So they went and laid in stocks before the rise, and can now sell cheap. Merchants who believed what republican papers said, waited to buy later, after the increased tariff would "lower prices." They got left. Moral: Read the COURIER.

C. C. Walter, retiring auditor will not move back to his farm for a short time, as he is repairing and improving his house and must wait till that is done. In the meantime he will be over there a good deal. He has been a familiar and promient figure here for four years, and we hate to lose him. But of course he has his business on the farm to attend to. He has been an able, efficient and industrious office, one who was always pleasant and courteous to those who had business at the offices. Our people will be pleased to know that his successor, Mr. Coffinberry is also an affable and courteous business man, and the patrons of the office will find him always ready to give them proper attention in any matters connected with this important office.

Everybody skate Thanksgiving.

Don't forget the chrysanthemum social Friday evening.

The L. L. C. will meet this week with Mabel Hartman.

The nights are getting to be about as long as they make 'em.

Mrs. Boland has been ill for several weeks, but is improving now.

Harter's store will be closed on Thanksgiving day from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Remember the social at the Presbyterian church Friday evening of this week.

Dr. S. B. Johnson, dentist, will be in his office at Waterloo on Thursday of each week.

The youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Borst has been sick a few days, but is, we believe improving.

Callie Williams died Saturday afternoon, after a long lingering illness. Her disease was consumption.

Judge McClellan goes back to Washington right after Thanksgiving, so as to be present at the opening of Congress, the first Monday in December.

Mrs. R. H. Murch and Miss West of Butler, came over yesterday, the latter on business at the recorder's office, and the former to get some dentist work done by Dr. Johnston.

The ladies of the W. R. C. will entertain a nickel social at the residence of Mrs Swisher on next Tuesday afternoon Nov. 25, from 2 till 5 p. m. All are cordially invited.

Miss Anna Schoaff daughter of A. P. Schoaf, was in town over Sunday, having come up from Ft. Wayne Saturday with Flora Hoffman. She visited with the latter and other friends. She is taking a course in music at the conservatory.

Cal Husselman filled a telegraph order for forty of his fine Poland China pigs. They were shipped to Iowa. Cal is the most extensive breeder of this kind of stock in Northern Indiana. Another instance that DeKalb county boys are winners.

Don't forget the dinner Thanksgiving at the M. E. church. The ladies are making an extra effort to have a good dinner. Come and we know you will be satisfied, and go home saying, "I am glad I was there." Dinner from 12 o'clock till 2.

There is an error in our table of the votes, as published last week. Mr. Patterson received 75 votes in Stafford township, instead of 77 as we had it. It was a misprint such as is liable to happen in a list of figures as great as in that table. All who wish to keep the list should make a note of this change.

Those who attend the Thanksgiving dinner at the M. E. church can be accommodated with separate tables for families. This will be a new and agreeable feature of the social. It will be much easier and cheaper to get a thanksgiving dinner with them, than to provide one at home. You will help along a good cause at the same time.

Peter Stutz, who has been sick so long, died Saturday Nov. 15, at his home in this place. He was buried in the Catholic cemetery Tuesday forenoon. The services were by Father Young at the Catholic church. Deceased was a member of the order of Catholic Knights and his wife will receive this insurance, which we are told will be $2,000.

The Waterloo Press tries to make believe that the democratic county candidates got their places by the aid of what he calls the whisky interest. Nothing could be farther from the fact. If the "whisky interest" took sides at all, it was in favor of three republican candidates, and we presume the Press knows just who they were.

The "Standing Committee" of the Church of God, will convene in Auburn, Thursday Nov. 27, 1890, to transact such special business as may properly come before that body. In the evening Rev. J. Bumpus will address the people. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend this evening service. Mr. Bumpus is a man of ability, and it will be to the pleasure of all to hear him.

Grandma Long has returned from her extended visit with friends and relatives in Pennsylvania. She visited her son, Samuel E. Long, who resides near Pittsburg, as well as relatives in London county, Va. She got through the journey well for a lady of her age, for she is now in her eightieth year. She found Sam, and family well, though he had lately had an exciting and dangerous experience with natural gas, which it seems is as tricky down there, as here. He took a very prominent, though unwilling part in an explosion receiving some injuries, but has now fully recovered.

The lecture for the K. P. boys at the Lutheran church Tuesday evening drew a large crowd. There were the Knights and their friends, that takes about everybody, then there were the friends of Mr. Myers, which again takes about everybody, and then there were the people who like to hear a good lecture anyway, and that takes about everybody again. And then, everyone likes to hear good singing and the Arions were there. So of course the beautiful church was filled full according to scripture measure. Our young legal friend, Mr. Brickman presided, and made a splendid chairman. The Arions sang to the delight of the audience, and Mr. Myers delivered a grand lecture. His subject as announced in last week's COURIER, was in line with the feeling of the meeting, being a discourse on the principles of the Order of Knights of Pythias. It abounded with good thoughts, interesting illustrations, and eloquent passages. At its close, the people gathered about him to grasp his hand once more. He is now located at Elkhart, a lively, bustling city, and likes his new home very well. This is the second address he has made the order here, he being one of the charter members of this place.

Skate Nov. 27.

See that elegant violin in Davenports For sale cheap.

A new bill of fare Friday evening at the Presbyterian church.

Mrs. E. Funk, the new milliner on the south side of the square, has been quite sick for a week or two, but is now improving.

Mr. McCorkle, a former well known citizen of Waterloo, was here a few days this week, a guest in the family of A. B. Richards.

Skating at the Rink Nov. 27, afternoon and evening. Let all our roller skatists take notice. It has been a long time since they had a chance.

A chrysanthemum social will be given by the ladies of the Presbyterian church Friday evening from 5 to 7. Everybody come and get a good meal for 15 cents.

Miss Lettie Meese started Monday for Ft. Wayne, where she will attend the Taylor University and take a course in music. She has attended the same school before.

See the advertisement of Drs. Christopher & Thompson in to-day's paper. They are the managers of the Lima, Ohio, Curative Institute and we are told are good physicians.

Marion Willis and Miss Nellie Green were married last evening, and the boys gave them a belling. This latter part of the ceremony is getting too common, and is very annoying to the neighbors.

Now let us fix up the sidewalks at the new Ninth street bridge. Someone will get hurt there some of these dark nights. It is a case that demands prompt attention, but we don't know whose duty it is as yet.

W. H. Dills and wife were over to Spencerville Wednesday, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Rhodes, whose obituary we publish this week. There was an immense attendance of old settlers from far and near, as she and her husband were very prominent among the early pioneers.

Geo. H. Draggoo, of Garrett, starts for Michigan next Monday, where he will make his home. He goes into the same section with his brother James E. Draggoo, and where Perry Link also resides. We wish him prosperity and send the COURIER northward also, to help keep him company during the long evenings.

Mrs. E. Berry, south of town, sent in COURIER last week, a fine bouquet of flowers, of which she always has a profusion of the nicest. They included several varieties of chrysanthemums and the biggest calla lily we ever saw. Mrs. Berry has our thanks, as has also Reba Houser, by whom they were delivered.

James Campbell sees snakes once in a while, although strictly temperate. The other evening as he came down town, the electric light was swinging in the breeze, and its large wire cast a black shadow on the telegraph pole, in such a way as to look like a huge snake coming down. Jim gave a yell and lit out, till he saw his mistake.

Our friend Lee Gœtschius will read in this week's issue of the COURIER the fulfillment of his hope, expressed in his letter, that his "Mother State Indiana has redeemed herself." A majority that averages more than 20,000, and 64 majority on joint ballot in the legislature, are pretty good evidences that the old Hoosier state is fully "redeemed."

The COURIER and the Dispatch are the only papers in the county that got out a full table of the vote for this county, and published it. The papers containing this vote should be filed away and kept for future use. We also have a limited number of copies to supply those who lose their papers in the coming two years. The vote in detail is quite a study.

It is "Marshal Pfeffrl" now. Our friend Joe Pfeffrl was appointed to that office Monday evening to fill the vacancies made by Mr. Headley's resignation. We hope Joe will prove a good officer and think he will. He is familiar with many of the duties of the office already, and we presume got the place on his merits. It is hardly possible that the Garrett Bologna helped him with its great "floo." However we wait to hear from that great institution.

D. H. Patty, a prominent nurseryman in Geneva, New York has written us enquiring where he can get a few good, reliable men to solicit orders. He wishes men to canvass and take orders for Trees, Shrubs, and Vines for fall delivery and promises steady employment to good salesmen. If any of our readers desire a good position we would advise them to write to Mr. Patty for particulars. Address with reference, D. H. PATTY, Nurseryman, Geneva, New York.

MARRIED: Mr. Joseph Morr and Miss Anna M. Showalter were united in marriage Sunday Nov. 16, 1890, at the residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. W. L. Meese in Auburn. The bride and groom are both residents of this vicinity and very worthy young people. They have our hearty congratulations and good wishes. There were present to witness the ceremony, Mr. Samuel Morr, a brother of the groom, Miss Showalter, a sister of the bride, Miss Effie Provines and Charles Wyatt.

Meeting at Fairview Church.

Rev. T. E. Lancaster, president of the Indiana conference, M. P. church, will make his official visit to the St. Joe charge, Nov. 21-23. The meeting this year will be held at Fairview church, preaching on Friday and Saturday evenings at 7 o'clock, Sunday at 9, a. m. Social services at 10:30, a. m. A sermon by Rev. T. E. Lancaster; this will be followed by the usual services of the dedication. The meetings will be continued for several evenings. All are cordially invited to be present. S. S. STANTON, Pastor.

Stole Their Spoons.

J. L. Ferguson, who resides on the old Messenger farm northeast of here, had quite an interesting experience, with a sneak thief last Wednesday. He was at work fixing his well with several men to help him, when about three o'clock they heard a noise in the house, as if some one was in it. He went into the house, but saw no one, and soon came out again. Soon after this he heard it again, and then one of his men, said, "There he goes," and sure enough there was a man just going off the porch. Mr. Ferguson called to him to know what he had been in there for. The man replied "For a drink." Ferguson told the fellow he knew better, and started out after him. The man got into the road and seeing Ferguson was likely to follow, called back at the latter saying, "Now you have followed me far enough." Ferguson replied that he should do as he pleased. But the man was evidently armed, and reaching into his pocket for his revolver gave Ferguson to understand, that if he came farther, he would shoot. He then jumped over into the thicket on Hi. Weaver's farm and got away. It was afterwards learned, that he and another stranger got their supper at Henry Balliet's about four or five o'clock. Mr. F. thinks there were originally two men in his house, and that they got in while he was over to A. M. St. Clair's to get some well tools, for when they came back they saw a tall man going away. It is supposed, that the other remained in the house, and was secreted up stairs when Mr. F. went into the house the first time he heard the noise. The thief had taken a few things, a set of new silver teaspoons, a pair of kid gloves, a silk handkerchief and twenty-five cents in change, belonging to his little boy. The thief was a small man, with sandy hair and wore striped overalls and rather seedy clothes. It was rather a bold piece of business.

Court.

Court closed for this session on Saturday. There had been a good deal of work done, of various kinds. We give such as we think our readers will care to hear. It will be remembered that Williams and Benner, went to prison five years on the charge of seduction. The young girl concerned, Maud Boyer, was afterward sentenced to go to the Reformatory for Women, at Indianapolis, where she will have eight years in which to mend her ways. She is quite young. The case from Garrett, for damages, for assault, Elizabeth Meese against Ed. Sargent, lasted nearly all of last week, and the jury, after quite a pull, decided for the defendant, Sargent. The plaintiff filed a motion for a new trial, and the matter will be heard on the sixth day of the December term. Viola Munn was divorced from Geo. Munn, and given custody of child and $300 alimony. Case of Munn vs B. & O. railroad, the plaintiff got $120. In the divorce case of Ida S. vs Chas. H. Moltz, it was decided that the charges must be made more specific. Martha M. was divorced from John A. Thompson; and Sarah E. Pilgrim was divorced from James D. Pilgrim and given custody of the child. The next term of court begins in three weeks from next Monday, that is December 15.

Thanksgiving.

The president has issued the usual proclamation for the observance of thanksgiving, fixing the date at Thursday, Nov. 27. There will be union services at the Presbyterian church, as stated elsewhere, and we presume that many of our business houses will close from 10 till 2 o'clock, though no decided action has been taken in the matter as yet. The only one who has notified us as yet, is Mr. Harter. It is proper that a sense of thankfulness for the blessings of the year, as well as respect for the president, the head of this great nation, should have its influence in giving a general observance of the occasion.

Unclaimed Letters.

Unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Auburn, Ind., for the week ending Nov. 11, 1890: Mrs. Maggie Fulk, Elk Bardner, H. C. Fisher, T. M. Fisher, Henry Harnish, Thomas Henner, Sam W. Moore, Frank Osborn, John Strombe, Michael Wagner.

On calling for above please say "advertised." Geo. W. Gordon. P. M.

Bill of Fare.

The M. E. ladies will place before you at their dinner Thanksgiving day the following bill of fare: Biscuit, soup, potatoes, roast turkey, turnips, pickles, celery, cold-slaw, plum pudding, mince and pumpkin pies, cranberry sauce and fruit, tea and coffee. Don't forget the date.

The Big Scaffold Down.

The high wind Monday evening lifted the big scaffold at the new M. E. church clear from the tower, and sent it to the ground with a loud crash that was heard all over town. It was aboutly 8 in the evening when that particular gust came, though it had been blowing for some hours. People at once rushed to the scene, and found the scantlings and boards of the scaffold strewed all about and broken into splinters, in some cases. The long rain for the last twenty hours had evidently loosened its hold on the brick tower, and made it easy for the wind to tip it out. It stood above the tower, 47 feet in air, and under ordinary circumstances would have been strong enough for the workmen to use. In falling, a portion of it struck the smaller tower at the east, and lodging there took the form of kindling wood. Some damage was done to those parts of the roof that had the slate put on, breaking holes into the slate and sending the broken pieces flying all about. It will cost several days work to get things where they were before but otherwise the damage is not great. The top of the scaffold was about 110 feet from the ground, and it is fortunate that none of the nearer dwellings were injured.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

ATTEMPT TO ROB A TRAIN ON THE TEXAS PACIFIC.

Forty Shots Exchanged Between Guards and Bandits—A Building Blown to Pieces at Lima, Ohio—Official Vote of Ohio—Powderly Re-Elected—A Fearful Crime—Parnell's Future.

FEARFUL FIGHT.

Between Guards on a Texas Pacific Train and Bandits.

The eastbound Texas and Pacific train was held up by four men, just on entering the station of Kent, Texas. One of the robbers named Smith confessed to the station agent at Kent and a number of guards were placed on the train. The plan was that, immediately after leaving Kent, Smith was to go into the baggage car and kill the engineer and fireman, if they refused to do his bidding, and at the same time his confederates were to attack the passengers and, if necessary, kill the conductor. However, the guards were ready for the robbers, and at the first symptoms of disturbance they opened fire and in all about forty shots were exchanged, and, as far as could be learned, one of the guards and two of the robbers were wounded. Upon seeing this resistance the robbers jumped from the train, which had come to a standstill, and escaped under cover of darkness. Smith is at Foyah now, and declares that all of his confederates were ranchers in the Rio Grande Valley. He says he is in fear of his life, and that he knows he will be killed if his former confederates ever get hold of him.

Parnell Will Marry Mrs. O'Shea and Retire.

It is rumored in London that Mr. Parnell has definitely decided to retire from the leadership of the Irish party, and that as soon as the law permits he will be married to the divorced wife of Capt. O'Shea. If Mr. Parnell abandons the leadership, it is understood that his successor will enjoy the benefit of his continuous advice. In the meantime it is undeniable that the excessive virulence of the Tory editorials has caused a reaction in public sentiment with regard to Mr. Parnell in connection with recent events.

In the Edingburgh town council notice has been given of a motion to remove the name of Charles Stewart Parnell from the burgess roll.

Wrangling.

Chicago Special: The National World's Fair Commission spent considerable time in a heated discussion regarding the site, but a politic resolution by McKenzie was passed, referring all plans for public buildings to the committee on buildings and grounds. This is all that prevented a tempestuous outbreak. The executive committee directed the president and secretary to sign no vouchers for the expense of the committee on foreign affairs until further notice. This is to prevent the head of the foreign affairs committee from establishing headquarters in London without the express consent of the director general.

Buried in the Wreck.

A special from Lima, Ohio, says: A large building in course of erection at the Solar refinery collapsed, a number of workmen being buried in the wreck. E. S. Prindel, a mason, whose home was in Michigan, and James Cable, from Kenton, laborer, were instantly killed; and W. J. Cox and Jeff Winner probably fatally injured. Nine others were hurt, most of them seriously. The only way to account for the accident is that recent excessive rains may have undermined the foundation.

A Fatal Casuality.

Wm. Hackett, a Reading railroad supervisor, was instantly killed near the North Mahoney colliery, near Mahoney City, Pa. He was directing a gang of workmen under a trestle when an employe named Cavern accidently dropped a heavy log over the edge, which struck Hackett on the top of his head breaking his neck and crushing his skull.

Official Vote in Ohio.

The official abstract of the vote of Ohio at the late election has been completed and shows the plurality of Ryan, Republican, to be 10,969. The total vote was 742,972. The official figures do not change the result in the Congressional districts. The delegation will stand seven Republicans, fourteen Democrats.

The Printers' Home.

The trustees of the proposed Childs-Drexel home for aged and infirm printers was in session at Chicago. The home is to be located at Colorado Springs, where eighty acres of land adjoining the town were given for a charitable building, to be commenced this year.

A Fearful Crime.

A fearful crime has come to light in the town of Thaun, Alsac. A woman of that place, impressed with the idea that she and her family were threatened with starvation, after cutting the throats of her five children, killed herself.

Powderly Re-Elected.

Mr. Powderly and Mr. Hayes were re-elected at the Knight's convention held at Denver without opposition. Hugh Cavanaugh, of Ohio, was elected General Worthy Foreman, after a close contest with M. L. Wheat, of Iowa.

Last of the Gang.

Jackson (Miss.) special: Rube Smith, the last of the notorious Rube brothers' gang, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary by the United States Court.

Senatorial Elections.

Governor Gordon has been elected United States Senator by the Georgia Legislature to succeed Senator Braum.

A Cheyenne special says: Gov. F. E. Warren was elected to the United States Senate as colleague to J. M. Carry, who was elected last week. Seven ballots were necessary to make the choice.

Girl Burned to Death.

A special from Bridgeville, Dela., says that a tenement house on the farm of H. P. Cannon was burned and that a nine-year-old daughter of John Henry (colored) was burned to a crisp.

Strange Finding of a Dead Man.

A man named Trumbo, living near Fostoria, Ohio, found in his barnyard a well dressed man, dead with a bullet in his brain. The murdered man is about forty years of age, heavy black moustache, black hair, slightly sprinkled with gray, on one arm was tattooed a woman's picture and on the other, the initials "W. L. C." and looks as though he were an iron worker. In his pocket was found a piece of paper with the address of "A. Jenkins, Goodland, Newton County." Another with the name "Nellie Meyers, Leesburg, Ind." and a piece of a Toledo price current of November 7, on the back of which was written, "Augusta." He had nothing else in his pockets but a piece of tobacco and a few trinkets. He was seen in a cigar store the night before with a watch and chain and a good roll of money.

HON. ALLEN G. THURMAN.

His Birthday Appropriately Celebrated at Columbus.

Columbus special: Under the auspices of the Thurman Club of Columbus, the anniversary of the birth of Allen G. Thurman was celebrated. Throughout the entire day every incoming train has borne to Ohio, Democrats of prominence, from all sections of the United States, until the scene resembled a national convention. One of the first to arrive was ex-President Cleveland, accompanied by Hon. Dan Lamont, of New York. Cleveland was accorded an enthusiastic welcome. The committee to receive the guests consisted of Governor Campbell, Colonel Kilbourne, Allen W. Thurman, Claude Meeker and T. P. Linn. The Governor's carriage was also in waiting and the guests got in the carriage and were driven direct to the Capitol Mansion, where they became the guest of Governor Campbell.

At 11 the ex-President proceeded to the capitol and the Governor's office and met the distinguished statesman. At noon a presidential salute of twenty-one guns was fired in the state house yard in honor of Mr. Cleveland.

At the banquet hall the decorations were imposing. The hall was set with sixteen tables running east and west across the entire space, a distance of sixty-five feet, while along the outside was arranged a long table on a platform raised twelve inches. This table was sixty-five feet in length, and was for the eminent gentlemen chosen to respond to the toasts. At the south end of the banquet hall, the Associated Press with a corps of stenographers and type writers were making a verbatim report of the entire proceedings, while two leased wires, manned by expert operators transmitted to all parts of the country the words of the orator as they fell from the lips of the speakers. The program, which has been extensively published, was carried out to the letter.

SANCHEZ SHOT.

His Leading Officers Massacred—President Bogran's Big Victory.

A special from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, says: Gen. Longenos Sanchez, who headed the recent attempt to overthrow the Government of President Bogran, and who, with his forces, held the capital city for the brief period of one week, has been captured, and with the principal leaders of his army has been shot. The revolution is at an end. His troops had been defeated in a series of bloody engagements, and he, with the brief remainder, was penned up in the San Francisco barracks, surrounded by a vigilant force flushed with victory. President Bogran at night stationed a number of cannon about the barracks, and early in the morning he opened fire. Sanchez and his imprisoned comrades knew that death awaited them in any event, and fought with all the desperate courage of despair, but it was a hopeless struggle from the start. After a brief cannonading the walls of the barracks were almost completely battered down. Then there was a determined charge of Bogran's soldiers, a brief but desperate hand to hand fight, and then all that remained alive of the rebels were prisoners. Without the formation of a court martial, Sanchez and several of the principal officers engaged in the revolt, were taken to one of the principal squares of the city blindfolded, and stood in line in the presence of hundreds of the citizens. A firing party was told off. The doomed men were given a brief time for prayer, then the word was given, there was a crash of musketry and the revolution of Longenos, Sanchez passed into history. Sanchez and his men met their fate without flinching. The bodies of the dead rebels were exposed to the public gaze all day as a warning to future aspirants to the presidential chair who desire to get power by force of arms.

THROUGH A TRESTLE.

Four Persons Killed and a Number Injured by a Disastrous Wreck on the Southern Pacific Railroad.

The overland Southern Pacific passenger train, south-bound, went through a long trestle over Lake Labish, about five miles from Salem, Oregon. The trestle must have given away as soon as the engine struck it, for the train and trestle went down together. The engine was overturned and half buried in the mud. Following this were the tender, main baggage and express cars, the smoking-car, and the tourists' sleeper. All were broken to pieces. Engineer John McFadden, Fireman Tim New, and two unknown men were killed.

The train carried over one hundred persons, nearly all of whom were more or less injured. The first-class day coach, which was saved from going over, alighted with the front end on an old tree, broken off about even with the trestle and then followed the smoker. Next was the tourist sleeper, in which were some twenty-five or thirty passengers. Of this number only three were uninjured. Next was the Pullman car, Alatis, with seventeen passengers. Only three escaped without injury. The next and last car was the Roseburg, in which were fifteen passengers, only four of whom escaped with slight bruises. In the smoker and day coach every seat was occupied. Fires were built along either side of the train to keep warm the wounded, who had been removed from the wreck, and to give light to the workers who had hastened to the rescue.

INDIAN TROUBLES.

The Sioux are Again on the War-Path.

Grand Forks (N. D.) Special: Adjutant General Devoy received a telegram from Governor Miller at Bismarck, requesting him to report at the latter city immediately and make active preparations for suppressing the impending outbreak of Indians at Mandan. Word was brought by a friendly Indian to Mandan that the Sioux were on the war-path and ready for an outbreak. The city is excited over the report, and any number of volunteers are already offering their services to go and fight "Big Injun."

A mass meeting of citizens in Mandan was held to discuss the Indian situation. Citizens have organized for protection. Gov. Miller was telegraphed for arms and ammunition, and he has given instructions to the Adjutant General to use his discretion. The State has about five hundred stand of arms and 50,000 rounds of fixed ammunition. All sorts of rumors are afloat. Telegrams to Standing Rock are unanswered, and the latest rumors are that a band of armed Indians has left the reservation.

Settlers from every direction come in reporting insults received from predatory bands of Indians armed to the teeth, who make circles around the tops of their heads. The citizens of Mandan have practically no arms and are helpless. During the past few days the entire community was terrorized. They have been looking for aid from the Government, expecting the Indians to come upon them every hour, and no help or sign of help comes. The Indians went into a hardware store and called for ammunition, to shoot white men, they said.

Thirty Persons Killed and Forty Injured.

A railway train from Askub, on which there were a large number of soldiers, whose terms of service had expired, and who were on their way to their homes, was derailed near Salonica, Turkey. Thirty persons were killed and forty injured. The accident was caused by the washing out of the track by recent heavy rains.

Birchall Atones His Crime on the Gallows.

Rex Birchall was hanged at the jail, Woodstock, Ont., for the murder of Frederick C. Benwell. The condemned man met his fate unflinchingly, as he had promised he would do. With a smile on his face he listened to the church of England minister, Dean Wade, who prayed aloud for the salvation of the unfortunate prisoner. The hanging was first set down for 9 o'clock, but by Birchall's own request it was done half an hour earlier. After he had breakfasted he sat in his cell smoking cigars and chatting with old Sheriff Perry. The latter was solemn, Birchall was not. He seemed to find amusement in the old sheriff's sorrow for him.

Dressed Beef Act Void.

The Indiana Supreme Court has held what is known as the "Dressed Beef Act" to be unconstitutional. The last Legislature enacted that beef cattle offered for sale in the State should be inspected before slaughter. The law was passed at the dictation of farmers and local butchers to head off the shipment of dressed beef by the outside packers, and the appeal was carried up from Marion County. The Chief Justice holds that the Federal Supreme Court having recently decided that a Minnesota law nearly the same was unconstitutional, it followed that a similar disposition must be made of the Indiana enactment.

Bold Robbery.

The United States Express Company was robbed of a money package containing $1,000 at Tipton, Ind. Elmer Meeker, the agent, received the package from the messenger of the north-bound train, and was leaving his office when he was attacked by a masked man. Meeker was knocked senseless, his keys to the safe taken and the money package secured. Meeker regained consciousness before the robber departed and opened fire on him without effect. The thief returned the fire, and seriously injured the agent's right hand. There is no clue to the robber.

Fatal Explosion.

A terrible boiler explosion and loss of life occurred at the cooper works of Trexler & Bro., at Merzetown, Pa., caused, it is said, by a defective boiler. The killed are: Charles Oswald, Henry Epler and Sausman Hilbert. Four others were badly injured. The boiler was thirty feet long and was torn in three pieces, one of which, twenty-three feet long, was hurled a distance of 150 yards. The three men killed were thrown 140 feet away and lay side by side. The bodies were not much mutilated.

Killed by Dynamite.

While men were heating dynamite at Custer's stone quarry, Lima, Ohio, preparatory to a blast, the dynamite exploded. Charley Burkett's head was torn from his body and both arms and one leg blown off. He was hurled about wo hundred feet away. Henry Wiescup's scalp was torn off and both legs mangled. George Fisher's legs and arms were blown away and his trunk mangled. Frank Fisher and Samuel Watt were struck by flying debris and injured. Of the men killed Wiescup and Fisher leave families.

Wreck on the Baltimore and Ohio.

A special from Bellaire, O., says: A wreck occurred on the Baltimore and Ohio road at Scott's cut, three miles west of Bellaire, between two freight trains. John Watson, engineer, and James Fleisher, fireman, were instantly killed. They live at Newark, O. Thomas Burke was injured about the head, and cannot recover. James Barrett, fireman, was terribly scalded, and died one hour later. Disregarding orders is said to have caused the collision.

Abject Poverty in Ireland.

Col. Turner has just returned from a visit to the district of Skibbereen, Ireland which Mr. Balfour was prevented by illness from visiting on his recent tour. He gives a very gloomy report of the condition of the district. The inhabitants, he says, are for the most part in a state of abject poverty, especially in Schull, where the greatest destitution prevails.

Sensitive Oklahomans.

A bill has passed the Oklahoma Legislature, making it criminal libel for a newspaper to even insinuate anything against a man's character, whether it is a fact or not.

Burglars at Peru.

Shirk & Miller's large dry goods and furnishing store at Peru, Ind., was entered by burglars and about $1,200 worth of clothing and other articles were carried away.

Skipped Out.

Lawson Noyer, for several years editor of the Akron Eagle, at Akron, Ind., and for the past year postmaster at that village, has absconded, after having defaulted numerous individuals.

Rev. Sam. Jones' Brother Kills a "Nigger."

Chas Jones, a brother of Rev. Sam. P. Jones, shot Jim Young, colored, three times, at Cartersville, Ga. He died in twenty-five minutes. Jones is in jail.

A Town Destroyed.

Every house in the town of Cape Gracios, La., has been blown down by a hurricane.

The capacity of the establishment will be sixty tons of steel per day, instead of fifty tons as originally contemplated.

—Some would-be assassin fired two charges of buckshot through the door of a toll-house in Fayette County, occupied by Marion Peyton and family.

BIRCHALL'S DEBT PAID.

EXECUTED IN THE PRISON AT WOODSTOCK, ONT.

A History of the Crime for Which He Paid the Extreme Penalty of the Law—The Murderer Leaves a Written Statement—No Untoward Scenes at the Gallows.

[Woodstock (Ont.) dispatch.]

Reginald Birchall expiated on the gallows the murder of his friend Benwell at 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning. His last night on earth was passed, until a late hour, in the company of his wife.

The last words spoken by Birchall were to the hangman. He said: "Have you any objections to shaking hands with me?" "Certainly not," replied the executioner, and the last hand-shake followed.

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review publishes the following letter from Birchall, which had been sent to that office with instructions that it was not to be printed until after his execution:

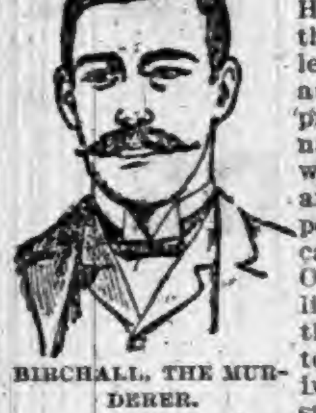
WOODSTOCK JAIL, Nov. 10.

If after my death there shall appear in the press or in any other manner whatsoever any confession that I had any hand in the murder of F. C. Benwell or any previous knowledge of said murder, with intent or malice aforethought, or any personal connection with the murder on the 17th of February, or other day, or any knowledge that any such murder was likely to be committed, or any statement further than any that I may have made public previous to this date, I hand this statement to the care of George Perry, of Woodstock, Ont., that he may know that any confession or partial confessions are entirely fictitious and in no way were ever written by me, neither emanated from me in any way whatsoever to any person, and the whole are fictitious and without a word of truth. This likewise applies to my story in the Mail, in which I have made no such confession or partial confession. This is to be good throughout. REG. BIRCHALL.

Birchall's body was buried in the jail yard soon after the verdict was reached. Thus ends the story of Birchall's crime and expiation.

STORY OF THE CRIME.

John Reginald Birchall was born at a place called Church, in Lancashire, England, where his father was the Protestant rector, a little over twenty-five years ago. His father was wealthy, and died in 1878, leaving his three sons and one daughter well provided for. Reginald, as he was called, was the youngest son, and soon got rid of his portion. He was educated at Harrow and Oxford, and led a fast life while a student. In the pursuit of his antecedents the detectives found at every step evidence that his associates, almost from the moment he was trusted about alone, were of evil character. In 1888 Birchall married the daughter of David Stephenson, General Traffic Manager of the London and Northwestern Railroad. The young woman's family were opposed to the match, but she finally eloped with him. The couple went to Woodstock, Canada. A peace was patched up between Birchall and his wife's parents, and in the spring of 1889 the couple returned to England and lived in Mr. Stephenson's house at Upper Norwood road, London. Birchall secured employment with a firm of photographers in London.

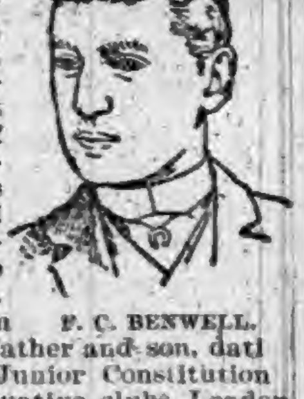


BIRCHALL, THE MURDERER.

In London Birchall continued to lead a fast life and he was soon at his wit's end for money. It was during this period that the scheme which resulted in the murder of Benwell was concocted. The first step in the crime was the insertion in the papers of the following advertisement:

> CANADA—UNIVERSITY MAN HAVING farm wishes to meet gentleman's son to live with him and learn the business with view to partnership; must have £500 to extend stock; board, lodging and 5 per cent. interest till partnership arranged; highest references.

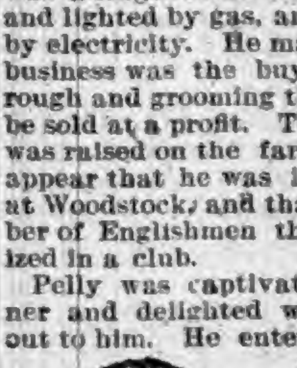
Many replies were received to the advertisement, but only two of them received attention from Birchall. These were from Douglas Raymond Pelly, of Walden place, Saffron Walden, Essex, and Frederick C. Benwell, son of Lieutenant Colonel Benwell, of Iseultdene, Cheltenham. Pelly was in poor health, and had been recommended by his physician to live an outdoor life. Birchall wrote to him and to the Benwells, father and son, dati his letters from the Junior Constitution and National Conservative clubs, London, Birchall made friends with both, and impressed them with his candor and apparent honesty.



F. C. BENWELL.

The story he invented to entrap his dupes was that he had a large farm a mile and a half from Niagara Falls on which there was a large brick house, heated by steam and lighted by gas, and large barns lighted by electricity. He made it appear that his business was the buying of horses in the rough and grooming them so that they could be sold at a profit. The feed for the horses was raised on the farm. He also made it appear that he was interested in business at Woodstock, and that there were a number of Englishmen there who were organized in a club.

Pelly was captivated by Birchall's manner and delighted with the prospect held out to him. He entered into an agreement with Birchall by which he was to pay him $850. In return he was to have board and lodging at the farm and receive 22½ per cent. of the profits of the business. A check for $850 was sent to Birchall. Having got possession of this money the schemer induced the elder Benwell to let his son Frederick go with him to see the farm, with the understanding that if he liked it he was to pay $2,500 for a half interest in it. On Feb. 5, Mr. and Mrs. Birchall, Benwell and Pelly sailed from Liverpool on the Britannic, reached New York Feb. 14, and registered at the Metropolitan Hotel. On the following Saturday they left on the Erie Railroad for Buffalo. It was decided that Birchall and Benwell should go on the 6 o'clock train the next morning to the Falls and prepare for the reception of Pelly and Mrs. Birchall. Birchall came back the following night alone. He said that Benwell didn't like the farm or the people and that he refused positively to stay there. Birchall said he had given him the addresses of people further on in the country and started him off to see if he could find a place he liked. He told Pelly that he wasn't ready to go to the farm, for McDonald, his superintendent, had rented the place to some tenants and that things were in a bad shape. His suggestion that they go on to Niagara Falls and wait a few days was accepted.



MRS. BIRCHALL.

On Tuesday, Feb. 18, Birchall, his wife and Pelly went to Clifton, Ont., just across the Niagara River from Suspension Bridge. Birchall and Pelly stopped at a boarding house, while Mrs. Birchall lived at the Imperial Hotel. A week was spent there, Pelly all the time fretting at the delay and Birchall calming him with plausible stories. Among other falsehoods he said that he had received a letter from Benwell inclosing the receipt for Benwell's bonded luggage and requesting that it be sent him when he wanted it. The first bad break made by Birchall was on Feb. 28, when he showed Pelly a copy of a New York newspaper containing an account of the finding of Benwell's body in the tamarack swamp on William Hersey's farm in Princeton, Ont. The cigar case with the name "F. C. Benwell" on it proved beyond a doubt whose body it was. Birchall said he would go at once and see the body, and Pelly instantly said that he would accompany him. In about an hour Birchall showed Pelly a telegram which he said he had received from the clerk of the Stafford House at Buffalo. It stated that Benwell had gone to New York, and requested that his luggage be sent to him there at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Pelly started at once for New York and Birchall went to Princeton and made his second blunder in identifying the body of Benwell. He was arrested and locked up. A day or so later his wife was also a prisoner.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.
But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of Prickly Ash Bitters!
a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Remember the name—PRICKLY ASH BITTERS. Ask your druggist for it.

OUR FEAST-DAY.

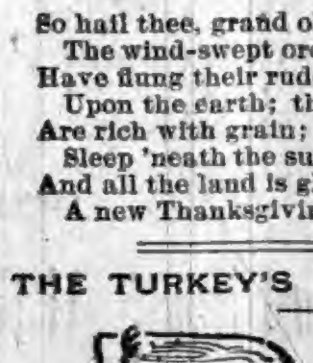
BY HELEN CHASE.

WELCOME, thou grand old Feast-day!
Again the russet fields
Lie idle in the soft, gray light,
Shorn of their splendid yields;
Again the lanes have glimmered
With farewell golden-rod,
And gentian fringes closed above
The tinted olive sod.

But thou, O grand old Feast-day,
Thou hast no need of these
To draw us to thee. Though thou bring
Gray skies and leafless trees—
A hundred welcomes to thee!
Ye altar fires of home,
Shine out, and kindred gather
From sea to mountain dome.

So hail thee, grand old Feast-day!
The wind-swept orchard boughs
Have flung their ruddy gold and green
Upon the earth; the mows
Are rich with grain; the furrows
Sleep 'neath the sun's veiled ray—
And all the land is glad and greets
A new Thanksgiving Day.

THE TURKEY'S LAST GOBBLE.



BEHOLD me now,
A Turkey with a big T!
Time, 9 o'clock a. m.
By 5 p. m.
What will I be?
A wreck;
A total wreck;
A travesty on animated organism;
A weird, bewildering
Entanglement of bones
And gravy;
A hollow mockery;
With every wad of stuffing
Eternally knocked out of it!
A ghost,
Clothed in the
Bony relics of its living entity!
A ruined destiny
Carved out
To stand a monument
To appetite!
A gobbler with his gobble
Gone to those
Who gobbled in another key!
A——
But hold,
This is Thanksgiving Day!

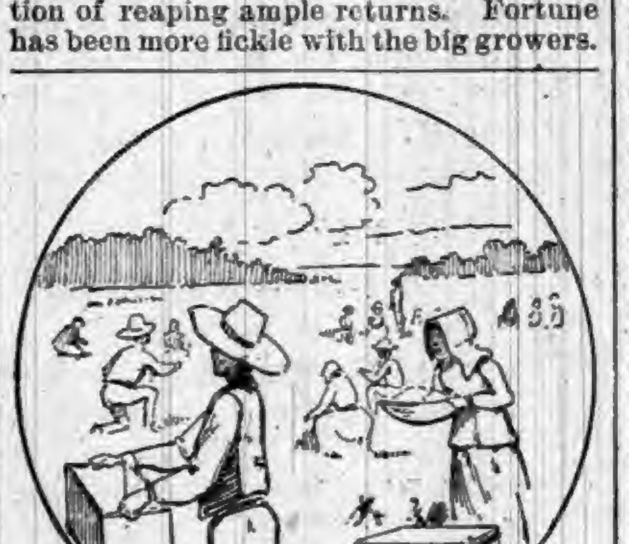
SAUCE FOR THE TURKEY.

SCENES IN THE CRANBERRY MARSHES OF WISCONSIN.

Immense Tracts of Hitherto Worthless Lands Devoted to the Production of the Thanksgiving Berry—How and Where It Grows—Winnebago Indians the First to Pick the Fruit—Amusements and Housing of the Harvesters During the Season.

THOSE who have never taken the trouble to study cranberry culture have no intelligent conception of the possibilities of this agricultural industry, its present importance, and the methods adopted to gather in the crop and fit it for those who prepare a delicious sauce-relish for a Thanksgiving dinner. It is over twenty-five years since the golden discovery was made that there is money to be made in cranberries. During these years fortunes have been made and other fortunes expended to place what appeared worthless marsh in a condition to bear fruit. The little city of Berlin, Green Lake County, Wis., writes a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, is the center of a cranberry-producing area that turns out thousands of barrels of fruit annually, which fact has given the place the name of "Cranberry City," a name which it proudly wears in contradistinction to its sister city, Ripon, whose prosaic pursuit of late years has been the growth of cucumbers, and is therefore dubbed "Pickleville."

At first the men who made money out of cranberry culture were those who had great holdings of wild marsh, surrounded with tamaracks and garnished with a wilderness of sage brush and huckleberry bushes. The crop blossomed in wild neglect and the fortunate possessors of these tracts found themselves taking off from $20,000 to $50,000 in clear profits annually without spending a dollar except to the pickers. Then the hunt began for marsh land that would grow cranberries. Many were succesful in finding from three to ten and fifteen acres tracts, and in numerous instances pools were formed so that larger areas might be purchased and parceled out. The small growers went to work planting vines, and have now the satisfaction of reaping ample returns. Fortune has been more fickle with the big growers.

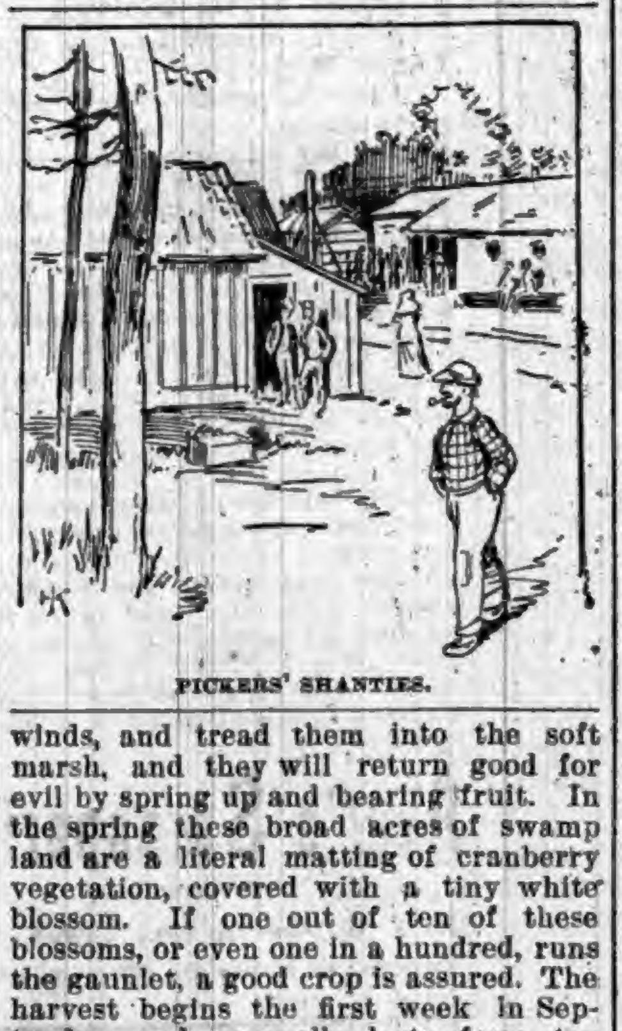


PICKING CRANBERRIES.

The science of the culture was pushed too far, perhaps. The great canals that were dug for flooding purposes and the expensive pumping machinery that was put in have not had the effect of producing a corresponding increase in the crop. Cranberries are like Indians, they are not benefited by too much civilizing. The same marsh cannot be relied upon to yield every year. Aside from the "natural intentions" of the berry it is threatened with destruction from various sources—heavy floods, worms, blight, scalding, drought and early frosts being among the dangers; so that a man who burdens his mind with the probable fate of a crop from the time it blossoms through the summer season is not likely to be at peace with himself. However, there is rarely a year when there is a general failure of the crop, and each succeeding year witnesses a grand rally of men, women and children from a radius of twenty miles to the cranberry fields. The pickers are generally enlisted from the foreign element, although there may be seen a liberal sprinkling of the native Americans and occasionally a small band of the Winnebago Indians.

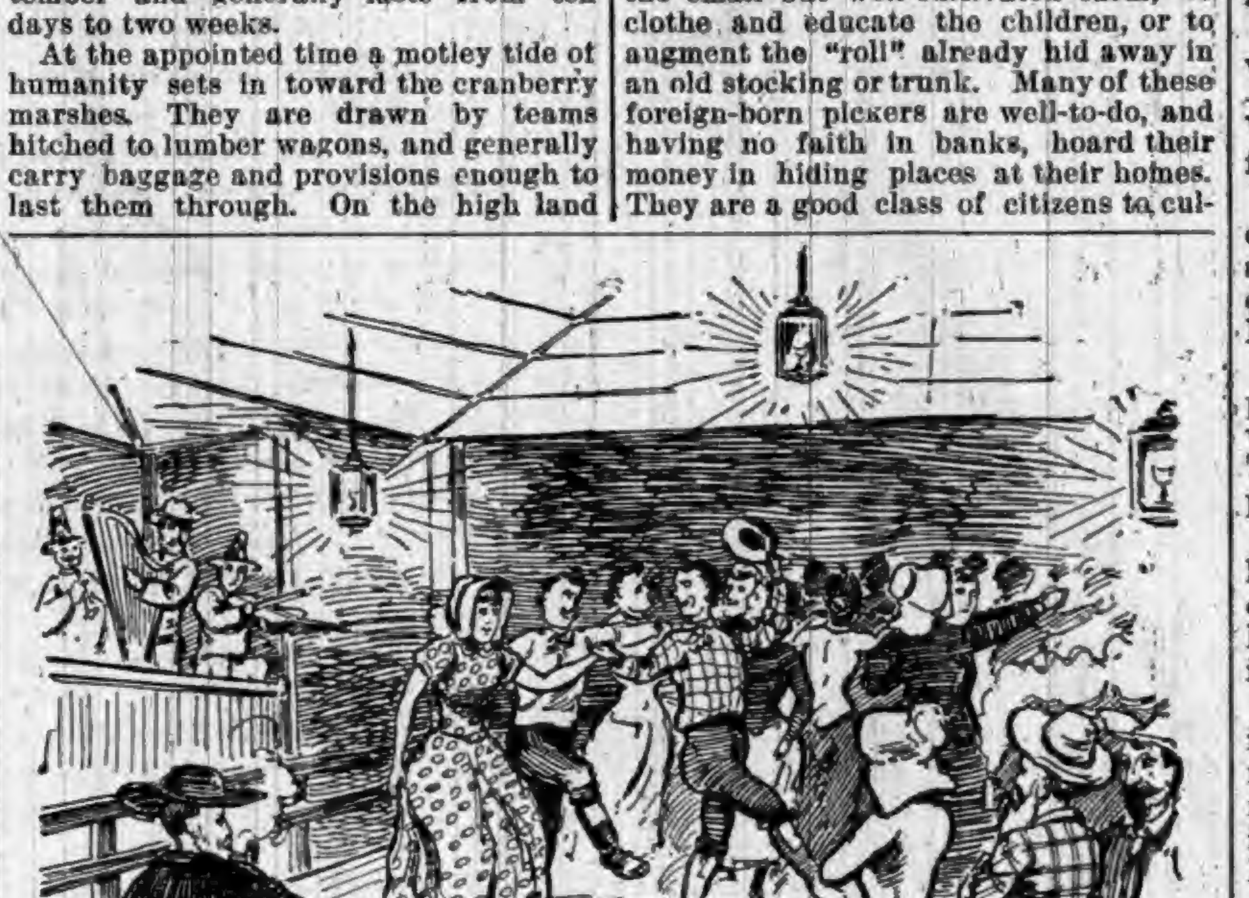
Fifty years ago the Indians were the only ones who appeared on the cranberry exchange, dumping a few blanketfuls of the berries on the market, and, after spending the proceeds in beads and "benzine," went off whooping. Now they are rarely seen, but when they come into camp they hunt the festive berry fast and furious daytime and beat the tom-tom at night. They are great gamblers, and it is not unusual to see a "buck" get away with all the tickets at the close of the harvest.

The mistaken idea may not be so prevalent as it was five years ago, but it is well enough to repeat that cranberries do not grow on bushes, like blueberries, nor do they lie supinely on a vine that trails itself along with runners. It is the fruit of a growth that reminds one of tough-jointed grass or grass stems whose appendage consists of small elliptical leaves. You may tear a vine into fragments, scatter the pieces to the four winds, and tread them into the soft marsh, and they will return good for evil by spring up and bearing fruit. In the spring these broad acres of swamp land are a literal matting of cranberry vegetation, covered with a tiny white blossom. If one out of ten of these blossoms, or even one in a hundred, runs the gaunlet, a good crop is assured. The harvest begins the first week in September and generally lasts from ten days to two weeks.

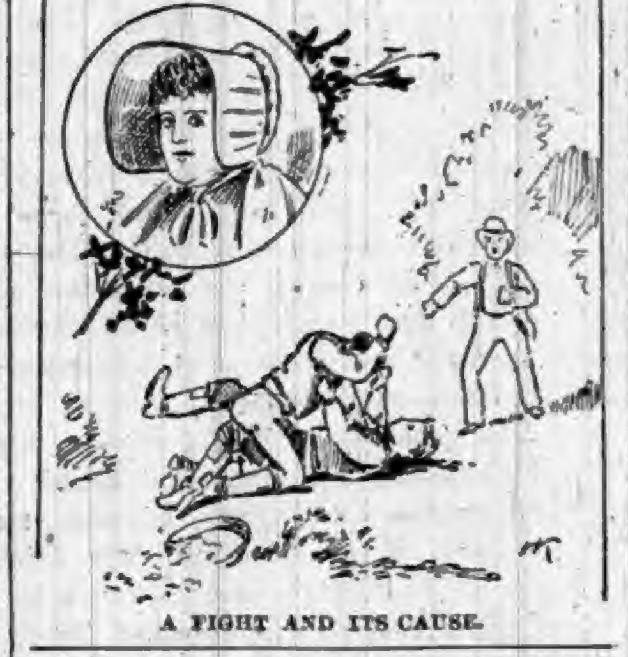


PICKERS' SHANTIES.

At the appointed time a motley tide of humanity sets in toward the cranberry marshes. They are drawn by teams hitched to lumber wagons, and generally carry baggage and provisions enough to last them through. On the high land bordering the marshes are erected rows of one and two story shanties, and into these the pickers are stowed. Sometimes tents are necessary to shelter this overflow. In a few days everybody knows his neighbor, and a labor commune is established. Fun and hard work are equally mixed. It is a welcome change to these people who, for a few days, get out of the humdrum rut of their existence, see new faces, crack jokes, dance and sing, and add a small sum of money to their scanty savings for the winter.



MERRY-MAKING CRANBERRY-PICKERS.



A FIGHT AND ITS CAUSE.

It is an interesting sight to see the pickers go to work in the morning. Everybody is dressed for the job. On the heads of the women are broad-brimmed straw hats tied down over the ears, sunbonnets, shakers, or the clean white linen clothes, after the style of the German market women. An old jacket, a calico skirt, and a heavy pair of shoes and stockings complete the costume. The men wear anything that "won't hurt," but all, by previous experience, know enough to keep dry wraps in camp in case of a wet sinking marsh or a sudden shower. Every one carries a large shallow milk pan, and each picker is provided with a slatted rectangular box holding exactly a bushel. Arriving at the ground to be picked the hands are ranged in a row, under the direction of a boss to every forty pickers. The boxes are thrown on the ground, the pickers get on their hands and knees and commence to fill the shallow pans. It is in this work, as with all other kinds, some grow wonderfully skillful, and with deft fingers running through the vines, like a comb, fill their pans quickly, while others are clumsy and slow. As they are paid by the box, the earnings vary accordingly. As the line of pickers advance across a "forty" it grows irregular, and keeps the bosses poking about among the vines to see that no ground is being neglected. Sometimes disputes arise over the rights of a particular swath and a fight ensues, when all business suddenly comes to a standstill until the war-cloud passes away. Pretty girls are also the frequent causes of a cranberry fracas, the cases being numerous where two "bloods" insist upon protecting the same maiden from the Poygan or the Black Wolf country, who enjoys the reputation of being the best dancer on the marsh and at the same time is well able to take care of herself. A rough-and-tumble fight is a diversion, and the people like it. But the picking goes on just the same. Portable tramways are laid, and the boxes, as fast as filled, are run on small cars to the warehouse, where they are piled up in long tiers to dry, cure, and ripen thoroughly. When the berry reaches the market it is generally red, but when it is picked it is nearly white, with a faint rosy tint just beginning to show.

THE CRANBERRY'S APOTHEOSIS.

As each picker hands over his box of berries he receives a ticket which he can "cash in" for the current price, usually from 5 to 6 shillings. They earn from $1.50 to $3 a day.

The present method of handling the crowd is much better than it used to be when every one kept his pickings in bags until measuring-up time at night. Then the whole crowd would assemble about the boss on the marsh and wait their turn. The soft spongy ground under the pressure of the crowd, increased by the weight of the bags of berries, would sink and leave everybody up to their shoe-tops in water. Now the harvesters rarely get wet. The large number of marshes prevents the massing of so many people as formerly. If a man secures 500 or 1,000 pickers he considers it a great crowd, while ten years ago it was not unusual to see 2,500 or 3,000 at one time.

It is a beautiful sight. Stretching away for miles lie the cranberry fields, perhaps at some past age the basin of a placid lake, now covered with verdure, reflecting rich colors in the sunshine and teeming with life. From the camp, nearly a mile away, you catch the shouts of exuberant ones, and occasionally the glitter of a pan as it is whirled high in the air after a trip to the box. But what sets one to thinking most is the bobbing heads with the white linen coverings. These are the Polish or German women, working hard to pay the debt on the church, to add a few more acres to the small but well-cultivated farm, to clothe and educate the children, or to augment the "roll" already hid away in an old stocking or trunk. Many of these foreign-born pickers are well-to-do, and having no faith in banks, hoard their money in hiding places at their homes. They are a good class of citizens to cultivate the waste places, and they have taken up a great deal of land in this part of the State.

As the day draws to a close, the tired ones drop out and the older ones prepare to go back to the shanties. The day's work is talked over, supper is eaten, the crowd begins to scatter, and the evening fun begins. Various kinds of hawkers appear. The kodak man sells his views and the "sutler" disposes of his goods. Liquors, wheels of fortune, and other harmful attractions are forbidden, but music fills the vacancy, and at the first rasping notes of the violin the boys and girls are ready for the dance. It is a free-for-all, in a rude pavilion, at 5 cents a dance. This dancing will compare with anything North or South in its local character. The old folks look on for awhile and then go to bed, while the youngsters keep the ball rolling until nearly midnight. Such joking, swinging, flirting, love-making, and merry-making were never experienced under tallow and kerosene, unless at the old quiltings and corn-huskings of early days. A few days later the crowd breaks up, to know each other no more until another harvest.

As the Thanksgiving diners lift a dainty morsel of jelly that is destined to join a fragment of turkey, they can think of the cranberry's marshy birth-place, and the dream of jollity through which the berry passed before it was hurried to market to be cooked, sugared, and squeezed for their benefit.

A Priest Buncoed.

Father Saponara, of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Union avenue and North Eighth street, Brooklyn, has asked the police to hunt up and arrest a man, whose name is unknown, by whom he has been swindled of $3,000. The clergyman's story, as told to Captain Short, is that a few months ago he met an old gentleman, a resident of New York, who asked him to educate his son and heir. Arrangements looking to the youth's tuition were fairly under way when the gentleman informed the reverend father that his son had died suddenly. This death having left him without an heir, the aged New-Yorker had determined to give all his fortune to charitable institutions, and among his selected beneficiaries was Father Saponara's church, to which he had decided to present $10,000.

According to appointment, the priest visited this city to receive the liberal gift for his church. He was met at Twenty-third street and Broadway by three men, one of whom carried a tin box. This the stranger opened, and a big roll of bills was disclosed, which the custodian of the box said amounted to $10,000.

After its contents had been exhibited the box was locked and handed over to the priest. Then the stranger who had had it in charge told Father Saponara that he must have security for the money, as he was only the agent for its transfer.

The clergyman thought that it was only right that his new-found friend's request should be complied with. He took the stranger to a savings bank on Chambers street, from which he drew $3,000. This amount he handed over to the "agent." On his return to Brooklyn the priest opened the box and found that it contained only blank paper.

Detective Corcoran was detailed by Captain Short to hunt up the smart confidence operator.—New York Press.

VISITOR—Didn't that motto read "Never Say Die' when you got it?" Mrs. Barowski—Yes, but when Ivanovitch joined the Anarchists he insisted upon my substituting the word "work" for "die." I never liked the word "die." It has a horrid sound.

"IT'S pretty damp for a person with the rheumatism to be prowling around, Uncle Josh." "Mebbe, boss, but it's der doctor' advice." "Do you mean to tell me the doctor advised you to be out nights?" "Not 'xactly dat way—but he said I must have chicken brof."

MRS. NEWBRIDE—My husband and I are going for a cruise in the Rokoyles' yacht. Mrs. Tangle—How nice! Mrs. Newbride—Yes. Henry is very fond of yachting, and he is getting into training already. He told me last night that he had been splicing the main brace.

For Bachelors Only.

Agree with the girl's father in politics and the mother in religion.

If you have a rival keep an eye on him. If he is a widower keep two eyes on him.

Don't put too much sweet stuff on paper. If you do you will hear it read in after years when your wife has some especial purpose in inflicting upon you the severest punishment known to a married man.

Go home at a reasonable hour in the evening.

Don't wait until a girl has to throw her whole soul into a yawn that she can't cover with both hands. A little thing like that might cause a coolness at the very beginning of the game.

If, on the occasion of your first call, the girl upon whom you have set your young affections looks like an iceberg and acts like a cold wave, take your leave early and stay away. Woman in her hour of freeze is uncertain, coy and hard to please.

In cold weather finish saying good-night in the house. Don't stretch it all the way to the front gate, and thus lay the foundation for future asthma, bronchitis, neuralgia and chronic catarrh to help you to worry the girl to death after she has married.

Don't lie about your financial condition. It is very annoying to a bride who has pictured a life of ease in her ancestral halls to learn too late that you expect her to ask a bald-headed old parent who has been uniformly kind to her to take you in out of the cold.—Saturday Evening Gazette.

WOMEN AS TRAVELERS.

TWO GIRLS WHO WENT ALONE FROM PARIS TO SAN FRANCISCO.

They Made the Trip in Just Twelve and One-Half Days—They Were Sick While Crossing the Water, but They Received the Best of Attention from Everybody.

American girls have that pluck which makes them admired by all the world. The following is a story of two young women who made a flying trip from Paris to San Francisco. The sisters were at school in Paris, and expected soon to be met by relatives. One forenoon they received a cable dispatch telling them to come home as soon as possible. The oldest girl is about twenty years old. She immediately sent for time tables. While she was examining these her sister was packing five trunks.

Miss F—— discovered that they could get a steamer from Southampton which was to sail the next day. She posted to her banker's, and hurrying back joined her sister in packing. At half-past 8 that night they were being whirled out of Paris. Neither of the girls slept that night. When they arrived in London at 6 o'clock in the morning Miss F—— was forced to do some shopping, for however rapidly women travel they make time to do a little buying, and in this case they had started so suddenly that this was absolutely necessary.

The American sisters caught the 12:30 o'clock train for Southampton, not having had time to eat luncheon. Four hours later they were on their steamer, tired and hungry and sleepy, but triumphant.

ON THE OCEAN.

Every one on the vessel was most kind to the young women and lauded their pluck to the skies. The voyage would for this reason have been made pleasant for them, but their hurry and lack of sleep, together with their nerve tension, made them easy prey for man's mortal enemy, seasickness. From the time the big steamer left England until she swept up New York harbor the weather was uncompromisingly rough. Not one day was fair. When the young women reached the steamer they were utterly exhausted, and at once went to bed. This set the stewardess to grumbling. She wanted the girls to appear at the dinner table on the first day at least.

"Oh, don't urge us to go to dinner again," cried Miss F—— wearily, and then she told the woman the experience through which they had just passed.

"You poor little dears," said the woman, at once becoming gentle, and for the rest of the voyage she neglected every one else to look after "the brave little American ladies."

Men and women joined in little courtesies and attentions to the two girls. One old crusty Englishman seemed to take offense if any one monopolized their attention. He became their loyal guardian and walked around like a great protecting mastiff. It was he who stood on the deck with them on the day that the girls turned their eager eyes toward the Statue of Liberty. The new friends of "the brave little American ladies" advised them to stay in New York for one day to get a little rest. They would not listen to such pleasant urgings. The stewardess actually wept over their determination to hurry on to San Francisco.

NO REST FOR THEM.

"Only get one night's sleep," she pleaded, but the girls had been told to come home as soon as possible, and they were deaf to all entreaties.

The steamer was at her pier at 4:30 p. m., and a train left Jersey City at 6:30 p. m. In that two hours the girls left the steamer, had their trunks examined by the custom house officials and were driven to the railroad station. Their adoring old Englishman, who did not look as if he had moved rapidly in forty years, fretted and bustled around the trunks when they were being opened. He was in mortal terror lest the girls would miss the train after all. He stamped, got red in the face, puffed violently and finally recovered the baggage with a cry of exultation. The train which started westward that evening carried with two white faced young women the good wishes of a shipload of passengers.

"No woman but an American would undertake such a thing," said the Englishman, looking at two bits of of white lace where two handkerchiefs fluttered at the car window as the train rolled out of the station, "and," he added, "no woman but an American could succeed in such an undertaking."

For the benefit of those who are interested to know how the trip ended, and to satisfy those who like to follow transatlantic records, it may be said that the young women reached home in safety. To go from London to their home in San Francisco took them just twelve and one-half days.—New York Tribune.

A Successful Counterfeit.

Our rations while in Richmond we estimated at two to four ounces of beef and six to eight ounces of good wheat bread. To supplement this we made counterfeit greenbacks, which we were sometimes able to pass on unsuspecting guards. Once, by cutting out the figures from a ten cent scrip and with a little blood gluing this over the figure one in a dollar greenback, myself and three comrades bought with this bogus ten dollar bill ninety loaves of good bread, and it was the only time while I was in the Confederacy that I made a full meal. How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.
As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

Montana Letter.

EDITOR COURIER:—My predictions of August 17, have been fully verified. Montana has broken the shackles which were fastened upon her by the republican party. We have sent little Carter up Salt river in the old high tariff barge, cheered and comforted by the sweet strains of music floating on the breeze as played by Tyrannical P. Reed's brass band. Democrats are jubilant over the great victory, and the fair name of Montana has been redeemed. The high-handed steal of precinct No. 34, one year ago has been avenged! The two fraudulent U. S. Senators have been called back, to be replaced by men who are the choice of the people. Thomas H. Carter's silver record has laid him in the shade, where he can enjoy that sweet repose known only to oblivion. Montana has sent a gentleman to represent her interests in Congress, of whom the American people can well feel proud—Hon. W. W. Dixon, a man, who has the interests of this vast commonwealth at heart, and will never submit to being "buck d and gagged" by the "gold bugs", of Wall street, or allow himself to be whipped into line by the "party lash." It is believed that he will prove true to his constituents, and will always be found in his proper place when questions of vital importance are at issue, and not deport himself as "Our Darling Boy" did on the Silver bill. When the roll is called, it is thought that Mr. Dixon will not rise up and say: "You will excuse me, I am paired."

The McKinley high tariff bill has had its effect, which was fully illustrated by the recent democratic victories all over this land. The best comparison of the bill that can be made, in my estimation, is to liken it unto a "leech" fastened upon the American people. This great monster is quietly, but surely, stealing the hard earnings of the masses, under the false pretenses of "protection", which is practically for the manufacturer and monopolist, who in return contributes largely to the "corruption fund," to defeat the popular will of the people. The word "protection" is a delusion and a fraud, and the American people awaking to their best interests, and doubtless they will throw off the yoke of bondage that pins them down to a service no less exacting in its nature than slavery.

The "lodge, or force bill," although it has not become a law, yet it has had its bearing upon the people. The tyrannical intent of the bill is sufficient to condemn it. It is nothing short of an imposition upon the good-will and intelligence of a civilized people.

The "eight-to-seven" steal of 1876; the Dudley and Quay steal of 1888, and the stealing of the state of Montana in 1889, ought to cause every citizen of the United States to hide his face in shame. A man is no less a criminal because by his shewdness and cunning the law is not able to punish his acts as criminal.

Montana has elected a democratic legislative ticket, and every available means will be used in securing a proper organization of the house, and such a thing as a "republican rump house," composed of a band of political thieves, will be foreign and unknown to that body. You count on Montana in 1892, on the following issues: "Tariff for Revenue Only; Unlimited Free Coinage of Silver, and Democratic Principles Generally." I hope my mother state, "Indiana," has redeemed herself from republican misrule. I shall feel proud of her if she has.

Very Respectfully,
LEE GOTCHIUS.

The Arions at Garrett.

The Arion Quartet went over to Garrett Sunday to sing for the great meeting of the B. & O. Railway employes. They were down for music on the entire program both day and evening meetings. Mr. Fisher informs us that the meeting was a great success. Frank Kircher presided and there were many speeches. The address of welcome was by Rev. T. B. Kemp of the Episcopal church at Garrett, and the main address of the afternoon was by Hon. W. H. McNagny, of Columbia City. His speech received high praise from all who heard it. Then there were addresses by T. T. Slattery, vice grand master of the Brotherhood and by G. W. Howard, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors. In the evening were speeches by L. S. Coffin of Ft. Dodge, Iowa, E. E. Clark, grand chief of the order of Railway Conductors, and by F. P. Sargent, grand Master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The entire program was very interesting.

An Eaten Out Town.

On the occasion of the visit of President Harrison to Topeka, Kan., the hotels, restaurants and boarding houses were overrun by the great crowd. People clamored for food as the crowd clamors to get into a circus, and guards were placed at the dining room doors to keep back those who could not be at once accommodated. A gentleman who had tried every public place found at a late hour in the afternoon a restaurant in an out of the way place. He went in and asked if he could be fed. The proprietor said he had been eaten out.

"I'll give you a dollar for a glass of milk and piece of pie," said the stranger.

"Ain't got no milk and ain't got no pie," replied the hungry proprietor.

"What's that in that showcase—isn't that pie?" asked the stranger, pointing out a pumpkin pie. The proprietor looked at it in a languid manner and answered: "That's all we have left for my family. If I sell that they won't get anything."

"I'll give you a dollar for the pie," said the hungry stranger, growing desperate.

The proprietor took out the pie and was in the act of handing it over when his jaw opened and about half the pie disappeared, the other half being handed over to the stranger, who refused it.

"Sell it for a quarter," said the pie man, realizing now that his chance was growing smaller. But the stranger refused the rugged moiety and went away sorrowful and as hungry as when he came.—Chicago Tribune.

Sleep for School Children.

We all know how much greater is the need of children for sleep than of grown persons, and how necessary for their good it is to be able fully to satisfy this need, but how great it is generally at any particular age of the child is very hard to define exactly. The amount varies under different climatic conditions. In Sweden we consider a sleep of eleven or twelve hours necessary for the younger school children and of at least eight or nine hours for the older ones. Yet the investigations have shown that this requirement lacks much of being met in all the classes through the whole school. Boys in the higher classes get but little more than seven hours in bed, and as that is the average it is easy to perceive that many of them must content themselves with still less sleep.

It is also evident from the investigations that the sleeping time is diminished with the increase of the working hours from class to class, so that pupils of the same age enjoy less according as they are higher in their classes. It thus appears constantly that in schools of relatively longer hours of work the sleeping time of the pupils is correspondingly shorter. In short, the prolongation of the working hours takes place for the most part at the cost of the time for sleep.—Professor Axel Key in Popular Science.

Number Both Doors.

The golden rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," is violated in a petty fashion in New York which is intensely irritating. Many people when finishing their houses neglect to put the numbers on properly, with the result that strangers in search of a particular residence wander up and down the semi-lighted street cursing volubly. This absolute neglect of the law, however, is not as irritating as the practice of painting the name on the outer door and omitting it over the inner door. Until 10 o'clock the greater number of storm doors stand open.

The light from the hall chandelier illuminates the inner transom, but the outer one is a dull blank, on which nothing can be read. You stare at what you know are figures, finding yourself utterly unable to distinguish them, and you are reduced to the ignominious course of ringing the bell and asking what the number is, which invariably produces on the face of the servant who appears an expression of a conviction not flattering to your sobriety. Good Christians there be who put the number on both transoms—may their homes be exalted and their examples imitated!—New York Telegram.

The Swiss President.

Under the Swiss system the president of the confederacy has no more authority than a member of the cabinet. The head of the government is a council elected by the parliament. This council selects a chairman from its members, who thus becomes president of the republic, and assumes a cabinet portfolio, usually that of foreign affairs. He is clothed with no powers of appointment to office. His co-members of the cabinet, even the judges of the supreme court, are all elected. He can serve but a single year; hence his time and talents, instead of being devoted to filling offices and seeking a re-election, are given to the service of his country. He is helped in his efforts for pure and economical government by a corps of trained statesmen.—S. H. M. Byers in Harper's.

Business.

The scholar is always ready to pick up a thought, and a born man of business is ever on the lookout for a trade.

A good natured coachman overtook a tired looking peddler, and offered him a lift to the next town. At the end of the ride the peddler, by way of emphasizing his thanks, offered the coachman the pick of his wares, but the proffer was declined.

"Well, then," insisted the enterprising pack carrier, "if you won't take a present don't you want to buy something?"—Exchange.

Aluminum in Search of a Name.

To end the long dispute which has been waged with reference to the right designation of the metal which is now assuming such importance, it is urged that the largest producers in the world favor the form aluminum, which also has the advantage of greater brevity, and that therefore foreign scientific journals and scientific men should follow the example of American journals and call it once for all aluminum.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Lady's Perfect Companion.

Painless childbirth, our new book, tells how any woman may become a mother without suffering any pain whatever. Also how to treat and overcome morning sickness, swelled limbs, and other evils attending pregnancy. It is reliable, and highly endorsed by physicians as the wife's true private companion. Send two cent stamp for descriptive circulars and confidential letter, sent in sealed envelope. Address FRANK THOMAS & Co., Publishers, Baltimore, Maryland.

Indigestion

Is not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for Indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Brockway Centre, Mich.:—

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony, was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."

A Pioneer Gone.

Died near Huntertown, Nov. 16, 1890, Mary Rhodes, aged 81 years.

She with her husband, Daniel Rhodes and family removed from Ohio to this county in 1834 and settled on land they entered from the general government about a mile and a half below St Joe, and one mile northeast of Spencerville, now owned by their son Miles Rhodes. Here her husband died in 1852, and here she lived for over a half century, a hard working, quiet, unassuming and worthy christian wife, mother and neighbor, admired, respected and loved by all who knew her.

The writer knew her for nearly half a century, and is a willing witness to these worthy and examplary traits of character which adorned her life. Truly, a mother in Israel and a real pioneer has departed, one who bore more than the ordinary privations of a new country, one who performed her full share in transplanting to this, then wild forest, christianity and modern civilization. She raised a very large family of children who with their children and grandchildren, and many other warm friends and neighbors mourn the loss.

What more can be said? Ah! what more need be said? Only this. The history of DeKalb county can not be correctly written unless it embraces the the labors, privations and lives of Mary Rhodes and her husband, Daniel Rhodes.

A GREAT AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

The Success of "The Century" and its Plans for 1891.

The Century Magazine is now so well-known that to tell of its past success seems almost an old story. The New York Tribune has said that it and its companion, St. Nicholas for Young Folks, issued by the same house, "are read by every one person in thirty of the country's population,"—and large editions of both are sent beyond the seas. It is an interesting fact that a few years ago it was found that seven thousand copies of The Century went to Scotland, quite a respectable edition in itself. The question in England is no longer "Who reads an American book?" but "Who does not see the American magazines?' A few years ago The Century about doubled its circulation with the famous War Papers, General Grant and others, adding many more readers later with the Lincoln History and Kennan's thrilling articles on the Siberian Exile System. One great feature of 1891 is to be "The Gold Hunters of California" describing that remarkable movement to the gold fields in '49, in a series of richly illustrated articles written by survivors, including the narratives of men who went to California by the different routes, accounts of the gold discoveries, life in the mines, the work of the vigilance committees (by the chairman of the committees) etc., etc. General Fremont's last writing was done for this series. In November appears the opening article, "The First Emigrant Train to California," crossing the Rockies in 1841, by General Bidwell, a pioneer of pioneers. Thousands of American families who had some relative or friend "the Argonauts of '49" will be interested in these papers. Many other good things are coming, the narrative of an American's travels through that unknown land Thibet (for 700 miles over ground never before trod by a white man); the experiences of escaping War-Prisoners; American Newspapers described by well-known journalists; accounts of the great Indian Fighters, Custer and others; personal anecdotes of Lincoln, by his private secretaries; "The Faith Doctor," a novel by Edward Eggleston, with a wonderful rich program of novelets and stories by most of the leading writers, etc., etc. It is also announced that The Century has purchased the right to print, before its appearance in France or any other country, extracts from advance sheets of the famous Talleyrand Memoirs which have been secretly preserved for half a century to be first given to the world through the pages of an American magazine. All Europe is eagerly awaiting the publication of this personal history of Talleyrand—greatest of intriguers and diplomats. The November Century begins the volume, and new subscribers should commence with that issue. The subscription price ($4.00) may be remitted directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York, or single copies may be purchased of any newsdealer. The publishers offer to send a free sample—a recent back number—to any one desiring it.

Election Expenses.

One curious feature of the modified Australian election law in New York, is that which requires candidates to make a sworn statement, when election is over, of how much money they used during the campaign and what it was used for. The New York Star of Nov. 11, gives an idea of this matter as follows:

Affidavits of election expenses from candidates in the recent contest came into the County Clerk's office at a lively rate yesterday. The majority were from Prohibition candidates. Most interesting of all were the statements of W. Jennings Demorest, the cold-water candidate for Mayor, and Samuel Rinaldo, Mr. Campbell's opponent in the Eighth Congressional District. Mr. Demorest expended in all $3,571.96 for the "rent of the County Committee's hall, advertising, printing, circulars, and distributing." Rinaldo paid $180 for pasters, $197.50 for lithographs, etc., and $30 for distributing, all of which was "to help elect me (if possible.)"

Obituary.

Callie D. Williams was born in Auburn April 24, 1870 and died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Williams in this place on Saturday, Nov. 15, 1890, at 3:45 p m. her age being 20 years, 6 months and 21 days. Miss Williams had been a sufferer more or less for about a year, but her malady, consumption, assumed a distinct form about six months ago. All that could be done, was done for her, but the dread disease was not stayed and she gradually failed till death came to her release. She was a young lady of bright promise, and of an amiable and engaging disposition, admired by a large circle of young friends. Her early death is a great stroke to all, but more especially so to the almost heart broken parents. They have the deepest sympathy of all our people in this sad bereavement. The funeral took place from the M. E. church Tuesday Nov. 18, at 2 p. m. the services being by Rev. H. M. Lamport. A large concourse of mourning friends followed her to her last resting place.

A Problem in Arithmetic.

[St. Joe News.]

Ex-Squire White met with quite an amusing accident at his home west of this place, last Monday. Perhaps it wasn't funny for Jake but the neighbors enjoyed it hugely. It seems that Mr. Knisely, Mrs. Hoffman and Mr. White had raised a lot of sugar cane on shares. Mrs. Hoffman furnished the land to raise it on, Knisely did the work and White was to get the cane made into syrup. Accordingly Mr. White took the cane to the mill last Monday and was bringing home the syrup in a large stone jar or crock, when the colt he was driving took fright and ran away, upsetting the wagon-box and syrup in such a promiscuous mess, that it was a difficult matter to tell which was which. The question now arises how to divide the profits so that each partner will have an equal share.

AN ARAB IVORY RAID.

A Cruel Attack of One Tribe Upon Another in the Wilds of Africa.

Soon after Tippo Tib's occupation of Stanley Falls in 1879 rumors reached Yabuli and the neighboring villages of oppression and persecution by the Manyema. Chiefs met together to inquire of each other the reason of this invasion. Less than three years after Stanley's fight with the Basoko at the mouth of the Aruwimi, the Manyema mercenaries of the Arabs attacked and destroyed several villages higher up the same river, having traveled overland from the Congo through the dense forests below Stanley Falls; and descending the Aruwimi river in canoes they laid waste all the villages by the way, capturing men and women, and imposing fines of ivory for their redemption upon those of the natives who were fortunate enough to escape to the woods.

Although every precaution was taken by the people of Yabuli to guard against surprise, they instinctively felt impending evil and a gloom settled over the village affecting young and old alike. They all appeared to realize their isolated position, escape being impossible as their neighbors were at enmity with them and with each other, and the poor wretches lived in a condition of fear bordering upon panic.

At last the evil day arrived. Early one morning, just before daybreak, they were suddenly startled by the loud reports of the Manyema guns. The forest around the village appeared alive with armed men, who rushed among their dwellings from all sides, firing recklessly, sometimes in the air, into the doors of the huts, and at the panic stricken savages, who rushed toward the woods for shelter. A few of the braver natives stood their ground and hurled spears and knives at their assailants, but one by one they dropped, shot by their brutal enemy.

After firing their muzzle loading muskets many of the Manyema rushed upon the natives and clubbed them with the butt end of their guns. The women encumbered with their children, whom they were bravely trying to carry off to the shelter of the woods, were soon overtaken by the Manyema, who roughly threw them to the ground and bound their arms and legs. Nearly two-thirds of the women and children were captured, including the favorite wife of Ioko; but many of the men and a few women managed to escape to the woods. —Herbert Ward in Scribner's.

Was Once the Queen's.

Missing—a literary treasure supposed to have been once in the possession of her majesty the queen! The precious relic referred to is a copy of the original edition of "A Christmas Carol," presented by Dickens to the author of "Vanity Fair," with the interesting autograph inscription, "W. M. Thackeray, from Charles Dickens (whom he made very happy once a long way from home)." The story runs that the queen possessed a strong desire to own the little volume in which the names of these two great contemporary masters of fiction were thus associated; that an unlimited commission was given for its purchase, and that it eventually became her majesty's property for the sum of £25 10s., and was immediately transferred to her keeping.

The original authority for the statement appears to have been the late Mr. Hotten, the publisher; but it is more important to note that Dickens' biographer, Mr. John Forster, has given it additional currency. The strange part of the matter, however, is that the royal librarian knows nothing about it, except that no such book is included in the collection under his care.—London News.

Climate of Southern California.

Winter as we understand it east of the Rockies does not exist. I scarcely know how to divide the seasons. There are at most but three. Spring may be said to begin with December and end in April; summer, with May (whose days, however, are often cooler than those of January) and end with September; while October and November are a mild autumn, when nature takes a partial rest, and the leaves of the deciduous trees are gone. But how shall we classify a climate in which the strawberry (none yet in my experience equal to the eastern berry) may be eaten in every month of the year, and ripe figs may be picked from July to March?

What shall I say of a frost (an affair of only an hour just before sunrise) which is hardly anywhere severe enough to disturb the delicate heliotrope, and even in the deepest valleys where it may chill the orange will respect the bloom of that fruit on contiguous ground fifty or a hundred feet higher?—Charles Dudley Warner in Harper's.

Overlooked in the Excitement.

He (on a raft in mid-ocean)—There, dear, taste this orange marmalade, and while I scan the horizon wrap my greatcoat around you.

She—How great! how noble! how self sacrificing! But, darling, are you sure you will not be too cold?

He—You forget, Maud, that I have on my Ascot tie.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Parents, in choosing an employment for their children or giving them advice upon the subject, should study their temperaments and inherited tendencies. Children of consumptive parents should seldom engage in sedentary occupations. Those who have inherited weak hearts should not engage in work involving much severe strain.

A Fatal Mistake.

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach, and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary, in his new book on "Heart Disease," which may be had free at F. E Davenport's, who guarantees and recommends Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. It cures nervous and organic heart disease, short breath, fluttering, pain or tenderness in the side, arm or shoulders, irregular pulse, fainting, smothering, dropsy, etc. His restorative nervine cures headache, fits, etc. 5

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1. 4

DRUNKENNESS—LIQUOR HABIT—In all the world there is but one cure, Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been cured who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and today believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars. Address in confidence, GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race street, Cincinnati, O.

How to Succeed.

This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient grit—want of nerve. They are nervous, irresolute, changeable, easily get the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirits up," thus wasting money, time, opportunity and nerve force. There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia, and install Eupepsy. We recomend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by Robbins and McCord, Druggists. 4

Other New Election Laws.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.

The first tests of the new election laws in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut have demonstrated that their principal defects are the provisions in which they differ from the Indiana law. The Connecticut law provides for printing ballots at the public expense, but requires that it shall be done for the different organizations making nominations, each of which may receive a supply of ballots containing only the names of its own candidates, and may distribute them for itself. The only safeguard is that the voter must receive an official envelope at the polling place and retiring into a secret booth shall inclose his ballot in the envelope, and thus deliver it to the election officers to be put in the ballot box. One result is seen in the Bridgeport scandal, which involves in doubt the whole result of the election for governor. Ballots were marked for identification and given to purchased voters, thus affording evidence that they voted according to agreement. In New Jersey there are also separate ballots for the different parties making nominations and likewise given out for distribution before election, enabling ward "heelers" to place the ticket for which they are working in the hands of voters, and to see that they enter the polling places with no other. In neither state is any account kept of unused ballots. In New York all ballots are official and furnished only within the polling places, and unused ballots have to be accounted for. But the requirement of separate ballots and the provision for the use of the pasters go far to impair the efficacy of the system. The former necessitates the printing and handling of several times as many ballots as there is any occasion for, and this, with the superfluous stub device makes the process of voting clumsy and tedious. The use of pasters also complicates matters and leaves the door open for many gross abuses. It was claimed in behalf of these devices that they would make it easy for illiterate electors to vote their choice, but this end is far better accomplished by the Indiana law. This, save the New York Times:

"Makes the process of voting simple and expeditious. It avoids the extra expense and all the uncertainty and confusion produced by a multiplicity of ballots. The grouping of candidates on the single ballot into separate tickets under the designations of the several nominating bodies, and their arrangement in an order previously shown in official advertisements of the nominations, make it easy for any voter to designate his choice, even though he is not equal to the easy task of learning to recognize his party designation."

The blanket ballot must be adopted in New York, Connecticut and New Jersey before election reform in those states can be considered accomplished. The experience of Connecticut with ballots which were marked by "floaters" for purposes of identification illustrates the wisdom of the prohibition of the use of the pencil or pen on our ballots. The claim that this prohibition is unconstitutional is, we think, absurd. We do not believe the courts will so hold it, but in the improbable event that they do we have no doubt the people of Indiana will make the necessary amendments to the state constitution very promptly. It seems to us that the only really important change which shou'd be made in ours relates to the system of stamping. The space allowed for stamping straight tickets should be greatly enlarged, sufficiently so, perhaps, to embrace the party device. No ticket stamped outside this space should be counted under any circumstances. Persons voting "mixed tickets" should be required to stamp opposite the name of each candidate for whom they desire to vote. With these changes, and a few others in minor details, the Indiana system will be almost perfect.

Morris, principal proprietor of the Louisiana lottery, stepped in and assumed the entire responsibility of their education, maintenance and provision for life.

DR. SCHULTZE, a German scientist, says that beer is materially affected both in taste and odor by standing even for a few minutes in a glass. This is due to the fact that the beer disolves a minute quantity of the lead oxide contained in the glass. Lead oxide is a poison, and a person that drinks a large amount of beer may get enough lead into his system to affect his health—if he lets the beer stay in the glass long enough. Dr. Schultze says that gold-lined silver mugs are the best vessels from which to drink beer. But if you can't get a gold-lined silver mug take a salt-glazed stone mug.

THE cost of French revolutions to the French Government of to-day is recorded in this little list of pensioned persons and families: Senators of the empire, 48,000 francs; in consequence of the Vienna peace, 434,211; men of the times of Louis XVIII. and Charles X., 15,000; families of Louis Philippe's time, 41,225; wounded in June, 1848, 136,975; persons of the second empire, 132,000, wounded in February, 1848, 198,000; victims of Dec. 2, 6,553,266. Each government has respected the pension obligation of its predecessor as to this growing list, and has paid every item with scrupulous regularity.

THE principal business of Strobeck, a little German village in the Hartz Mountains, is playing chess. Chess is the only game known to its simple people, and it is pursued assiduously by every one. It is taught to the children almost in their infancy. Every house and all the inns are supplied with chess-boards, and the stranger is struck with the curious spectacle of a population—men and woman, old and young—immersed in the royal game and oblivious to other mundane affairs. Chess, while possible to such a singular extent among the grave and solemn Germans of Strobeck, is too slow a game for Americans. Even Philadelphia and St. Louis have never been given to chess.

THE Count of Paris has had the usual funny experience of titled foreigners in this country. At the great reception in Philadelphia he was addressed as "Mr. Orleans," "King" and "Highness." That there may be no mistake hereafter, the Press prints the following form to be used in addressing him; "Monseigneur, j'ai l'honneur de vous souhaiter le bon soir." This is declared to be all sufficient, and will certainly save the time that would be taken up in hunting over Ollendorf. It would be awkward to ask the Count "if the good grocer has the sand of the husbandman," and have him reply, "No; but he has the stamps of the intelligent postmaster, and the wooden shoe of the little sister of the aunt of the apothecary."

A NATIONAL census will be taken in Austria this winter. On Dec. 29 every house-owner will receive a census blank, which, under penalty of the law, he must fill in for every inmate of his house, and deliver to an official on Jan. 3. The questions to be answered are neither numerous nor minutely inquisitive. Only in matters pertaining to nationality and language will the census be especially detailed. This exception to the otherwise prevailing generality of the information requested is the result of the horrible mish-mash of speech, blood, and history that go to make up the Austro-Hungarian state, as well as of the present strenuous efforts of the government to find some data for the basis of a policy that may harmonize the warring elements. The census officials will be the local county and communal office holders. As the Austrian government has appropriated only about $15,000 to the undertaking, not very great things are expected from it. The Vienna press complain loudly that hardly any data will be collected that will be of value in devising means for relieving the crying distress of the Austrian working people, especially of the idle and starving thousands in the vicinity of the capital.

Badge-Wearing the Latest Fad.

"I just met a very distinguished man on Broadway," said an English tourist lately landed to me the other day. "He was a member of some order or other. I'm not sure whether it was French or Italian. I think he belongs to more than one."

Ten minutes later I met this distinguished man, and his orders were neither French nor German. He was a member of the Barbers' Protective Association, an East Side athletic club, and a dancing coterie.

This mistake on the part of the British tourist calls to mind the fact that one man out of ten that are met on any of the upper thoroughfares wears badges of some sort or other. Most of the badges are small, and some are rich and costly in design, and as a rule they are worn on the left lapel of the coat where a boutonniere usually appears.

When the reader remembers that there are in this country over 5,000 secret societies, some large and prosperous, but most of which are confined to the town which gave them birth, and that most of the members wear some distinctive badge, this wonderful growth in the badge-wearing fad is not really so wonderful after all.

Yesterday I met on Sixth avenue a tall man with a military air, who would have been taken for a field marshal at least in any foreign city. I analyzed the badges that covered his waistcoat like the rounds of the "Jacob's ladder" that national guardsmen wear. The list was as follows:

Masonic—Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council, Commandery, Lodge of Perfection, Temple of Mecca.
Knights of Pythias.
Order of Foresters.
Ancient Order of American Workmen.
Legion of Honor.
Grand Army of the Republic.
Ninth Regiment, National Guards.

That was all, but as each order had its badge, and as each badge was worn, the waistcoat looked like the breast of the Prince of Wales in his dress parade costume.

Of course few badge wearers go to this extreme, but enough of them have their special vanities to make the fad a marked one in New York City.—New York Herald.

A Canard.

"What is a canard, my dear?" said Mrs. Littlewit to her husband the other morning at breakfast.

"What! don't you know what a canard is?" asked L., scornfully. "Why, the word itself conveys its own meaning."

"Does it? Well, I may be stupid, but I really don't see it. Do tell me, dear."

"Why, a canard is something one canardly believe, of course."—Tit-for-Tat.

CARNEGIE'S BLUNDERS.

THE ERRORS OF THE GREAT STEELMAKER CORRECTED.

His Statements About Guns and Steel at the Outbreak of the War—Blaine on Guns—Our Big Iron and Steel Industry in 1861-5.

Andrew Carnegie is the principal manufacturer of steel rails in America. As such he ought to know something about the manufacture of rails in America. In his article in the North American Review on the tariff, however, he makes statements which are grossly inaccurate, not to say absurd.

Referring to the outbreak of the war, he says:

"In what condition did the country find itself then? Without the ability to supply clothing, arms, or ammunition for her troops. Iron and steel for railways and locomotives—articles almost as essential for subduing the rebellion as any of those named—could not be procured at home. Agents were despatched to Britain and the Continent, and it was only by drawing from foreign countries that the republic was able to triumph. If Mr. Marcellus Hartley, or Mr. Gilead A. Smith, or any of the other agents with whose experience I am familiar, could be induced to write the story of these negotiations and purchases, it would be most interesting reading indeed for every American.

These statements are made in order to show that we should have had higher protection at the outbreak of the war, in which case we should have been able to supply ourselves with arms and with iron and steel for railways. But it is not true that the country was in the condition set forth by Carnegie.

In regard to arms no less a witness than Blaine himself can be cited to prove the falsity of Carnegie's claim. In a speech in the House of Representatives on June 5, 1876, Blaine said:

"In the month of November, 1861, I was summoned to Boston by a telegram to meet Mr. Fisher and another gentleman on some urgent business. I immediately responded. On getting there I found that they were the proprietors of a newly invented rifle. The other gentleman was Mr. Ward Cheney, of Connecticut, recently deceased, well known for his eminence in the silk manufacture, and a gentleman of great wealth and high character. One of the ingenious mechanics in his employ named Spencer had invented a repeating rifle. It had been tested in various private ways, but it had not received the official sanction of the Government. They had employed various persons to come to Washington during the summer of 1861, the first of the war; but these various agents reported, and these gentlemen so reported to me, that what they called a gun ring in Washington were so close and were so powerful that they could not get an opportunity to bring that new arm to the attention of the Secretary of War, the present venerable Senator from Pennsylvania, and they asked me if I thought I could do it. That was two years and more before I entered Congress.

"I told them that I thought I could. And going back home and making preparations, I immediately came to Washington, and in a very short time I had an interview with Secretary Cameron at the War Department. He looked at the gun, was satisfied there was something in it, and gave an order to have it tested by the Ordnance Bureau. It was thoroughly tested, and in the course of two weeks the experiment was so satisfactory that they gave a preliminary order for 20,000 rifles. It was, of course, as every gentleman who is familiar with the war knows, a most eminent success. It was one of the wonderful arms of the war—the Spencer rifle."

This "gun ring" at Washington was casting "an anchor to windward" with a vengeance, as may be seen from a report from Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War. This report shows that under the administration of Cameron, the first Secretary of War under Lincoln, 1,200,000 muskets and rifles were made or contracted for by American manufacturers. There were at that time 568,000 foot soldiers in service. We had, therefore, more than two guns of domestic manufacture for each soldier. These were either in hand or contracted for during the first nine months of the war. Besides these we had already considerable quantities of arms when the war broke out, but in order to make assurance doubly sure some 700,000 muskets and rifles were bought in Europe. It appears from the report of Secretary Cameron, under date of July 1, 1861, that many of these were bought for the Government by private citizens of our country, who were in Europe, on their own responsibility, fearing that the country might not have a sufficient supply.

As to the quality of our own arms, in comparison with those made in Europe, Secretary Cameron said in the same report:

"The arms and ordnance supplied from our national armories under the able superintendence of the Ordnance Bureau compare most favorably with the very best manufactured for foreign governments. The celebrated Enfield rifle, so called, is a simple copy of the regular arm manufactured for many years at the Springfield Armory." The Enfield rifle was a gun of English make.

Carnegie is equally far from the truth in regard to iron and steel rails, as is shown by the following figures:

Year.	Home production of pig iron. Tons.	Importation of pig iron. Tons.	Rails imported. Tons.
1861	731,544	110,025	74,490
1862	787,662	22,147	8,488
1863	949,604	31,007	17,008
1864	1,135,996	102,223	118,714
1865	931,582	44,601	74,702
Total	4,534,398	310,006	293,452

From these figures it is seen that we produced fifteen times as much pig-iron as we imported. During the four years of the war we built 4,450 miles of railroad, not to mention a vast amount of repairing and relaying of old roads with rails. For these 4,450 miles of new road 500,000 tons of rails were needed. We imported less than 300,000 tons, which was, perhaps, not more than one-third of the entire quantity consumed; at any rate our steel manufacturers reported in 1865 that they had thirty-seven steel-making estabishments with a capacity of 38,000 tons per annum, and that our total importations of steel in 1864 was 17,000 tons.

Carnegie seems to have the usual protectionist mote in the eye which prevents him from seeing the natural capacity and resources of this country as they are.

"No Retreat."

While the leading Republican organs of the West are urging the party to repeal or modify the McKinley tariff law as soon as Congress meets, the great organs of the East are crying, "no retreat!" Western Republican papers have read the handwriting on the wall and have interpreted it as a prophecy of dire disaster for the g. o. p. in 1892; and therefore they want to turn back and keep near the shore in order to save themselves from wreck in the next great storm of popular indignation.

Nothing is more significant of Western feeling on the tariff than the suggestion of Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, as the next nominee for Vice President, upon the ground that he voted against the McKinley bill, along with Mr. Blaine, who denounced the bill because it did not open the market for another barrel of pork or another bushel of wheat. Blaine smashed his fine beaver hat in with his mighty fist as an expression of his wrath and indignation at the folly of passing the McKinley bill; Pettigrew voted with the Democrats to make binding twine free, and then voted with them against the bill as a whole; and already the West is turning to these two men as the Moses and Aaron to lead the children of protection out of the McKinley wilderness—turning to these two who came nearest to the position of the "free-trade Democrats."

Blaine further criticised the McKinley law as being made for the East at the expense of the West. Perhaps this fact explains why Eastern organs of the g. o. p. are now demanding that the law stand as it is. It is in the East that the "fat" is fried, and in the East where the men live who hold the mortgage on the g. o. p. If the party takes the back track now it cannot hope to "fry the fat" in such copious quantities in 1892 as it did in 1888. But the tariff "fat" is a necessity for the g. o. p.—how is it to carry elections without "fat?" How, then, can the Republicans of the West get the McKinley law modified when Eastern manufacturers have bought and paid for just these high McKinley duties and swear they will take nothing less?

The West is a consumer, and the g. o. p. has long since cut loose from the doctrine that the consumer deserves one moment's consideration in the making of tariff laws. Only the manufacturer deserves consideration; he stands ready to pay for his duties in tariff fat, and he must have them—the goods must be delivered. The great masses of the West must meanwhile content themselves with "tin-whistle" duties on corn, wheat, and other farm products. Of course these agricultural duties can do the farmers absolutely no good; but, then, the farmers do not contribute any "fat" to carry elections, and thus they have no claims upon the g. o. p. which are at all equal to those of the rich monopolists of the East.

The g. o. p. must pay back its debts—must render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's. The Eastern organs see this all the more clearly by being right where the owners of the g. o. p. live and thrive. They know whom the g. o. p. is dependent upon, and they know that it is only by guarding the interests of these monopolists that it can gain victories in the future. The New York Tribune and other Eastern organs are in the right; there can be "no retreat.

McKinley Industries.

The American Economist tries to offset the effect of "McKinley Prices" by printing a few columns of what it calls "McKinley Industries." This it calls "a page of notes as examples of what the new tariff bill is doing for the country."

Among these notes is the following: "Philadelphia parties will probably move several carpet factories to Kensington, Ga.". It does not explain how the McKinley bill moves an industry from one State to another.

If it had made an investigation it would probably have found that these carpet mills are going to Georgia to get cheaper labor, and that cheaper labor is made necessary by reason of the higher duties on carpet wool in the McKinley bill.

"McKinley industries" ought to mean industries which have sprung into being or have felt a new wave of prosperity by reason of higher duties imposed by McKinley; but the Economist rakes together a mass of news notes about the prosperity of industries, without any regard to whether there is a higher duty or not. A great output of pig iron at a Pennsylvania furnace is recorded among those "McKinley industries," although the duty on pig iron is precisely the same in the new law as in the old.

Let the Economist point out only real cases of "McKinley industries," for there will be such; and then the question will arise: Who pays for those industries? If the bill creates new industries it can only be by raising prices. For whose benefit will this be? What is the use of new industries which lay additional burdens upon the people? Industries are good things when they rest on an honest basis of self-support; but when they live upon the community such industries are a loss and not a gain. A new industry is not necessarily a sign of prosperity.

The Southern Iron Industry.

The rapid growth of the iron industry of the Southern States is the best refutation of the protectionists' claim that "infant industries" cannot be established in a new country without protection from older countries which compete with it.

These States, which formerly had no manufacturing industries, found within themselves natural resources far exceeding those of any other part of the Union, and it has come to pass that a ton of pig iron can be made as cheaply in Alabama as in any country in the world. The very interesting statistics published by the United States Commissioner of Labor show that in one establishment in the South the cost of production of a ton of pig iron was $8.55, in another $9.16, in still another $9.44. On the other hand, in many establishments in Great Britain and on the continent of Europe the cost of production per ton was over $10. True, in some it was less. But the remarkable fact is that the difference in the cost of production between the establishments in the Southern and Northern States is much greater than that between the establishments in Europe and those in America. In many establishments in the Northern States the cost of production is as high as $14, $15, or $16 per ton, and in some even more.

There must be something badly wrong with the "infant industry" argument, when new competitors can spring up and put iron upon the market so much more cheaply than Pennsylvania can.

Bulldozed by Reed.

When the McKinley bill was under consideration in the House of Representatives, a new Republican member from the Northwest thought it to be his duty to vote against the bill. When Reed heard of this he sent for him, and told him that, unless he voted for the bill, he should not so much as be recognized once during the session to present a single one of the many matters of local interest to his rapidly growing district which he wished to see passed. The Congressman was a new member, and this was his first session. He thought that it would be a fatal blow to his prestige at home if he should return to his constituents without once having had a chance to open his lips in the House, and he yielded to the intimidation practiced by the Speaker, and voted for the McKinley bill.

A Foolish Tax.

Nearly all our seed peas are imported, principally from Canada. A leading American seed merchant is quoted as saying that even if the United States should put a duty of $1 a bushel on garden peas they would have to be imported, because "there isn't a spot in the United States where these peas can be grown profitably or to good advantage." The duty on peas is changed from 20 per cent. ad valorem to 15c a bushel on dried, 20c on green and 50c on split.

When the farmer's wife wants seed peas she buys them in the nearest town. If she will look into the McKinley law she will find them taxed under agricultural products "for the benefit of American farmers!"

IT has lately been shown that if two coins are placed on opposite sides of a plate of glass and electrified for two minutes they will leave a perfect image of themselves upon the glass.

TWO STRANGERS IN A DUEL.

A Story of a Meeting on the Field of Honor in the Days Before the War.

"I have seen one duel in my life," he said. "I do not believe in dueling, of course, but since that duel I have not had the horror of it which I felt before. It did not seem like murder; it did not seem even brutal to me.

"I was in New Orleans and was sitting late one night in the hotel corridor, interested in a discussion ably conducted on both sides. It was on that subject which then hung on every man's lips. Both men were handsome, middle-aged and refined looking. The conversation became more and more heated until one of the men said sternly:

"'You have insulted my State and me, sir.'

"'I have spoken what I believe to be the truth,' said the other man calmly; 'and I cannot change my sentiment.'

"'Then you offer to give me satisfaction?' said the other.

"'In what way?'

"'As gentlemen give satisfaction.'

"'I do not fight duels,' said the other, paling slightly.

"'Not when you have insulted a man?'

"'No.'

"'You are not a coward,' answered the other. 'That is plain to see. I ask you as a gentleman to give me satisfaction.'

"The man from the North looked at him steadily.

"'I cannot kill a man,' he said.

"The other gave him a look which was almost one of appeal.

"'If you do not give me satisfaction,' he said, 'or retract, and I see you will not do that, I shall feel like a hound.'

"'Very well,' answered the other, simply, 'when shall it be?'

"'As soon as possible.'

"The Southerner excused himself to find a second. The Northern man turned to me.

"'I am a stranger here,' he said. 'Will you act as my second?'

"'I don't believe in duels,' I answered, feeling ashamed to refuse him.

"'No more do I,' he replied, coldly.

"I hesitated and consented. The four of us were driven below the city. I shall not forget the place where the duel was fought. We turned into a plantation at a point of the road where stood a majestic pecan tree, which seemed to bow gravely as the wind rustled softly through its branches and the trailing moss swayed gently. The distance was paced off by the second of my new friend's adversary, for I absolutely useless.

"For some reason my principal took off his coat and waistcoat, and the other man did the same thing. They both seemed at their ease. In the grayness of the morning the white of their shirts was beautifully clear and pleasing. They took their positions quietly. No one had spoken a word since we had entered the field. My friend raised his hand and looked carefully at his revolver.

"'Gentlemen,' he said, calmly, 'I have never shot at a man in my life. This is not of my doing.'

"I looked at the Southern duelist. His face whitened at this, but he was cool and graceful in his bearing.

"I forgot my principles. There was nothing brutal, uncivilized or cruel in this. It was beautiful. The calmness of the scene was exquisite. Both men faced each other as if they were paying compliments. There was a grace about their posture which charmed me. At that moment it seemed to me that to kill a man in so delicate a way was the refinement of courtesy.

"'Gentlemen, are you ready? One!' Two white-sleeved arms was all that I saw. I did not hear the rest, not even the shots. I saw the arms go up slowly, straighten out sharply, something like released springs, and the Southern man was in the damp grass, a bright stain on his white shirt. My friend was leaning over him, peering anxiously into the wounded man's face. When I ran up the one who was shot was very white.

"'Henry,' he said to his second, 'take every care for this gentleman's safety,' and he fainted.

"Perhaps this was one of the most remarkable duels ever fought. I, an unwilling second, did not know the name of the principal whom I assisted. I did not even know the cause of the duel. Each principal was ignorant of the name of the other. The only two men who knew each other were the Southern man and his second. But I, who believed dueling to be murder, found it, when forced to play a part in a duel, a fascinating picture, the like of which I have never before or since seen."—New York Tribune.

Typographical Blunders.

Sir Arthur Helps was, I think, oversensitive to adverse criticism, of which he had perhaps not enough to allow him to grow callous to it, and the least misprints in his own books or articles annoyed him exceedingly. There was a passage from his "Organization in Daily Life," in which, speaking of vultures gathering to their prey, he had used the Virgilian phrase "obscene birds," which had been printed "obscure birds." The mistake was not noticed by any of several persons who read the proofs in succession, and I remember that his gratitude was quite effusive when his attention was called to the word just as the book was being sent to press.

After all, the blunder was not a serious one, and was nothing like that of the lady traveler who wrote that the "whole wilderness was filled with erratic blocks," and who, failing to revise her proofs, found that the printers had taken on themselves to correct her geological expression, and that she was made to assert that the "whole wilderness was filled with erotic blacks."—The Academy.

He Enjoyed the Pass.

Great men do not always write in the grand manner, but Crowfoot, the Blackfoot chief, was not wanting in this respect.

He received a perpetual pass over the Canadian Pacific Railroad, and in acknowledgment of his thanks sent the following letter:

"Great Chief of the Railway: I salute you, O, Chief. O, great, I am pleased with railroad key, opening road free to me. The chains and rich covering of your name writing, its wonderful power to open the road, show the greatness of your chiefness. I have done. CROWFOOT."

His Picnic.

Employer—James, it's all right for you to take a day off now and then, but there's no use of lying about it.

Colored porter—Lyin', sah?

Employer—You told me you were going to your uncle's funeral yesterday, but I hear you went to a picnic.

Colored porter—Well, sah, I did go 'black-berryin'.—America.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.
J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

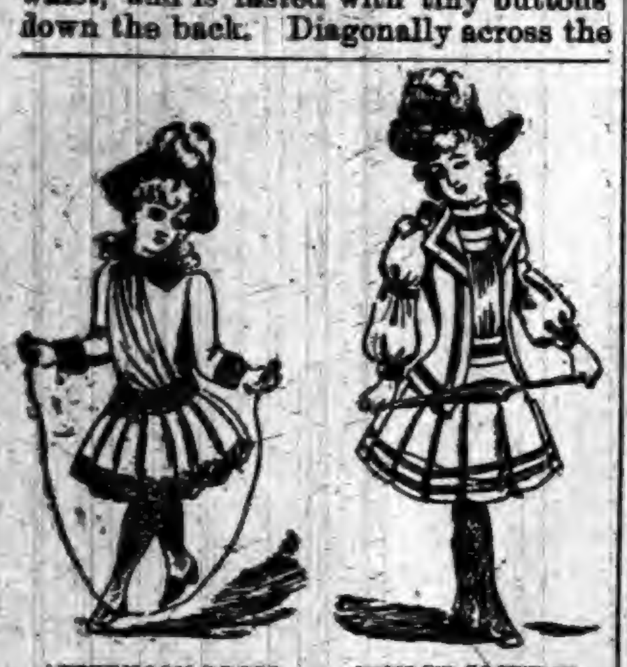
"PRETTY AS A PICTURE."

How Sweet Little Maids Will Look in the Latest Fall Styles.

THIS season's styles show some dainty gowns for the little maids who are big enough to go to church and Sunday school.

A very pretty afternoon dress for a girl of four is made of wine-colored cashmere, trimmed around the skirt with a galon of old rose, pale-blue and wine-colored silk; the belt, collars and cuffs are formed of the same galon.

The gown is made with medium long waist, and is fasted with tiny buttons down the back. Diagonally across the front of the gown are fastened soft folds of the cashmere, which are gathered into the belt, just where the steel clasps fasten.



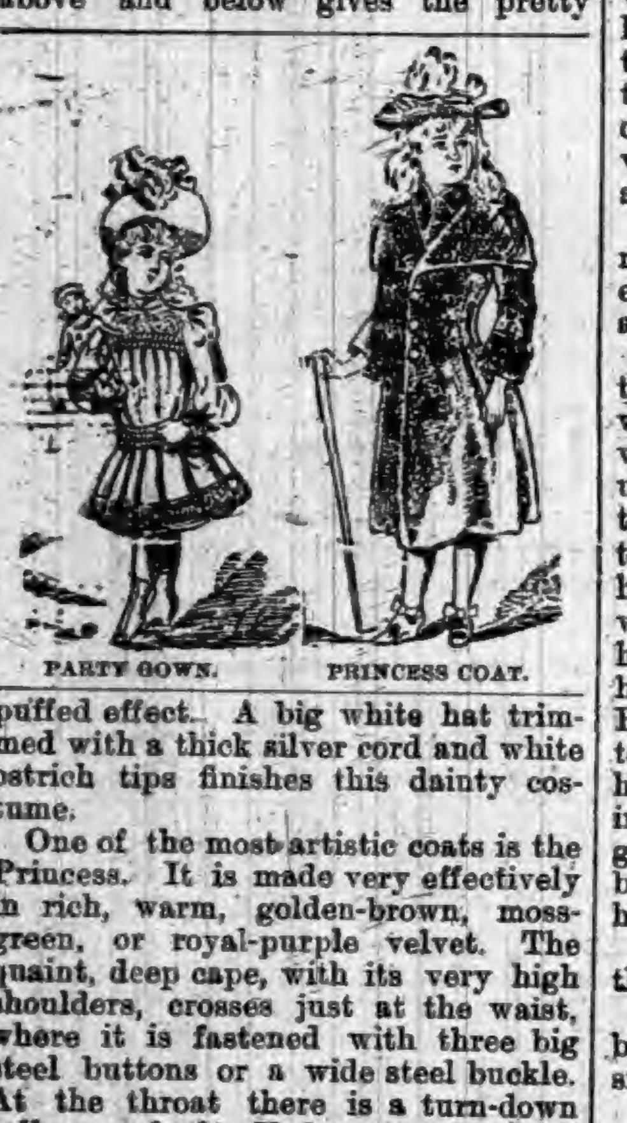
AFTERNOON DRESS. CHURCH COSTUME.

A stylish church costume, is of Reseda-green lady's cloth, trimmed with rows of moss-green velvet ribbon. The skirt is made of deep box plaits, trimmed with two rows of the velvet. The coat, which is tight-fitting in the back, opens to show a vest, finely plaited surah silk, of old rose color, gathered into a collar, and a belt of the green cloth, trimmed with a single row of velvet, just at the waist line in the back. In place of buttons two full rosettes of the velvet ribbon are fastened.

The gaiters, which fit so snugly over the shiny patent-leather shoes, are made of green cloth, the color of the gown. The hat is made of dark-green velvet and is trimmed with a large bunch of mingled Reseda and old-rose ostrich feathers.

A party gown, warranted to make any little maid look as "pretty as a pink," is of soft white camel's hair. The yoke, cuffs and bottom of the very full skirt are embroidered in white and silver, in a Grecian or geometrical pattern. The camel's hair is fastened to the yoke by two rows of shirring, and the long waist is made by shirring three rows of the cloth on an inside belt, which holds it in place.

The sleeves are made with fine tucks running from three inches below the arm seam to the elbow; the fullness above and below gives the pretty puffed effect. A big white hat trimmed with a thick silver cord and white ostrich tips finishes this dainty costume.



PARTY GOWN. PRINCESS COAT.

One of the most artistic coats is the Princess. It is made very effectively in rich, warm, golden-brown, moss-green, or royal-purple velvet. The quaint, deep cape, with its very high shoulders, crosses just at the waist, where it is fastened with three big steel buttons or a wide steel buckle. At the throat there is a turn-down collar, and the V-shaped opening of the cape shows a vest of velvet, fastened with small steel buttons which match in pattern the larger ones. Two big buttons are sewed in the back just at the waist line, where the skirt fullness is made by four deep plaits.

The wide-brimmed hat is of the same shade of velvet as the cloak, and is trimmed with ostrich feathers of a contrasting shade.

BAGGAGE SMASHERS.

Kate Thorn Gives Her Experience with That Class of People.

Almost everybody who travels complains of how dreadfully baggage is smashed up. A new trunk, they say, which costs twenty dollars, will be done to death in making a trip from Washington to Quebec, and home, by the way of the great lakes.

A friend of ours, who is a great traveler, and who is generally accompanied by a couple of Saratogas, tells us that she never enjoys the scenery anywhere, because she is worrying so about her trunks. In her experience she has had dozens of them broken open, and the contents scattered, and is always expecting such a catastrophe.

All travelers indulge in gloomy forebodings of that kind, to some extent. The only really independent traveler is the Boston drummer, and there are about twenty of him on every train, and he occupies two seats, and carries his luggage—three boxes and two bags—in his hand.

Of course, a great deal of blame is attached to the railway officials who handle the luggage. We have heard them called almost anything except decent men. Everybody feels at liberty to show them up, and then if they venture to say anything in return, they are reported to the company for insolence and disrespectful conduct.

Now a "baggage smasher" is a man with a man's feelings.

He isn't a Samson, or a California pack-horse, or a Virginia mule.

No matter how good his will may be, he cannot move a meeting house.

He cannot take a trunk which weighs two hundred and carry it in his arms as he would his first baby, even if it be filled with rare old china and geological specimens mixed up together. And when, after drawing in a full breath and setting back his cap and bracing himself, he manages to lift one of these trunks to a level with the truck, he cannot let it down easy, but has to let it go, and it goes down with a bang!

And unless he be a Hercules how is he going to help it?

Just consider the number of trunks and heavy packages a baggage master has to handle in the course of a day in a large city like New York or Chicago, and think what his muscles must be made of to do it! Think of his backbone!

We look at him sometimes and we fall to speculating on how he does it! On how he manages to keep on doing it? We should think that when he went home at night, if he ever does go home, he would be too tired to hug his wife and split the kindling wood.

What is the remedy?

We don't propose any. It would be useless if we did. Nobody would adopt it. A woman would rather have her trunks burst open on every trip than to go anywhere without the stereotyped quantity of lingerie, the morning and evening and dinner dresses, and the boots and shoes, and bonnets and parasols, and toilet fixings, and new novels deemed necessary for a week's stay anywhere. The fact of it is, the dear creatures must have the things, and they fill up big trunks, and the baggage smashers have got to grin and bear it or quit the business.

And if they turn the trunks end over end, and upset the liquid pearl over the morning slippers, and spill the liquid rouge over the hundred-dollar silk dress, who is to blame? The trunks have to be got into the baggage van somehow, and we defy any mortal man to get them there without turning them over a good many times.

The woman who has independence enough to travel with nothing by way of baggage but a handbag, and we know a few such women, is happy.

She is at liberty to enjoy the moving panorama which presents itself from the car window. She doesn't trouble herself about that trunk! She is not at the mercy of any official in blue uniform, with a gilt band on his hat.

And in closing, we extend our hearty sympathy to baggage smashers, all over the country, and when we get into Congress we will use our influence to limit the weight of one parcel of baggage to fifty pounds, even if we have to put our bonnets, and petticoats, and things up in a dozen parcels.—New York Weekly.

Wouldn't Have Believed It If He Hadn't Seen It.

Eben Fowler was a good old farmer whose particular hobby was to bring up his boys right. He had two of them. Jerry was the brightest, but not so old as his brother, and as the precedence of birth rules on a farm, as well as in royalty, the old man's son Thomas was rather the favorite. The old gentleman daily lectured his two sons on the cardinal evils of the world, mainly bearing on temperance as the best of all principles. The boys listened always and promised to heed their old father's words throughout their lives.

At length the younger boy said he must go to the city. There was sorrow in the old man's house. He was troubled and his good old wife was troubled. It seemed best that the boy should go out into the world, but he was too young. It was finally agreed, however, that he should go and that the older boy should go with him. The two youths set out with the best wishes of the neighbors and fairly overwhelmed with fatherly and motherly advice.

"Be careful, boys," sobbed the old man, "don't drink and don't hoss-race ef ye don't want to break your daddy's and mammy's hearts."

The boys promised. They went to the city, flourished, made money, and wrote back to the old home that they were too busy to leave on a visit, but urged their father to come and see them. The old man finally concluded to go, and one crisp December morning he reached the city. He was not very warmly clad, and as he scurried along he wondered if it would be wrong for him to take a small finger of whisky. He decided that he needed it—he was too old and could not contract the drink habit, he argued to himself. He went in through one of the doors of the great gilded places and stepped up to the bar. Just as the old man called for his drink the bartender saw him start.

"What's the matter, old man?" called the mixer of drinks.

"Would ye mind tellin' me whar the boss is?" he half gasped, holding the small glass trembling in his fingers.

"Oh, they're out at the barn looking at their hosses."

The old man turned away. He dropped ten cents on the bar and left his whisky untouched.

"I'm goin' home," he muttered; "this is no place for the ol' man. I'll go back to the ol' woman an' tell her that her boys is succeedin', but—but—thet is all I kin tell her."

He reached the door, then turning around he looked again at the big sign on the bar. It read:

: TOM AND JERRY. :

"Ef I hadn't seen it with my own eyes," murmured the old man, as he turned back toward the depot, "I'd never believed it. But I'll not bother the boys—I'll not bother 'em."—Pioneer Press.

A Voyage in a Small Craft.

A good deal of excitement was exhibited along the Thames by the arrival at Millwall of Capt. Sundsvall, a Norwegian sailor, who had succeeded in crossing the North Sea in a small boat. The little craft, which is called the Vigten, is only fifteen feet from stem to stern, with four feet breadth of beam. It is covered in with a kind of decking to prevent swamping by heavy seas, and it carries but one small sail.

Capt. Sundsvall commenced his adventurous voyage nearly three weeks before, starting from Christiana with the intention of proceeding to Edinburgh. All went well for a time, but being driven somewhat out of his course by contrary winds, he decided to attempt the journey to London, although such a voyage in so small a craft was attended by considerable danger, particularly as the Captain had no one to assist him in the management of the boat. He made fair progress, however, until he was for some days again disturbed by unfavorable weather, and was driven very much out of his course. Capt. Sundsvall also began to run short of provisions, and began to suffer from fatigue, having to keep a sharp lookout at night, and getting only occasional snatches of sleep during the day. He fell in with the steamship Assen, bound for Rotterdam, the crew of which endeavored to dissuade him from his hazardous enterprise, and invited him to come on board. The adventurous seaman, however, expressed his intention to continue the journey, and having obtained a supply of provisions, proceeded to London, safely reaching the Thames.

"No, THANK you, Cleopatra," quoth Antony that happy Sunday afternoon at dinner. "I'll not partake of that delicacy. It was a Roman punch that killed my good friend Cæsar."

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

The Little Grown Folks.

Said little Grace to little Bess,
"I guess I'll make my doll a dress."
Said little Bess to little Grace,
"I think you'd better wash its face!"
"Wash its face, indeed!" cried Grace—
In conscious wisdom she grew prouder—
"I'll do like grown-up ladies do,
Just put on grease and lots of powder!"
—Epoch.

Little Ethel.

She was such a pretty young girl! She sat in a Fifth avenue stage a few days ago with a curly mite of a little girl by her side, says the New York Evening Sun, and the young man opposite threw all the smiling admiration possible at the little one, because he didn't dare offer it to the larger one. But—and we still believe in the innocence of childhood—that tiny, cherub-faced being saw and comprehended the situation in a flash. It was clear that the child's thoughts ran thus: Here was a young man who thought "Aunty" was awfully pretty and sweet; no doubt he wished she was his "Aunty." But she wasn't, she was Ethel's. And Ethel could—— Without waiting to finish the thought, quite like the grown-up girl she would be seventeen years hence, Miss Ethel cast herself upon "Aunty's" neck and printed soft little kisses all over the sweet face. Then she put her tiny hand over "Aunty's" eyes and cried, "Aunty, play 'peep' wif Efel!" And the blushing aunty tried to keep the child demurely down by her side; but Miss Ethel knew very well what she was about, and she insisted on playing "peep," casting all the while the most triumphant and coquettish glances over toward the young man, who scarcely knew which most to dissemble, his amusement or his admiration.

By and by Miss Ethel was no longer satisfied with flaunting her privileges in the eyes of the young man. She longed for still further display. Casting a demure look across the way she said: "Aunty, kiss Efel." "Aunty" was terrified enough by this time to do anything the child bade. "Now, Efel, kiss aunty," she proclaimed with satisfaction, and proceeded to carry out the performance at once. After a great deal of elaborate osculation had been indulged in, between aunty's whispered protests and threats, the small woman's roguishness reached its climax. Catching the pretty face between her two little hands, she pulled it close down to her, and then, with an indescribably arch look opposite, she said in tones of command, "Now, man, kiss aunty."

Poor "man!" Poor "aunty!" Red as a rose was he, and she—how her pretty pink cheeks did glow as she caught the tiny mischief-maker and hurried her out of the stage, while a ripple of sweetly malicious laughter broke from the lips of the cherubic face that peered back at poor "man" from "aunty's" shoulder.

A Little Prisoner.

If I tell you Patty was a prisoner, perhaps you will think she was shut up in one of those great gloomy jails you may have seen sometimes, where the windows are all barred with iron and the doors have heavy locks on them for fear the people kept in there will get out; but no, Patty was not a prisoner of that kind. Let me tell you her story.

She was a dear little girl, five years old, and she went to school in the next house to her own home, so that on stormy days she could be lifted over the railing that divided the piazzas, and not be obliged to go out into the rain at all.

On this particular day I want to tell you about she had started off as usual at 9 o'clock, with a message from her mother asking the teacher to dismiss her half an hour earlier than usual, in order that she might have time to go to town and get a pair of shoes.

The permission was given, and when the clock struck half-past twelve Patty put her book in her desk, kissed her teacher good-by, and ran down stairs and opened the big front door, which it was somewhat hard for her to do, as she is such a little girl, and the handle is so slippery and the door so heavy.

She shut it carefully after her, as she had been taught, but as it shut Patty's white apron fluttered into the crack and was caught in the heavy door, and when she turned to go she could not move a step; she was held fast by the apron a little prisoner!

What could she do? must she stay there ever so long? The dreadful thought came into her mind that perhaps no one would miss her, and she might even have to stay there all night; she gave the apron a tiny pull, but it was quite fast, and she knew that she would have to tear off a large corner to get it out, and what would mamma say to that? Oh, what could she do?

If she had been a little older and wiser she would have twisted herself around and rung the door-bell, but she did not think of that, and one or two tears were beginning to come to her bright brown eyes, when a gentleman who knew Patty happened to pass the house.

He could not help smiling when he saw the poor little girl, but he at once came up the steps and rang the bell, and in a minute Mary had come and opened the door, and Patty was released, and after thanking her kind friend she skipped merrily home, and went with her mamma to buy the new shoes.

Now, don't you think Patty was a prisoner?—Youth's Companion.

Typographical Blunders.

Sir Arthur Helps was, I think, oversensitive to adverse criticism, of which he had perhaps not enough to allow him to grow callous to it, and the least misprints in his own books or articles annoyed him exceedingly. There was a passage from his "Organization in Daily Life," in which, speaking of vultures gathering to their prey, he had used the Virgilian phrase "obscene birds," which had been printed "obscure birds." The mistake was not noticed by any of several persons who read the proofs in succession, and I remember that his gratitude was quite effusive when his attention was called to the word just as the book was being sent to press.

After all, the blunder was not a serious one, and was nothing like that of the lady traveler who wrote that the "whole wilderness was filled with erratic blocks," and who, failing to revise her proofs, found that the printers had taken on themselves to correct her geological expression, and that she was made to assert that the "whole wilderness was filled with erotic blacks."—The Academy.

A LAWYER's life can be said to extend over one brief period.

THE street-car driver's work is like an organ—full of stops.

A Symbol of Rank.

The distinctions of rank which exist in European countries give rise to many troubles which, though they may seem rather amusing as well as trivial to us, are in reality quite serious to the persons concerned in them. In Stuttgart, years ago, there existed a curious custom which is not yet entirely abolished, and, in fact, still flourishes quite vigorously in some parts of Germany and Switzerland. This was the use of lanterns of different varieties and sizes by which, at night, the rank of the party could be easily distinguished.

The lanters were carried by the servants who were sent to escort their mistresses home from places of amusement, and they made the square in front of the Royal Opera House, where most of the entertainments were then given, quite picturesque, with their lights bobbing up and down in every direction.

The differences between some of these lanterns were slight, but they had to be strictly observed, or trouble arose. The order of rank as set forth in the "rank-list," was something from which they could never swerve. Some had lanterns of tin, some of brass; some had wax lights, and others tallow; even the number of lights was prescribed for each separate class or rank.

An amusing story is told by Hackländer of two Stuttgart women, whose life-long friendship was nearly destroyed by the mistake of one of the husbands, who bought at an auction a lantern which could only be used with propriety by people of the next higher rank.

The servant polished the offending lantern, and took it with her the very next night when she went to meet her mistress at the close of an operatic entertainment. It was some time before the other woman, whose sense of the proprieties of life had been outraged, and who thought her old friend was endeavoring to lay claim to a rank above the one in which they both belonged, could be appeased. Even after the explanation, the subject of the lantern was always a sore one between them.

Concerning Foam.

Lord Rayleigh, in a recent lecture at the Royal Institution, took for his text the word "Foam," and he proved by many interesting experiments that foaming, or frothing, is not possible with a liquid of pure constitution. Thus, pure water and pure alcohol will neither of them foam; but a mixture of water with 5 per cent of alcohol will foam strongly. Beer is, of conse, a mixture of this character. Water impregnated with camphor, or with a small quantity of any colloid substance, will froth freely, and we all know that a little soap added to water will cause the same effect. Alluding to sea foam the lecturer said that this was not due to the salt contained in the water, but rather to the sea weeds which suffer destruction in stormy weather. He also alluded to the effect of oil upon troubled waters, and pointed out that, although in the first instance only the smaller ripples were affected by the oily coating, the larger waves were afterward brought under control, for it seemed as if the power of the wind to create those large waves was due in great measure to the small ripples which formed at their back, and gave the wind a hold on the water which it would not otherwise have. It was in reality the curling tops of the waves and the broken water which were mischievous, and these were quieted by action of the oil.

The Child of an Evil Parent.

Malvolio says in Shakspeare's comedy of "Twelfth Night," "Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them." So it is with nervousness. Some are born nervous, some achieve nervousness by their own imprudence and neglect, and some have nervousness thrust upon them by disease. The basic starting point of this ailment, which grows rapidly and assumes alarming proportions when it reaches the stage of hypochondria and chronic sleeplessness, is weakness, the child of indigestion, parent of many evils. For the incapacity of the stomach to digest food, and of the system to assimilate it after digestion, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has ever proved a sovereign remedy. Sleep becomes tranquil, appetite improves, abnormal sensitiveness of the nerves is succeeded by steadiness and vigor in those delicate tissues, bodily substance increases when that signal restorative of digestion is systematically used. Conquer also with it malaria, rheumatism, kidney inactivity, liver complaint and constipation.

Red Snow.

At the head of Holy Cross Creek, near Leadville, Col., and in the almost inaccessible defiles of Mount Shasta, Cal., there are hundreds of square feet of ground continually covered with snow as red as blood. In the polar regions red scarlet snow is a familiar sight, but the two places named above are the only spots within the limits of the United States where it is known to exist. The phenomenon is due to the presence of minute animalculæ in the snow. How the little midge ever got there is a question that has never been satisfactorily answered.

An Exacting Statute.

An eminent authority says: "It is extremely difficult to commit the crime of murder in such an accurate and honest way that it shall satisfy the specifications of the statute. Unless the would-be murderer take legal counsel beforehand and follow instructions minutely, he will fail nine times in ten, however sincerely he may try. Anybody can kill a man, but he cannot do it in first-degree-murder style without counsel and care."

FOUL poisons that accumulate in the blood and rot the machinery of the system are eradicated and expelled by using Prickly Ash Bitters, a medicine that will not irritate the stomach or bowels. It acts in a gentle manner on these delicate organs, and restores health in every case.

Street Car Courtesy.

A sallow-faced woman, with a wealth of freckles on her long nose, entered an Austin street car. There were eight or ten well-dressed gentlemen in the car, but none of them showed any inclination to give her a seat. After she waited a reasonable time, she remarked with asperity:

"Ef any of you galoots air waiten for me to squat in your laps, you are a sucked in crowd, for I want you to understand I am a lady from the ground up."

A dread that she was not in earnest about not sitting in their laps caused six of the gentlemen to leave the car.—Texas Siftings.

Catarrh

Is a complaint which affects nearly everybody, more or less. It originates in a cold, or succession of colds, combined with impure blood. Disagreeable flow from the nose, tickling in the throat, offensive breath, pain over and between the eyes, ringing and bursting noises in the ears, are the more common symptoms. Catarrh is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strikes directly at its cause by removing all impurities from the blood, building up the diseased tissues and giving healthy tone to the whole system.

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh with satisfactory results, receiving permanent benefit from it." J. F. HUBBARD, Streator, Ill.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING. EPPS'S COCOA BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, LONDON, ENGLAND.

THURSDAY....NOVEMBER 27, 1890.

SNOW four inches deep on the Catskill Mountains, N. Y.

BROOKLYN has taken a census herself. Has gained 51,000.

THE democrats of Jasper county, Mo., ran a lady for county clerk, and elected her.

FRANCIS E WARREN is the other U. S. Senator now chosen for the new state of Wyoming.

THE meeting of the Knights of Labor at Denver, has resolved to form a new political party.

THE B. & O. road has bought a large interest in the famous Hocking Valley coal mines in Ohio.

STRIKE among the men who haul out coal in the Brazil, Ind., mines. They want a raise to $2 a day.

CONGRESS meets next Monday. The republicans will not feel as overbearing as they did last December.

A NEW version of the Babylonian account of the creation of the world has been found, so it is claimed.

BARNUM, the great showman, is dangerously sick at his home in Bridgeport, Conn. Will hardly recover.

JOSEPH M. CAREY is the name of the first United States senator from Wyoming. He has just been chosen.

THE soldiers' monument at Indianapolis has cost so far $125,000. There is still a good deal of work to be done.

WILL republicans now arise and tell us wherein the democrats lied about the McKinley bill during the campaign?

THE states that went democratic this fall represent 325 electoral votes. Those that went republican represent 95 votes.

MT. CARMEL, Ill., has organized a company to build and put into use, a new kind of air ship. Capital, twenty millions.

REPUBLICAN papers say the McKinley bill has been misrepresented to the people. Will they please tell how and wherein?

JAMES RIVER valley in Dakota is to be irrigated by numerous artesian wells. Thomas, the wealthy ink dealer is at the head of it.

BEDS of saltpeter have been found in Wisconsin, and may prove very valuable, as the earth where it was first found is proving worth $30 a ton.

THE popular majority for the democrats at the recent election is over 600,000. In '88 we had 98,000, though we failed to get the president.

DEMOCRATS will have 158 majority in the next house of representatives. States that went democratic on governor represent nearly sixty of our sixty-five millions.

AUGUST BELMONT died in New York City Tuesday morning. He had been minister to Holland, and was twelve years chairman of the national democratic committee.

JOHN B. GORDON, was last week elected by the Georgia legislature to succeed Joseph E. Brown as United States senator from that state. The choice is considered a good one.

INDIAN troubles at Pine Ridge Agency, South Dakota, are getting serious. Troops are being sent out there in haste, and a collision may occur unless the Indians back down.

ONLY fifty-four republican members of the present House have been re-elected to the next. There were 175 of them. On the other hand, only one democrat who asked a re-election was defeated.

PALMER, will no doubt be the next senator from Illinois. The democrats have 101 members on joint ballot, the republicans 100, the farmers 3. The farmers will no doubt vote for Palmer.

THE day book or diary of Christopher Columbus has been washed up by the sea, so it is claimed and will be published. It is said to have been lost in a storm as he came back from his first voyage, 400 years ago.

NEW stockyards are to be established near Tolleston, Indiana, about thirty miles from Chicago. Armour and other wealthy men will take a hand in it, as the old stockyards have been too high in their charges for years.

"ABOVE all" says chairman Jewett, of the Indiana state committee, "extend to your democratic newspapers, encouragement and support Do everything in your power to increase their circulation and extend their influence."

MARY SHULL and Delhart Lehman of Lima, Ohio, were engaged to be married. But during the campaign of '88 she cheered for Cleveland while he cheered for Harrison. They quarreled, and now she has got $1,000 damages for breach of promise.

THERE will likely be an effort to put several subsidy bills through congress this winter, as it is urged the next House being democratic will not do it. Of course not, for a subsidy is only a steal under a softer name. It is but another form of the "protection steal."

OLD documents just brought to light in Boston, prove that "Crispus Attucks" was only an "alias" or extra name for the historical personage who perished in the revolutionary riots there, and to whom the city has built a monument. His correct name was Michael Johnson.

THE King of Holland died Sunday morning. He has been sick about a year, and lately has lost his mind. His queen will be regent until their ten-year old daughter can take the throne. Holland will now be reduced in size, as the grand duchy of Luxemberg goes to the Duke of Nassau, who will likely attach it to Germany.

STRIKE for better wages now going on in New Hampshire granite quarries. McKinley's bill gives granite a "protection" of 11 cents a cubic foot, so that "workmen can get better wages." Can't people see that protection does not raise wages? It only increases the profits of the owners. That is what the law was made for.

REPUBLICAN papers are trying to account for their defeat in this state by showing that more republicans staid at home than democrats. The way to get voters to the polls is to give them a good cause for which to come. We don't blame a man who refuses to come out and vote for higher taxes. It would have been a great credit to their voters if all had staid at home.

ONE of the democrats turned out by the republicans in congress last summer, was Breckenridge of Arkansas. Now he has been re-elected, both for the rest of his original time till next March, and also for the two year term following. His places on the committees are still vacant and he will be on hand next week to take them. Unseating democrats was one of the unjust things that the people sat down on Nov. 4.

BIGGEST railroad consolidation ever known; Jay Gould, the Standard Oil folks, C. P. Huntington and other railway magnates have managed to unite their interests. This brings into a solid system, the Missouri Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Northern Pacific, the Wabash system, the Richmond Terminal system, the Texas & Pacific system besides others about to go in. It is even believed by some that the B. & O. will unite with them. At all events they will control the railway business of the entire country.

IT is laughable to hear high taxpayers arguing for a "home market" and claiming that only a high tariff will give them one. A home market we have always had and always will have. What we want is an additional market, a foreign market for our surplus. We always produce more than we can consume. If our market is limited to the home market, we soon overstock that, and must then take low prices or none. If we have a foreign market for our surplus, we are that much ahead. When we had a foreign market under a low tariff, we got better prices for our farm products than we do now, and our farms were worth more per acre. Democrats ask for a lower tariff, so that trade of all kinds may be released from the bonds that are crushing it to death.

ONE great cause of trouble among the Sioux Indians is the lack of food. Their crops this summer were almost a failure owing to dry weather. Then, Harrison's Idnian agents, according to their old style, managed to steal the food and other supplies furnished by government. So the Indians are desperate. And just in the nick of time, a bad Indian or two claimed to have seen a Messiah who promised to appear soon and bring his red children relief from starvation and from their white oppressors. He wanted them to arm themselves and be ready, and he would help them to destroy all the whites, and then they would have plenty of food and clothes. They at once set about getting guns and ammunition, and are now well armed. But part of the Indians will not join them. Still there are enough to make a good deal of trouble, About 2,000 troops have been hastily gathered around them and there will be lively times unless they settle down. But all this would not have happened if the Indian agents had dealt honestly with them.

Death.

Mrs. Nancy E. Edwards, was born Feb. 27, 1853, in Morrow county, Ohio, where she resided with her father—Dennis Lahnum, until his removal to DeKalb county, Indiana, in the year 1865. In 1882, she was united in marriage to W. R. Edwards, since which time, she and her husband lived in, or near Auburn. Her death occurred November 20, 1890, at their residence on South Main street. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Markley, of Columbia City, at the Presbyterian chuch, after which, the remains of the deceased, were taken to Sawdust cemetery for interment. Though she was stricken with that dreaded of all diseases—hereditary consumption, and was rendered an invalid for many months, yet amid the untold agony of her lot, she was in many ways a remarkable woman. While racked with pain and burned with scorching fever, she displayed a courage and patience that fully substantiated the truth of her faith being placed in a higher power. She was a member of the Dunkard church, for about three years. But owing to her ill health, and the distance of the church from home, she in 1887, united with the Church of God, at this place. Being a firm believer in the everlasting existence of the soul, she died in the triumphs of a living faith. She leaves a husband, children, sisters, brothers and a large circle of friends to mourn her absence.

Loved one, farewell, thou hast left us,
To join that band in the spirit world,
The icy hand of death hath bereft us,
And another soul into eternity is hurled.

Though consumption fed upon your vitals,
And your hours were full of ceaseless pain,
You can now enjoy your heavenly titles,
And rest in the full triumphs of the Lamb ones slain.

We would not wish thee back to this world
of care,
Back to this life of torture and pain,
But stay, loved one, in that world so fair
And we will hope to meet again.

The Revolt Against "Protection."

Speaking of the results of the recent election and their obvious causes, Harper's Weekly says: The revolution of which Massachusetts is the chief illustration has the same meaning everywhere. The more the question of what is ingeniously called protection is understood, the more unwilling are intelligent to sustain under that name a system of high taxation, and to burden domestic enterprise and industry with oppressive imposts on their raw material. The argument for pressing the McKinley bill and for suppressing debate upon it in the House was that the country in the election of 1888 had issued its "mandate" for the enactment of a high tariff. If that view was correct, it follows that the country has now reconsidered and recalled its mandate by electing a House representing the most positive opposition to the McKinley bill. This is not surprising. No close observer can have failed to remark the deep discontent produced by the general course of the administration party, and especially by the passage of a bill which actually increased the price of necessaries in a time of entire peace. and at a session of congress which began with a surplus in the treasury.

Still Ignorant and Untruthful.

The Dispatch last week had another attack of the Wagoner Ditch "gripes," and as usual, when thus attcked, it gets off its base. It says:

> When it was once established as a public ditch, it became necessary to put it in the hands of a commissioner, pay a large sum for surveying, pay an attorney a fee, another a salary, because the latter (former) could not or would not do the work the town board instructed him to do."

The Dispatch knows (for it has examined the records) that Mr. Wagoner was the petitioner for that ditch, that I was his attorney in fact and of record, and that the town of Auburn and all others assessed, were adverse parties or defendants thereto. He knows, if he would look at the law, that disinterested persons must be commissioners to locate as well as to construct the ditch, that no party to the proceedings, or his attorney, can act as such. And when it says, by inference, that I could not or would not do as the town Board has instructed or requested me to do, it makes up and publishes a base lie, with a big "L." In this matter, as well as in others, he fills his readers with the same kind of nauseating provender.

W. H. DILLS.

A Few Words to the Clipper.

We are much obliged to you, Mr. Clipper, for informing the public that we, the ladies of the M. E. church, of Auburn, are striving to earn money by the sweat of our brows. But we would be much more obliged, if you would first take the pains to find out what the money was intended for, and how it was REALLY EARNED, before you publish an account of it in your paper. One would suppose, from your story, that WE were a set of HOME HEATHENS, raising money to purchase bicycles, air-guns, bathing suits. and such like, for the AFRICAN HEATHENS. You say, we were to mount a rostrum and tell how we earned a dollar. "But a number of them didn't do it, but shaped themselves in a position like the boy, who stood on the burning deck, and said: 'I made my money honorably." Now, we mounted no rostrum, but simply arose from our seats, as our names were called, and related our story. And only ONE lady made the assertion, "I made my money honorably." Then you say, one lady carried manure in a pail, for fifty cents, and intimated that she was ASHAMED to tell HOW she earned her money, and she said, "I earned my money honorably." This lady did not carry manure, and further, I feel confident if she had, she has talent and courage enough to have related her experience, without making a "dung-hill speech." And furthermore, her speech to a "cheap audience," was not intended to help buy stand-up collars for African heathens, and she knew it. By the way, that job of carrying manure, is still to be LET, and we don't know of anyone better fitted for that work than yourself. If you apply early, you may get the job, and thereby earn enough to admit you to our next meeting. You will then, perhaps, be enabled to learn, to your entire satisfaction, that we are earning money to help pay for our new church.

ONE WHO EARNED A DOLLAR.

A Lucky Lady.

MILAN, TENN., Sept. 23.

Mrs. G. W. Combs, of Humboldt, Tenn., a former resident of this place, has recently fallen heir to half a million dollars left by her Scotch grandfather. She has forwarded proof of her relationship to the lawyers and will receive her inheritance to-day.—Evening Mail and Express, New York, Sept. 23, 1890.

We are Mrs. Combs' lawyers and by her seeing our advertisement became the agents of her good fortune. We have a number of similar claims in our hands and expect to gain them. If your ancestors came from the old country write us and enclose 25 cents for reply. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain alone, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

A New Fence Machine.

Not exactly a fence machine either, but a patent machine or device for tightening the wire on an ordinary wire fence. It is quite simple and easily worked, and not only makes the fence better and stronger, but enables a man to fix more of it in a day. We were shown this device by Mr. Daniel Witmer, of Leo, who is now selling farm rights in his county. This stretcher enables one to put his posts farther apart, and have as few pickets as he chooses, or as few wires to hold them, yet the strands can be made so tight as to to secure everything solidly in its place. Mr. Witmer and two men, recently put up seventy rods of this fence in a day and a half, the cost for the entire fence, besides labor, not exceeding $13. Those who are interested in building fences, should not decide till they have seen this style of fence, and the way of buiding it with this machine.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned, having been restored to health by simple means, after suffering for several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease, CONSUMPTION, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To those who desire it he will cheerfully send, free of charge, a copy of the prescription used, which they will find a sure cure for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, CATARRH, BRONCHITIS, and all Throat and Lung Maladies. He hopes all sufferers will try his Remedy, as it is invaluable. Those desiring the prescription, which will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing, will please address, REV EDWARD A. WILSON, Williamsburg, Kings County, New York. 1y

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein Joseph E. Ensley, executor of the last will and testament of George Ensley, deceased, is plaintiff, and Charles L. Houser and Mrs. Charles L. Houser, his wife, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of one hundred twenty-six dollars and nine cents with interest on said decree and costs. I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, December 20, 1890.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to wit:

Lot numbered one (1) in the village of New Era, (now Butler Center,) Said county, the same being in section fifteen (15) in township thirty-three (33) north range twelve, (12) east, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

E. Y. Williamson has sold his barn to Lee Stamets, who has moved it onto his lot on the corner of Center and North Railroad street, where he will fit it up to use as a shop for his business.

Miss Ida Blair returned from her western trip Tuesday. She had a slpendid visit with Miss Daniels, at Fairmount, Minn., and says Miss D. is doing well, and is as popular as ever.

At the M. E. church from two until four o'clock p. m. Thanksgiving day, the members will convene for the purpose of voting on the question of admitting ladies of the church as delegates to attend the conference meetings.

What is the matter with brother Willis of the Press He says the bride was attired in a dahlia colored dress. This could mean any color from white to black, but a lady who was there informs us the color was heliotrope.

On last Friday Elmer Speer and Frank Rempis returned to this place, from the mines in Colorado. Elmer Speer had been absent a little over nine years He went in and shook hands with his aged father and talked with him quite awhile before he was recognized. He brought home specimens of silver ore worth over $22,500 to the ton.

"Miss Louisa Baker is the pastor in charge of the old North Church of Nantucket" This is the church having a bell with a history, and one giving out wonderfully sweet tones, on account, as is supposed of the very large amount of silver in it. At six o'clock in the morning and at nine in the evening it rings out its sweet notes; a custom dating far back.

Thanksgiving union service was held Thursday at ten o'clock at the Evangelical church, all the ministers of the place taking part. Rev. Keller preached the sermon Six churches in Waterloo, yet one held all who assembled to give thanks to God for blessings received during the past year. "Ten were healed, yet only one returned to give thanks. Where are the nine?"

Bob. Patterson came home Friday last from his first trip over his Ohio territory. He found the eastern part of the state had suffered the loss of their corn crop by too much wet weather, just the reverse of what we had here in Northern Indiana. And even of late, they had had heavy rains making the roads as bad as they are her in a soft winter He travels for a boot and shoe house, the same business in which he was engaged some years ago.

Albion Democrat: We admire the tact and delicacy of the intelligent republicans who stayed away from the election. It was at once, a rebuke to the desperate and corrupt managers and bosses, and a hint of something more decisive, two years from now.

The Dispatch has once again joined the procession of those who argue that a tariff duty does not add to the price. And again we ask: If it does not add to the price, how is the manufacturer protected? And how are wages raised? And why do manufacturers ask congress for a tariff on the things they make? We pause for a reply.

Both Mrs. Davenport and Mrs Hogue are still very poorly.

For distressing oppression and fulness in the stomach take Simmons Liver Regulator.

The social Friday evening at the Presbyterian church was a grand success. The supper was excellent, and the attendance large. They cleared over $31.

Fisher & Quince have closed a contract for doing the painting and graining for the new M. E. church. The outside is to be painted and the inside done in natural wood finish. It will be a big job and will take a month or two. They are both accomplished painters. Mr. Fisher has had eighteen years experience, and Mr. Quince has been in the business several years. The work will be well done.

Mrs. Dr. Adams has been in ill health for some weeks.

Mrs. Frank Zimmerman spent Sunday with friends in Butler.

For wakefulness, weakness or lack of energy Simmons Liver Regulator is a specific.

Farmers and all others should remember the date of the Farmers' Institute in Auburn.

Mary and Lydia Teeters spent Sunday at the old home farm west of town the guests of their brother Frank.

Dr. Watson and wife have a baby girl at their house, been there since Saturday. Of course Mr. and Mrs. Doc. are happy.

The nickel social of the M. E. church will meet at the home of the Misses Keeran next Friday afternoon at 2:30. All the ladies are invited to attend.

Ft. Wayne Daily Press: Samuel D. Hanna, of Auburn, is in the city contracting for an electric light plant, to be operated in the works of the Auburn foundry and machine works.

Rev. T. C. Smith of the Baptist church was over at Columbia City last week to attend a special meeting of his people. He brings word that A. F. Martin and family are well and were in attendance.

The furnaces for the new church were put in place or partly so last week, and other arrangements are going on rapidly. The floor is nearly laid, the first coat of plaster is on, the tower is sided up, and the great structure is begining to look like itself.

The new fair association at Ft. Wayne has bought its ground at a cost of $25,000. It is north of the city, just north of the Feeble Minded, on the banks of the St. Joe. Centlivre will extend his street line to the grounds when they are ready for it.

Henry Shull had another cow killed this week. It was in his pasture adjoining the Wabash road, east of town, and in some way got in on the track, and was struck by a train. The company will probably pay for it. This makes fourteen he has lost in about six years.

Young John Kruger is now a news agent on the Jackson Branch, with a run clear down to Cincinnati. He went south Monday forenoon and came back at noon, meeting the next south bound at Montgomery and then came back to Ft. Wayne and on to Cincinnati that night.

Dr. A. N. Coats, the dentist has been on a sick bed for about two weeks and has not been able to be at his office until within the past few days. We are glad to see him out again, and able to attend to business. He will hereafter be found at his rooms ready to wait on his patrons as usual.

We have had sample copies of the "Daily Press" a new paper started at Ft. Wayne last summer. It is bright and sound, and bristles all over with fresh news. They have evidently superior news facilities, especially in their daily news service, and more than the average amount of it. The people of Ft. Wayne and neighboring towns will find the "Daily Press" as good a paper as they have ever produced there, to say the least.

Story & Henry have bought out Mr. Eck at the meat market on South Main street where John McMillan was located so long. They are men who have had abundant experience in the business, and and will believe make it a success. Both are from Churubusco. Mr. Henry has lived in Auburn before. He will occupy the Saxton residence on South Jackson. Mr. Story gets the house now occupied by ex-Auditor Walter, near the Catholic church. Both are desirable citizens and deserve well of our people.

We have a copy of the "New Northwest" of Nov. 7. It is published at Deer Lodge, Montana, and has a full account of the last day's work of the teachers' institute held at that place. The most familiar thing was "Treatment of Percentage, by Mr. Shull of Phillipsburg," which called up the old DeKalb days very forcibly. We see that Josiah took a leading part in the exercises. Another feature we notice, was the Demorest Medal Contest, which was won by "Miss Nellie Barnes" a name rather familiar in the COURIER family. This young lady, however, was from Anaconda. At the close, among the thanks, was one the "Miss Wolf, county superintendent."

J. R. Lanning moved over to Moores Station soon after election, and will make that point his home. He has had a store there for several years, staying there a great deal of the time himself while his family remained at the home residence here in Auburn, and his son, Dode attending to the store at such time as he remained at home here. Mr. Lanning has long been a prominent figure in Auburn, and in the county at large. He was two terms county clerk, and when the First National bank was organized, he became its first president. He filled the position of chairman of the democratic county committee for a term or so, and in all these places, showed marked ability. We hope he will meet with continued prosperity.

We were agreeably surprised last week to receive a visit from Thomas Chandler, an old veteran, who resides on the Noble county line, west of Richland. Though otherwise in fair health, he suffers the great privation of the loss of his sight, which was caused by an attack of small pox while yet weak from injuries caused by the bursting of a shell. In spite of this great misfortune, he manages to enjoy life fairly well. He takes a number of the leading papers, the COURIER being among them, and enjoys having his wife and children read to him. He is a staunch republican, but is not above cracking a joke now and then at the expense of his party's recent defeat. We don't know whether he gets a pension or not, but we do know, that the government cannot do too much for an old soldier, who is afflicted as he is.

Skating at the rink to-night.

Mrs. H. A. Stevens is visiting her parents at Paxton, Ill.

Miss Lila Baker entertains a party of young people tomorrow evening.

If you would be rid of chills and fever Simmons Liver Regulator is what you need.

Miss Gertie Wilson entertained a number of young people at her home last evening.

Dr. S. B. Johnson, dentist, will be in his office at Waterloo on Thursday of each week.

Ezra Ensley's house on the Avenue, is nearly completed. It will be one of the best in town.

Post comes out with a big new ad. this week. He is going to sell off his stock at low figures.

Miss Gertrude Willis, of Waterloo, attended the social at the Presbyterian church Friday evening.

Charlie Comesky had a wagon full of nice turkeys here Tuesday furnishing people with thanksgiving material.

Farmers and all others should remember the Farmers' Institute at this place next week. See our extended notice.

H. C. Shull, our popular milkman, is making extensive improvements on his residence, including a new wing, new windows, etc.

Squire Hines accompanied his son F. M. to Ft. Wayne Monday morning. But we don't believe he intends to become a doctor himself.

Mrs. F. J. Yesbera visited the family of Rev. Dr. Johnson at South Bend last week. Her mother, Mrs. Hare accompanied her and they will likely remain till after Thanksgiving.

A. J. Weyer has moved to Chicago where he will go into business. He has been for many years a citizen of Auburn, and in common with our people we wish him abundant prosperity.

Mrs. A. S. Leas was in town a few days last week calling on old neighbors and relatives. She went from here to visit friends at Garrett and in Hicksville. She now resides at Ann Arbor.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

Ft. Wayne Sentinel: Senator Carlisle estimates that each man, woman and child in this country annually pays a tariff tax of $10, of which $3 goes into the United States treasury and $7 into the pocket of the protected manufactures.

R. B. Clear, of Concord, was in town last Friday, and took home the spire for the new church at that place. It is of galvanized iron and quite a good sized one. W. J. Wallace was the maker. He seems to have a knack of working on churches.

The new street west of the school house, has been opened through south and across the Wabash railroad, and many improvements are going on along there. We are told that Mr. Fluke will plot the ground west of it, and sell it off in town lots. Mr. Carruth has also made some improvements there including a good barn.

Judge and Mrs. McClellan start for Washington Saturday evening, so as to be there at the opening on Monday. The Judge goes back with a majority three times as big as before and the consciousness that the people from one end of the land to the other, have pronounced in favor of the votes he gave. We hope both may have a pleasant winter at the capital.

Flora Hoffman went to Wabash Tuesday, where she joins Anna Teeters and both go to Layfayette, where their brothers Josiah Teeters and James Hoffman are. On Thursday, to-day, they are to be at Indianapolis to witness the match game of foot ball between the students of Purdue and those of Butler University. Josiah Teeters is said to be the best player of the Purdue boys. DeKalb is always in the lead.

Mrs. Emma Sharitt, formerly Miss Emma Yarlet, of this county, is now at Bethany, in West Virginia. We believe her husband is a student at the College there. Mrs. Sharitt is well-known to most of our people, especially to the teachers, she having been engaged in that work a number of years. Like all former DeKalb folks, they want the COURIER, and we will send it eastward to them each week, and hope they will enjoy its columns.

A letter from James Morell, dated at Van Buren, Ark., is at hand. They have moved their foundry and machinery from Watertown, Dakota, and have set up the business in Van Buren, with a fine outlook for prosperity. He says Dakota was too dry, several crops having failed in succession, and that many of the people have moved to the southern states. But where he is now, eastern and northern people are coming in fast, and will make it a fine country. We change the COURIER at his reqtest, and if it fails to reach there regularly, we hope he will notify us promptly.

The Garrett Bologna gives the following as an inducement for teachers to subscribe to that "journal of guzzleization." "Our puncuation, capitalization and repetitions of the English language is greatly revised from the old log-school house style and serves as a prominent pointer for the young people who desire to get out of the ruts of our grandfather's days." To one whose young heart yearns for more grammar—for newer, wilder, sillier styles of false syntax, for a style of composition racked with gout, drawn by rheumatism and broken on a wheel—we commend the above as a study. A "teacher," who does not "subscribe" must indeed have a stony heart. The above extract should be framed and hung up in the school room.

Everybody skate to-night.

Farmers' Institute here, Dec. 3 and 4.

See notice of county meeting of Farmers' Alliance.

See that elegant violin in Davenports For sale cheap.

Commissioners' court begins next Monday, Dec. 1,

Eureka Opera House to-night for the first skate of the season.

Drs. Christopher & Thompson at the Swineford House to-day.

Court begins here again two weeks from next Monday, Dec. 15.

Mrs. George Shaffer went to Waterloo Tuesday to spend a few days.

Holidays are approaching. Select your turkey and your present.

Uncle Jake Hoover is able to be on the streets, though still feeble.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McIntyre and Mrs. Moss visited in Garrett Monday.

Miss Tomlinsen, of Butler, is here this week visiting her sister, Mrs. E. Sheets.

Mrs. E. Berry south of town has been sick several days, but we hope not seriously.

Miss Lola Springer, of Butler, came over yesterday to visit a few days with Reba Houser.

Mrs. Judge McClellan spent Sunday in Ft. Wayne with her daughter Mrs. Dr. Siver.

Mrs. Ed Baker entertained quite a number of lady freinds to a tea on Tuesday evening.

Miss Edna Davis entertained a number of guests at an old fashioned Thanksgiving party last evening.

D. D. Snyder of Danville, Ill., is here at present. He reports the family at home well and all prospering.

Quite a number of our people went to Ft. Wayne Monday. Among them Miss Lettie Meese, Mr. Rinehart, John Neal and Frank Eckhart.

George Weamer has, as an Irishman would say, "the frame up for a brick barn." At least that is about the way of it. It is ready for the roof.

The Auburn Reading Room will be formally opened to the public one week from next Monday evening, Dec. 8. A full announcement and program will be given next week.

Emerson Salyer and Loa Hurni were married Saturday evening, and will become citizens of Auburn. The COURIER not only sends congratulations but welcomes them as permanent citizens of our town.

The young people of the Catholic church, will give a musical and literary entertainment on Wednesday evening Dec. 3, at the residence of Mrs. Wm McIntyre. All are cordially invited. Mite 10 cents.

The new building for the Monitor Windmill Company has been so far completed that they are now occupying it. They have moved a considerable of their machinery and material already, and will we suppose soon have everything down there.

Our Spencerville friend John A. Provines was here Monday, being on his way home from a trip over into Ohio He is looking in better health than be did a year or so ago. In spite of his republican proclivities he can't help but laugh at the recent landslide.

There was quite a rush to see the trotting horse, or colt rather, that went north at 9 a. m. Monday. It was a two-year old, and the darky in charge proudly informed the audience that "He cost $10,000 just as he stands." It looked like a small specimen for that money.

Our young friend Joseph Stahl, helped us to a new subscriber this week. That is the way each could help a little, and our list would be substantially increased. We are pleased to note that our friends seem to appreciate the good work done by the COURIER during the campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. Sawvel moved to town Monday, and are now located in the new dwelling by the Baptist church, lately occupied by Rev. Mr. Smith. Mr. S. and wife will be a valuable addition to Auburn society and we trust our people will make them feel that they are heartily welcome.

Treasurer Sawvel took possession of the office last Friday, and is now fully installed and at work. For the present, D. Z. Hoffman will assist him. This is a wise choice for there is no more competent man than Mr. Hoffman. He has a complete knowledge of about all the work that any officer has to do.

D. H. Patty, a prominent nurseryman in Geneva, New York has written us enquiring where he can get a few good, reliable men to solicit orders. He wishes men to canvass and take orders for Trees, Shrubs and Vines for fall delivery and promises steady employment to good salesmen. If any of our readers desire a good position we would advise them to write to Mr. Patty for particulars. Address with reference, D. H. PATTY, Nurseryman, Geneva, New York.

Our life is made up of mistakes and the greatest one I ever made was in not using Loose's Extract of Red Clover long ago. I suffered two years, scarcely knowing a well day, with rheumatism and indigestion, had arrived at the conclusion that I was nothing but a trial to myself and friends. I commenced taking your fluid extract of Red Clover, in fact arrived at the point where I would take anything any one recommended. Saw your ad, and thought I would try a little newspaper recomendation on my own hook. Like all other remedies the first bottle seemed to do me good. But unlike all other remedies I discovered no bad effects from taking it. I am now on my thirteenth bottle and though perfectly well, go on the supposition that if a little does me so much good, will keep it up.

Very truly yours,
J. A. Eberling,
Latonia, Ill.

Miss Mamie Trentman has a young lady friend from Ft. Wayne visiting her.

The postoffice will be closed to-day from 10 to 4 o'clock. Please bear this mind and avoid all unnecessary trouble.

Mrs. Phil. Plum has her Sunday school class organized into a band of workers. They meet every Saturday to work and practice, as they expect to give an entertainment in the near future.

Bruce Miller's familiar face was visible in town this week. He is now a resident of Montpelier, where he has a comfortable home and is prospering. He was here in the interest of a commercial advertising house which is calculated to assist dealers and their patrons.

W. H. Dills went to St. Louis starting over the Wabash Sunday evening, to be present at the great railroad meeting that is to decide the location of the Wabash Extension. Mr. Dills writes back that he found A. J. Baxter and C. S. Stay of Butler, already on the grounds, as well as E. B. Garber and another gentleman from Ligonier, and Mr. Kann and another from Kendallville. All these parties are there to represent the interests of their several localities. Of course, we all know that but little can be done with a railroad company, but we feel that no step should be omitted, in our endeavor to secure the road. Then if we fail, no one can be blamed.

Call for County Orders.

Holders of county orders issued previous to November 1, 1889 will please present them for payment at the office of the county treasurer. Interest on said orders will cease November 29, 1890.

REUBEN SAWVEL
48-49 Treasurer of DeKalb Co

Card of Thanks.

We desire, through the columns of the COURIER, to return our heartfelt thanks to the many friends and neighbors, who so kindly rendered us greatly needed assistance during the long sickness, death and interment, of Mrs. Nancy E. Edwards, and may their reward be proportioned in accordance with the will of Him, who reigns on high.

W. R. EDWARDS AND FAMILY,
Auburn, Ind.

Almost a fire.

C. P. Houser who resides south of town came near losing his residence by fire Tuesday evening. All the family were away, but the little boy, Virgil, was going home from school, when he discovered smoke coming from the house, and giving the alarm to Mr. Abel who lives near, turned on and found the flames getting quite a start. They have a force pump and hose, and the man and boy worked them faithfully. In the meantime Mr. Houser, was on his way home, and seeing smoke at his house while at George Swander's, got the latter to hitch up in a hurry and both arrived in time to help check the flames. Nothing but the force pump and hose saved the building. The origin of the fire is not known, but supposed to have caught from the stove.

The Farmers' Institute.

Remember the farmers' institute that meets here in Auburn next week, Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Lockhart writes that he will have four able lecturers on practical subjects to assist him, at least, besides Prof. Latta. There will be Mr. Pierce of Peru, of whom we spoke week before last, Mr. H. S. Bartholomew of Middlebury, J. N. Babcock of Haw Patch and C. B. Harris of Goshen. It is also expected that Hon. Aaron Jones of South Bend will be with us. All these men are directly engaged in farming, and will give talks of value to all farmers and those interested in farming. We invite the active help of all our farmers and the citizens generally, to make this meeting a success. Remember the date, Dec. 3 and 4, at the Opera House in Auburn.

A Word with Old Settlers.

We republish by request of several pioneers, the obituary of Mrs. Rhodes, adding that of her husband, which was published in the "Times," a Ft. Wayne paper at the time of Mr Rhodes' death in 1852. The closing remarks, added to the article, were penned at the time by some personal friend of the deceased possibly by Mr. Dills, but as to that we cannot say to a certainty. We thought best to give this matter a special attention, as it follows very appropriately the recent articles on "Auburn and Vicinity" written for the COURIER. And now while on this subject, we wish to say once again, that in our opinion, the old settlers still living ought to put into writing such incidents, events and experience of the early days, as they feel ought to be preserved, and if they will send them to this office, we will publish them. One difficulty in the way seems to be the feeling on the part of the pioneers, that they cannot write articles in good shape for publication. But they need not think of that. If we have the facts, it will be easy to put them in form. We pen this item with the feeling that the years of old settlers are going higher and higher in the neighborhood of the "three score and ten," and that many things that should be known and preserved will not be, unless the matter is given early attention.

Girls and Thanksgiving.

The time has come for every girl to make Thanksgiving. Somebody sighs and wonders what they have to be thankful for; somebody is very positive that it is certain she has nothing to be thankful for, but there isn't a human being on the face of God's earth who can't find something for which to say, "I thank Thee, Oh God." One girl has that greatest of all blessings—good health; another the blessing of a bright, happy home; another, though she lies on an invalid's couch, the blessing of sunshine and the consideration of those who are less afflicted. One is glad because on her third finger is a bright ring that means she has become mistress of somebody's heart; and another is glad because worry and troubles are all swallowed up in that great pacifier—work. It will do more for you and me when our hearts are full of sorrow, and our eyes sore with unshed tears, to feel that the hands must be busy and the brain must be at work. If on Thanksgiving day you can do nothing else, then get down on your knees and thank God for work. It is the best gift that out of His plenty he can offer you.—RUTH ASHMORE, in Ladies' Home Journal.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE FROM THE INDIAN TROUBLE.

The Ghost Dancers Will Not Be Attacked Until They Commit Some Overt Act—Burned to Death—Whisky Wasted—Base Ball News—Killed by an Officer—Waylaid and Murdered.

THE GHOST DANCERS.

They Refuse to Go to the Agency for Their Rations.

Parties returning from Cheyenne Agency state that hardly an Indian was seen there though it is monthly ration day. This is a most suspicious circumstance to the authorities, as all Indians show up always on ration day. A man named Whitefield reports that the Indians pillaged his store on White River, near Rosebud, during his temporary absence. He came to Pierre for safety.

The Indians at Standing Rock Agency are beginning to conceive the idea which the less excited whites have tried to explain to them that their Messiah is a false expression concocted by Sitting Bull. Bull's failure to come to the agency for rations strengthens this belief

A ranchman who came into Pierre for safety, claims to have conversed with Indian Messiah followers recently and they told him that the white man had his Messiah and the Indian could have his. That the Indian did not stop the white man from worshipping his great spirit, and that if the white man tried to stop the Indian he would fight and kill the whites that came near. He only wanted to be left alone to dance and no whites must come about. And further that if the Great Father sent soldiers to stop them they would be served like Custer's soldiers were. The consensus of opinion is that affairs are at a critical stage among the Indians and that the least thing will precipitate an outbreak, but if no interference is offered to the fanatics they will soon subside and the excitement will pass off.

A Chicago special says: Strong reinforcements have been sent by reason of advices received from General Brooke, who is disposed to take a very serious view of the situation. Notwithstanding the sensational telegrams, the army will not take the offensive, but is under orders not to attack the braves until they do something more warlike than dancing. The instructions are to prevent trouble, if possible, by persuading the Indians to return to the agency.

Whisky Wasted.

Twelve thousand barrels of whisky were crushed and nearly all the contents lost at the Pleasure Ridge Park Distillery, near Louisville, Ky. The upper stories of the warehouse, too heavily loaded, caved in, and the four-story building came down in ruins. Logan Morris, an employe, was caught in the wreck, and fatally injured. The whisky, most of which was aged, is valued at $280,000. It is probable that the whisky barrels on the lower floor are not badly crushed, and that a great deal of it can be saved. The loss, however, will be over $100,000. Building valued at $5,000.

Stanley is Mad.

Mr. Stanley is so indignant at the persistent assaults upon him by the Barttelot and Jameson families that he has resolved to depart from the course which he had laid out, and to lay bare the dreadful facts connected with the fate of the rear guard, demonstrating at the same time the truth of the only charge which he has made, that the failure of the rear column was due to the indifference of its officers, and to their violation of his written instructions.

Two Married Men Elope With Two Young Ladies.

A telegram from Union, Monroe County, W. Va., says that John W. McCormick and M. Kirchner, both married men with families, eloped with two daughters of Robert Paine. The girls were Pauline, aged 16, who accompanied McCormick, and Sophia, aged 19, who went with Kirchner.

Miners' Strike.

The miners at Barren Fork Coal Mines, Ky., numbering 300, are on a strike. They demanded an increase of 10 cents per ton which the company refused to pay. Thereupon they threw down their tools and refused to work. The commissary has been locked against the miners and they have been refused anything to eat.

Killed by Hail.

Word has been received from Seven Lakes, in the Gallineas Mountains, Lincoln County, New Mexico, that four sheep herders were killed recently by a hail storm. Sixteen others and 1,600 head of sheep are missing. The messenger says it was the heaviest hail storm ever known in the mountains.

Burned to Death.

Joseph Lindis, living three miles east of Montpelier, Ind., lost a 3-year-old child by its clothes catching fire while its mother went into the yard for a load of wood. She was only gone a few moments, but she could not do anything after coming in the house.

Wilhelmina is Queen.

Queen Regent Emma has issued a proclamation declaring the Princess Wilhelmina Queen of the Netherlands.

Base Ball.

Allen W. Thurman has been elected President of the American Base Ball Association.

Banker Belmont Dead.

Mr. August Belmont, the banker, died at his home in New York City, aged 74 years.

He Gave Himself Up.

About a year ago Dennis Donivan, a drunken glass blower, killed William McMannes, at Findlay, Ohio, and fled. For a year he has been going from one city to another, always dodging the officers, until life became unbearable, and the other morning Donivan astonished the Sheriff by walking into his office and asking that he be locked up to await trial for the crime.

Killed by an Officer.

At Louisville, George Voght, a merchant policeman, shot and killed Tom Collins, a painter, while trying to place the latter under arrest.

Sensational Suicide of Two Lovers.

The bodies of A. L. Pierce and Miss Lou Woodward were found in a woods near Willa-Wanna, a small station on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, not far from Elmira, N. Y. They were locked in each others' arms and a bullet hole in the temple of each, a revolver lying near by showed that Pierce had probably first shot the girl then himself. He was about thirty-five years of age and married, while the Woodward girl was seventeen and single. A couple of months ago they eloped, and Pierce was arrested, tried, and acquitted on the charge of abduction. They then disappeared again, and nothing had since been heard of them until the bodies were found.

FULL OF FIGHT.

A Battle Almost Certain to Take Place at Pine Ridge.

A special from Pine Ridge Agency, S. D., dated the 24th inst., says: There will be a fight on this reservation or north of it sure unless the Indians weaken. Agent Royer has received the ultimatum of Little Wound, the high priest of the ghost dance and the chief who is leading the craze. The message came in to the agent by a teacher who has been running a school near Little Wound's camp on Medicine Root Creek. The Indian delivered it to the teacher verbally, but this is a copy of it after it was written out for translation to the department:

"I understand that the soldiers have come upon the reservation. What have we done? We have done nothing. Our dance is a religious one, and we are going to dance until Spring. If we find then that the new Christ does not appear, we will stop dancing, but in the meantime, troops or no troops, we are going to start our dance at this creek in the morning. I have also understood that I was not to be regarded as a chief any longer. All that I have to say to that is that neither you nor the white people made me chief, and you can't throw me away as you please. But let me tell you, Dr. Royer, that the Indians made me chief, and that by them I will be recognized as long as I live.

"I have also been told that you intended to stop our rations and annuities. Well, for my part, I don't care. The little rations that we get do not amount to anything; but, Dr. Royer, if such is the case, please send me word, so that I and my people will be saved the trouble of going to the agency. We do not intend to stop dancing."

The receipt of this letter produced something of a sensation about the agency and among the people who heard it. It was plain and part confirmation of the reports of scouts and friendly Indians that the ghost-dancers are ready and willing to fight.

It is now certain that all the dancers on the Wounded Knee Creek have moved over and joined the band of dancers on White Clay Creek about eighteen miles north of the agency. The others are concentrating in the White River neighborhood further north and at Medicine Root Creek.

About 600 friendly Indians have come in during the day. They are from all the various districts on the reservation, and undoubtedly there are some ghost dancers among them, while whole troops could be seen with but one buck in the party. Some of them had as many as eight or nine squaws with separate lodges and sets of children.

MAKING A NEW SCALP.

Novel Surgical Experiment Begun by Detroit Physicians.

At Detroit, Matilda Orsech, aged 10, was completely scalped by having her hair caught in the shafting of a grain elevator. It was decided to graft skin from the body of the little girl's sister, Emma, who heroically consented to the operation, which was performed Thursday. The child's head before the operation presented exactly the same appearance from the eyebrows over to the nap of the neck as that of a skeleton. The skull was entirely bare, except in places where small portions of the muscles and tissues adhered. A piece of skin eight inches long by five and a half wide, and of an oval shape, was cut from the right side of Emma's body, leaving the upper end attached near the breast. When this flap of cuticle was prepared the children were laid together on a table, and the flap was firmly fastened and stitched to the right side of the injured child's head. Then the children were bandaged together in such a way as to prevent them breaking their Siamese bond. If this preliminary operation is successful, the remaining portion of the head will be treated by a similar operation.

PETTIT'S FATE.

The Wife-Murderer Sent to Prison for Life—Close of the Remarkable Trial.

The trial of W. F. Pettit, at Crawfordsville, Ind., charged with poisoning his wife, was brought to a conclusion, and after the Judge had read his charge the case was given to the jury. The trial has been in progress for almost six weeks, and great interest has been manifested in the State, on account of the prominence of the defendant, who is an ex-Methodist minister. There was a great difference of opinion as to what the verdict would be. During the last hours of the trial the court-room was jammed so that fears were expressed as to the safety of the building. College classes were excused so that the students might hear the pleading, and business has been interfered with, the trial being the all-absorbing topic of conversation. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, sentencing him to imprisonment for life.

Society Shocked.

A special from Fostoria, Ohio, says: Society was shocked in a horrible manner, by the arrest of Dr. S. A. Kiser, one of the most prominent dentists in this city on the charge of criminal assault, preferred by Mrs. E. Newman, a married lady of most excellent reputation. The charge alleges that while performing an operation on her tooth, she was rendered partially unconscious by some drug placed in her tooth, and while in that condition he forcibly outraged her. The doctor, on the other hand, alleges that the charges are untrue and made for the purpose of blackmailing him. He waved an examination before the Mayor and was placed under bonds of $1,500 to appear before the Common Pleas Court.

Gospel Cars.

The Baptists are to have a rolling tabernacle, a church on wheels, which is to travel all over the Northwest, carrying two missionairies. The chapel car is sixty feet long and ten feet wide. At one end a space of about eighteen feet long will be fitted up for living purposes. The remainder of the car will be fitted and furnished as a chapel. This car will be run on the Northern Pacific and Wisconsin Central railroads, and doubtless upon other roads also. The original suggestion belongs to Rev. Wayland Hoyt, of Minneapolis. The contract for the construction has been given to the Barney & Smith Manufacturing Company of Dayton, O. The American publication society has accepted the car and will pay the expenses of the missionaries.

Christopher Columbus' Log Book.

London, Special: Another log book has been found. The Academy, just published, makes the astounding announcement that the log book kept by Christopher Columbus has been discovered. The hitherto recorded tradition is that it was lost during the prevalence of a violent storm, which occurred during the return course of his voyage from America, and this tradition is seemingly to follow the course of all others, as far as the attempt to upset it goes, for it is alleged that it was recently discovered by a Welsh fisherman while engaged in his occupation of trawling near Tenby.

Worked the Old Racket.

The safe of the Twenty-sixth Ward Bank, at Brooklyn, was robbed of a package containing $5,000 in small notes. The robbery is supposed to have been done by two men, one of whom entered the bank and engaged the cashier in conversation while another drove up to the bank in a wagon and sent for the clerk, pretending to wish to deposit some money.

Murder Will Out.

Wilson W. Agar, once a millionaire, but later reduced to poverty, died at Grover's hotel, Elmira, N. Y., six weeks ago. On his death-bed he confessed that twenty years ago he murdered a gambler named Charles Sellwin, of Pittsburgh. He exhibited a blood-stained dagger, with which the deed was done, and newspaper clippings bearing on the case. All these are now in possession of Edwin Comstock, proprietor of the hotel.

A Preacher Behind the Bars.

Rev. Peter Roberts, of Scranton, Pa., who was convicted by a jury for trifling with the affections of Miss Annie Husaboe is now behind the bars at Lackawana Prison. He was tried for breach of promise, and the jury awarded Miss Husaboe $3,000 damages. The clergyman said he would rather go to jail than pay the amount. He declares he is innocent.

A Prominent Politician Dead.

Ex-Postmaster Thomas Jones, jr., of Cleveland, died of injuries received by falling in the basement of an old building. He was a brother to United States Senator Jones, of Nevada, and had for many years been prominent in local politics. The accident that caused his death was due to darkness.

Labouchere's Blast.

Mr. Labouchere is out with an opinion of the present muddled condition of the Irish party with regard to its leadership. He is the most important English member of parliament who has yet spoken directly on this subject and his voice carries the weight of a man who is one of the ablest parliamentarians of the present age.

Murdered by the Mafia.

A mysterious murder occurred in the Italian district known as "Little Italy," New York, and the victim is claimed to have been removed by order of the local "Mafia." Diego Folisano was found dead, shot through the heart, downward from the throat. The police worked all day but have found no clue to the murderer.

Arrested for Smuggling.

J. Fanda, a prominent and wealthy banker of Chishuaua, Mexico, was arrested in Paso del Norte on the charge of smuggling. The customs offices in examining Fanda's baggage, discovered a false bottom in one of his trunks. On being torn open the bottom was found to be filled with costly silks.

Hurled to Death.

The boiler, at the Marblehead, Mass., pumping station, where a reservoir is being built, exploded, killing John Daun, the engineer, who was hurled a distance of 171 feet. One of the injured, C. H. Robison, Superintendent of the works, is hurt about the head, back, and legs and will probably die.

Verdict for $50,000.

In the case of Mary E. Johnson, of Coalbluffs, Ind., against the Chicago & Indiana Coal Railway, for damages in the sum of $50,000, the jury returned a verdict allowing the plaintiff the full amount of her claim. A motion for a new trial was filed by the defense.

Dangerous Run of Typhoid Fever.

Thirteen deaths have occurred in North Liberty, St. Joseph County, Indiana, during the past week caused by typhoid fever. It is feared the disease will become epidemic. The village schools have been closed.

Crushed to Death.

Hugh Moran and Peter Hanlon, laborers, were crushed to death under the stone wall of St. Mark's Church, corner of Franklin avenue and Liberty street, Cleveland. The building was a new one nearing completion, and the whole front end fell in.

A Missing Wealthy Widow.

Mrs Nellie Trombley, of 85 Dearborn avenue, Chicago, has been missing for some time. Mrs. Trombley is a widow of unquestionablecharacter, 28 years old and wealthy.

His Last Run.

William B. Douglass, one of the oldest conductors on the Pennsylvania Railroad, died suddenly with paralysis, at his home in Fort Wayne.

Will Remain Loyal to Parnell.

At a private meeting of the Irish members of Parliament in Dublin it was unanimously resolved to remain loyal to Parnell.

Congressman Hitt Ill.

A telegram from Mount Morris, Ill., announces the serious illness of Congressman R. R. Hitt, of the Sixth District.

Flour Mills Burned.

The large flour mills elevator of Wm. Peters, at Columbiaville, Mich., were burned. Loss, $5,000.

Sudden Death.

Capt. S. L. Lewis, a well-known ex-Union soldier, of Fort Wayne, died suddenly of appoplexy.

Building Breaks.

By the collapse of a building at Jersey City, N. J., one person was killed and twelve injured.

Repulsed the Mob.

A mob tried to lynch a murderer, at Huntingdon, Pa., but was repulsed by the Sheriff.

Gould's Gobble.

The Goulds have regained control of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

—Rev. H. W. Childs, of Cincinnati, O., has declined the call to the First Baptist church of Aurora, this State.

—Mrs. John W. Copner, a respected widow of Covington, aged about fifty years, was found in her bedroom, her head lying in a pool of blood on the floor, and her hand resting on the window sill. The cause of death was the rupture of a large blood vessel in the neck. Mrs. Copner has expected this for some time, having told her neighbors that they need not be surprised to find her dead at any time.

—About one year ago Freeman Shull, a farmer living near Fortville, became insane and was sent to the asylum, where he was kept for a few months and released as cured. The other evening he suddenly became wild and assaulted some of his neighbors, injuring them severely. His family objected to having him recommitted to the asylum and the neighborhood is terrorized, as Shull is a man of powerful physique.

—On Wednesday of the Boone county fair, last August, on account of a heavy rain, the agricultural society postponed the races set for that day until the following Saturday. The owners of the high-steppers scheduled to go went, ignoring the postponement. The fair company refused to pay the stake money to the winner, W. A. Jones, of Rushville. He brought suit to recover, and the court has just given him judgment.

—A bright and prosperous future for Tipton seems to be near at hand. Within the last few weeks different parties, interested largely in manufacturing, have been there negotiating with Tipton people with a view to locating. The Tipton Land and Improvement Company, with a capital stock of $100,000, recently organized, is at the head of the improvement. It is now probable that a wire nail and glass factory will locate there in a short time.

—Muncie has a midget baby that is claimed to be unequaled in all Hoosierdom. It is the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Trego, born nearly seven weeks ago, when it weighed a little short of three pounds. To-day the little girl weighs but five pounds and five ounces, and cries continually, when not asleep, for nourishment. Its head is the size of a tea-cup, while its feet measure but two and one-half inches in length, and are clad in a doll's shoes.

—A couple of reckless hunters, while shooting birds on the farm of A Truex, four miles west of Columbus, shot toward Mr. Truex's residence, a large part of the load hitting his little 8-year-old daughter. It was at first thought she was fatally injured, but she will recover. Daniel Lawless, a neighbor, on the same day had a young cow killed by hunters. This reckless shooting has caused great excitement in that neighborhood, and the farmers will prosecute any one who attempts to hunt there.

—The other night, between 11 and 12 o'clock, three men went to the residence of George Lanfair, living near Martinsville, and compelled him to get out of bed, leave the house and not return under penalty of death. The intruders then proceeded to assault his wife, a delicate woman. Two of the party were arrested and proved to be William Chamberlain, of Indianapolis, and Charles Williams, of Martinsville. The third man has not been apprehended. Considerable excitement prevails.

—William Flemming, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Marion, received $500 pension money. He went to Muncie with the sole purpose of seeing the sights and having a good time. When he finished up his spree it was because he had run short of means, and he now alleges that he was in company with some unknown men, who took him to a secluded room, where he was robbed by gambling. Flemming was in Company C, Eighth Indiana, and has a sister in New Castle, where he has gone, much wiser and worse off for the money Uncle Sam paid him.

—Frank Manning, Joe Burton and Will Richmond were arrested at Fort Wayne on a charge of burglary. They had forced an entrance into the wholesale millinery store of Adams & Armstrong, but only secured a small amount of cash. Marshal Parks, of Peru, accompanied by two other citizens of that place, went to Fort Wayne, and they identified the men under arrest as a trio of dangerous burglars who are wanted at Peru for robbing the general store of Shirk & Miller of goods valued at $1,200. The trio were bound over to the grand jury.

—Patents have been issued to Indiana inventors as follows: S. B. Caster, Noblesville, apparatus for utilizing natural gas for raising water; Noah M. Chero, Southport, plant setting machine; Jno. F. Benn, assignor of one-fourth to E. Bretney, Indianapolis, apparatus for blowing sand from railway track rails; Emit Dietz, Indianapolis, box-trimming machine; Samuel H. Gregg, Crawfordsville, wire fence, wire post and wire fences; Willis C. Howe, Evansville, curtain fixture; Lewis P. Jackson, Hartford City, paper-trimming knife; Wm. H. Johnson and T. L. NO COAST DEFENSES.

UNCLE SAM IN CRYING NEED IN THIS DIRECTION.

Secretary Proctor Sets Forth His Views in His Annual Report—Number of Desertions from the Army During the Past Year—Promotions and Expenditures.

[Washington dispatch.]

The annual report of the Secretary of War is made public. It is, in substance, as follows:

No great civilized nation to-day has more just cause than ours to look well to the condition of its coast defenses, and none, since the civil war, has so wholly neglected them. Modern inventions in the use of electricity, high explosives, and in rifled mortars have resulted strongly in favor of the comparative resisting strength of land fortifications as against a naval force. As the sole object of harbor fortifications is defense, its construction should at least keep pace with, if not precede, every other preparation; for it has been well said that "while we may afford to be deficient in means of offense, we cannot afford to be defenseless." Under the fortification act of last session positions for forty-eight mortars in three groups of sixteen each and for three of the new long-range guns will be prepared in New York harbor; for one group of mortars and one gun in Boston harbor; and for one group of mortars and two guns in San Francisco. As this is a matter in which makeshifts from year to year are both expensive and destructive of the object to be attained, I trust that a fixed policy may be adopted in the line of a reasonable yearly appropriation for the completion of the work on which the nation is but just entering. With such a policy manufacturers could safely put in the necessary plants and be able to furnish material at a cheaper rate. With an annual appropriation of eight or ten millions—only a little more than that of the present year—the construction and emplacement of guns and mortars, works of torpedo defense for the whole coast can be carried on, and in ten years our principal harbors and cities rendered reasonably secure.

In the matter of armament a fair and promising beginning has been made. The gun factory at Watervliet Arsenal has already turned out completed steel guns of 3.2, 3.6, 8 and 10 inches caliber, which have been entirely satisfactory so far as their tests have proceeded. The 3.2-inch breech-loading field-gun meets with general approval in service, and the firing tests of the 8 and 10 inch type guns manufactured at Watervliet have given excellent results, both as regards accuracy and range, and have satisfactorily demonstrated the capability of the gun factory to turn out modern high-power rifled steel guns equal to the very best. Under the present contract about thirteen twelve-inch cast-iron mortars hooped with steel can be furnished per annum, and as there are other plants in the country besides that of the present contractors which are capable of turning out these mortars it is only necessary that sufficient sums be appropriated for the manufacture of about fifty mortars a year, and the production of mortars will keep pace with that of guns and the construction of emplacements. No fear need be entertained that the plant for this work will not be in existence when needed. The manufacture of the forgings for eight-inch, ten-inch, and twelve-inch breech-loading guns by the Bethlehem Iron Works, under the appropriation of $1,500,000 made in the act of Sept. 22, 1888, is proceeding satisfactorily, and it is expected the contract will be completed by November, 1893. The sum appropriated will procure about sixty-one guns of the calibers mentioned. In short, the art of modern gunmaking is now well inaugurated in this country.

The number of desertions from the army for the twelve months ending Sept. 30 was 2,096, as against 2,751 for the same period last year, a decrease of 24 per cent. The result is due to such improvements in the service as could be accomplished under existing legislation. Although desertions are already greatly reduced, so long as they continue in any considerable numbers they must have a bad effect upon the morale of the army and entail a large and needless expense. The practical solution of this somewhat vexed question assumes three phases: First, how to make the service more desirable; second, how to remove the artificial restraints which, by binding a man inflexibly to a long service which has become distasteful to him, naturally drives him to desperate means; third, how to make the punishment for the crime of desertion so certain that if more worthy motives fail men may be warned by its fear. As to the second and third there is now legislation enough, at least with our present experience. With respect to the first there is, I think, need of more.

My experience so far confirms an observation which I made one year ago that "the pith of the whole question is to make the service worth seeking, and then enough good men will seek it and be glad to stay in it." The pay of the Second Lieutenant is $116.67 per month, that of a First Sergeant only $22, and unfortunately this difference in pay largely regulates the actual distance between their relative positions. It would be a step in the right direction to increase somewhat the pay of the non-commissioned officers, that every man who enters the service may find in it the possibility of a modest future. With a view to the same end I would recommend a change in the law relative to the selection of enlisted men for appointment to the grade of Second Lieutenant. Practically, it is now possible for company commanders to give these valuable appointments to young men who have enlisted for that sole purpose. In order to insure exact justice to all, and give full effect to the beneficent purpose of Congress, the initiatory step should be with the men themselves. Any enlisted man of two years' service, who is a citizen of the United States, should, under certain fixed rules, be permitted to compete for a commission.

By the act of Oct. 1, 1890, promotions below the rank of a general officer are hereafter to be made lineally throughout each arm of the service. That measure provides for a system of examinations for all officers of the army below the rank of Major, and makes their right to promotion conditional on them. The new law makes no change in the rule of promotion by seniority, and the examinations are in no sense competitive, but they do require an officer to show affirmatively his fitness for the advancement to which, if qualified, the law entitles him. It is believed that its tendency must be to increase the zeal and industry of young officers.

The number of officers now awaiting retirement is about sixty. These men are performing no service whatever, but receive full pay, while junior officers doing their duties for them are unjustly deprived of both the pay and the rank which the law intends to attach to the positions they are filling. The incongruity of the present law is illustrated by the fact that where an officer is disabled in the line of duty, instead of opening the way for the promotion of juniors it may and does often actually retard it. An officer put upon the limited retired list remains there so long as he lives, even if he survives the age of 64 by many years, thereby preventing the retirement of another officer and the consequent promotion of juniors. If he had been retired for age in regular course this could not occur. The limit now established is proper enough if the law were so amended that this limit could be construed according to the reasonable intent of its purpose. An amendment providing for the transfer of officers from the limited to the unlimited list when they reach the age of 64 would still permit only 400 retirements other than those who could be retired for forty years' service or by virtue of the 64 years provision.

The expenditures of appropriations under the direction of the Secretary of War for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1890, were as follows:

Salaries and contingent expenses	$1,940,700
Military establishment, support of the Army and Military Academy	23,961,309
Public works, including river and harbor improvements	15,382,785
Miscellaneous objects	6,072,966
Total	$47,357,765

The appropriations for the present fiscal year, June 30, 1891, are as follows:

Salaries and contingent expenses	$2,137,782
Military establishment, support of the Army and Military Academy	24,513,596
Public work, including river and harbor improvements	30,874,185
Miscellaneous objects	2,944,131
Total	$63,799,695

The estimates of this department for the next fiscal year, ending June 30, 1892, are as follows:

Salaries and contingent expenses	$2,074,430
Military establishment support of the Army and Military Academy	26,160,901
Public works	10,709,288
Miscellaneous objects	4,805,236
Total	$43,749,996

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of

Prickly Ash Bitters!

a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, for the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Remember the name—PRICKLY ASH BITTERS. Ask your druggist for it.

TO-DAY.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON B. MORANGE.

The flowers by the lone wayside
  Look smiling to the sun above;
They live their lives, are satisfied,
  Nor question God's pervading love.

The joy of their being lies
  In living, in the present hour;
They ask no bounty from the skies
  But sunshine, air and gentle shower.

The storms obey a secret will,
  And move majestic on their course;
They have a purpose to fulfill,
  Why pause to cavil at its source?

The new-blown rose is queen to-day;
  The breeze is in its dancing mood;
That both must shortly pass away
  Makes neither on the morrow brood.

To-day, to-day, is Nature's song;
  To-day her gifts are heaven-sent;
Of all her pliant, happy throng,
  Man sounds the note of discontent.

He overlooks the fruitage rare;
  The glory of the harvest field;
He takes a sad and meagre share
  Of all the gladsome earth can yield.

He wastes maturity in strife,
  In impotent and vague unrest;
Forgets that at the feast of life
  He is the chief invited guest.

To-day, to-day, is Nature's song;
  Build well to-day, the past forget;
Live for to-day, its joys prolong;
  To-morrow is a dream as yet.

Dr. Elfenstein's Mission

A Remarkable Romance.

BY EMILY THORNTON.

CHAPTER I.

A STRANGE SUMMONS.

In his unusually pleasant office on Broadway sat Lemuel Gray, a middle-aged man and succesful lawyer, in deep thought.

In his hand he held a letter, which, after a few moments, he again carefully read.

As it refers to people and events to be mentioned often in the remarkable story about to be related, we give the contents entire:

YONKERS, April 15, 1886.

Mr. Lemuel Gray:

DEAR SIR—It is with great difficulty that I pen the following, being very ill, but as the object I have in view by thus addressing you, is of great importance, I will write in as few words as possible.

You are aware, being my confidential adviser, that I expected to sail for Europe shortly, in order to attempt to unravel the mystery surrounding the death of Sir Arthur Glendenning, in whose fate I am so deeply interested.

I wished to vist, in some disguise, the town where Glendenning Hall is situated, to become acquainted with the present baronet and Lady Constance, his wife, with the nephew and niece residing with them, and to learn something, if possible, about the only sister who married without the consent of her family, and who, therefore, was disowned by her relatives, as well as a young girl whom it was said they had adopted.

I desired, also, to make inquiries in regard to the private character of Antoine Duval, the valet of the present Sir Reginald Glendenning, and to study everything that might bear upon the mystery of the case.

I regret to say that my physician declares it impossible for me to undertake, with safety, this journey.

What do you think of my sending thither a substitute? I have in mind a young physician, Dr. Earle Elfenstein, who resides in your city. I cannot tell you his address, as he moved to a new residence last May.

I write to ask you to hunt him up for me. Please make a few inquiries as to his circumstances, disposition, and above all, whether he is an energetic and conscientious man.

Inform me in regard to these matters at an early date. If favorable, and the plan meets your approval, set a time when you can meet him at my residence and explain to him the peculiar mission I wish him to undertake in my behalf. Your presence will be absolutely necessary, as the disease with which I am afflicted forbids my entering into the long explanations that must be given in order to instruct him in the performance of the work, should he agree to undertake it.

Please attend to this at once and oblige, yours, etc., LEON RAPPELYE.

To this, a few hours later, the following reply was penned:

NEW YORK, April 16, 1886.

Mr. Leon Rappelye:

DEAR SIR—Upon the receipt of yours of the 15th, I examined the "City Directory" without delay. I find Dr. Elfenstein's address to be 47 Exton street.

Going at once to the neighborhood, I learned from a reliable source that the young man has a very small practice, therefore, finds it difficult to support his widowed mother and himself in comfort.

This state of his finances is not due to lack of energy, for he is indefatigable in his efforts to benefit his patients, but those who apply to him for advice are, unfortunately, the very poor in the region of his home.

He is an exceedingly conscientious and good man, and, from all I can learn, just the one to undertake the important business which you propose, and which I fully approve.

I will meet him at your residence on the the evening of the 18th. It would be well to send him a telegram to that effect as soon as you receive this. Yours sincerely,

LEMUEL GRAY.

It was a dull and dreary picture that the eyes of Dr. Earle Elfenstein rested upon, as he drew back the lace curtains that draped the parlor window of his cosy home.

His practice was not large, and far from lucrative. Times were unusually hard, and his bills for services rendered poorly paid, so that he had, indeed, a hard struggle to live.

This afternoon he was peculiarly cast down, for his mother (who, since his father's death four years before, had been obliged to look to him for support) had reminded him that the month's rent for the flat in which they resided would be due in three days, and he knew he had not one quarter of the amount required, nor much faith in his ability to collect one of the many bills due.

It is no wonder, then, that a sigh escaped him, as he turned to greet the sweet-looking lady about fifty years of age, who entered the room, holding an envelope in her hand.

"Here is a telegram for you, Earle. What can it be?"

"I cannot say, as I expected none," he replied, opening the missive. "This is singular. I am requested to leave the city by the 8 p. m. train for Yonkers, to see a gentleman, who is an invalid, on a matter of business. His name is Leon Rappelye, a strange name to me."

"What shall you do about it?" asked the mother, anxiously.

"I shall go, of course. The message says, 'you will be met at the station.' I have just about time to answer a call and meet the train."

"What time shall you return?"

"It will be late, I know; perhaps not until morning, but if possible I will return to-night. Good-by, little mother. Who knows but this will bring better things for us."

Later, closely protected by a comfortable ulster from the heavy rain that was falling, with a train of serious thoughts in his mind, occasioned by his poverty, Dr. Elfenstein wended his way to the Grand Central Depot, and entered the cars that would bear him to his destination.

On dashed the train through the darkness. On, on, and still the young physician brooded over his troubles, with eyes fixed on the blackness without.

Thus he sat, lost in thought, until the whistle blew for the approaching station, and the brakeman, opening the door, called, in a loud voice:

"Yonkers, Yonkers!"

CHAPTER II.

MR. LEON RAPPELYE.

The rain was falling in torrents as the train came thundering to the station, and upon stopping, the usual crowd hurried out, and passing through the waiting-room to the street beyond, were soon lost in the gloom.

One, however, lingered at the door, looking apparently for some expected person or conveyance.

He was, as could easily be seen, a stranger in the place.

He had scarcely a moment to wait, however, when a private coachman approached, whip in hand, and accosted him.

"I have been sent to meet a gentleman from New York named Elfenstein. Are you the one?"

"I am."

"Then please follow me."

The young man was soon seated in a handsome closed carriage, while the driver also mounted to his box, and they immediately started off at a papid pace.

Street after street was traversed, until finally they turned into the extensive grounds of an elegant residence.

The house before which they stopped was large and imposing in appearance, but still had a dark and gloomy aspect. No light was visible at any of the windows.

As the young man stepped across the piazza, the large doors were instantly opened by a colored waiter, who motioned him to enter and proceeded to assist in removing his overcoat and wet overshoes.

"How is Mr. Rappelye to-night?" asked the visitor.

"'Bout as usual, massa. 'Pears like he must die, he is always so badly off for breff."

"Can I see him?"

"Yes, sah, just as soon as you has something to eat. Some dinner is waiting, and de nuss says you am to eat it immejertly, den come up to his room. I will show you, derfore, to de dining-room fust."

"Very well," replied the stranger, wearily; "I am ready."

Crossing the marble floor of the long hall, he was ushered into a room elegantly appointed. The bright grate fire cast a cheerful glow around, while the velvet carpet scarcely gave back a footfall.

The table was laid for one, and very soon a sumptuous dinner was served, of which he alone partook.

Leaving the stranger to enjoy his solitary meal, we will precede him to the story above, and to the presence of the invalid, whose urgent telegraphic dispatch had brought him to the place.

The second story back room was large and commodious, opening into a room beyond, where every luxury abounded, for the comfort of the master.

Yet in the midst of all this splendor, sickness had stalked, ever reaching forth his poisoned tongue to blight and wither the owner of it all.

"Has he come?"

These words issued from the pale lips of the sufferer, who was half sitting, half reclining upon the bed.

"Has Dr. Elfenstein come? I thought I heard the carriage."

"You did, and he is here," returned the nurse and housekeeper. "I thought it best to have him take dinner before you saw him. I presume you have much to say and would prefer not to be interrupted. He will be with you in a few moments now."

The invalid sighed. Then, seeing him greatly pressed for breath, "You seem to suffer so much, had you not better postpone seeing him until morning?" said the nurse.

"Oh, no. I may be worse then. Asthma is so hard to conquer. I will not defer my business. Has my lawyer come?"

"Not yet."

"He should be here. The cuckoo clock has sounded half-past eight some time since."

"Yes, it is a quarter to nine now. But the door-bell rings. I think that is he."

"Set that stand with writing materials close by my bed, then go down and show both gentlemen to this room; after which you can leave us to ourselves until you hear me ring."

Making herself known, the nurse introduced Earle to Mr. Gray, then led the way to the sick man's presence.

"Here is Mr. Gray, Mr. Rappelye, and this is your expected friend, Dr. Elfenstein."

Reaching forth a thin, white hand, the old man smiled feebly, and between struggling breaths managed to say:

"I am very glad to see you."

Taking the emaciated hand in both his, Earle Elfenstein pressed it tenderly, and in a low tone, full of feeling, responded:

"I am glad I could come to you, but sorry, very sorry, to see you so ill."

"You must wonder why I summoned you, an entire stranger, to my side in this unceremonious way, but I have important business to transact. Talking is such an exertion, my lawyer, Mr. Gray, must explain for me my wishes, and why I sent for you."

These words were uttered at intervals, for his short breathing prevented long sentences, and gently releasing his hand Elfenstein took the seat close beside the bed, while Mr. Gray seated himself in a business-like way beside the table.

CHAPTER III.

MR RAPPELYE'S PROPOSAL.

"Dr. Elfenstein," said Mr. Gray, "my client and friend, Mr. Leon Rappelye, is, as you see, extremely ill. His sufferings are so great that he has deputized me to explain his motive in sending so unceremoniously for you to visit him in his home. Our friend is a lonely man, having no relatives living to whom he wishes to leave his large fortune. He has dictated his last will and testament, and he desires to sign it before he may be unable to do so; it was necessary for him to see you personally previous to placing his name to the document in which, I may add, you are deeply interested."

Earle Elfenstein started as he heard these words, and looked from the lawyer to the invalid beside him.

"You are surprised, naturally," again resumed Mr. Gray, "and probably wonder what Mr. Rappelye knows of you. I will explain this at once. Your father was George Elfenstein, a well-known banker; in years gone by he did Mr. Rappelye a never-to-be-forgotten service. His arrival in this country was followed by a long and dangerous illness, when he lay alone among strangers, almost neglected, and he attended to his wants like a brother until he was entirely convalescent.

"They met often afterward, and then lost sight of each other. Years of silence passed, when accidentally he learned about three months since that his benefactor was dead, and his only son was a struggling physician in New York, through an intimate friend, who often mentioned his fondness for this talented young man, and in this way Mr. Rappelye became deeply interested in you. He has heard of your fearless, conscientious manner of meeting your engagements, and this was a characteristic he particularly wished to find in some young friend. When, therefore, his health entirely failed, so that he could no longer look after his private business, he determined to send for you, and perhaps place his affairs in your hands."

The lawyer paused, and Earle answered:

"Anything that I can do within the range of honor and integrity, I shall be pleased to undertake."

"We felt so. The case then is this: but, of course, you will recognize the fact that the history of our friend's life, which I shall be obliged to unfold to you, is told in strict confidence. Will you promise to regard that confidence as a sacred trust, never to be told to another, until all that is now mysterious has been swept away?"

"I will."

"Then I will proceed. Our friend was the youngest son of Sir Geoffrey Glendenning, residing in a large town near Liverpool. This gentleman had one daughter, who married against his wishes, and three sons—Arthur, who would in case of his death succeed to the title; Reginald, two years younger; and Fitzroy, the gentleman you see before you, whose severe domestic misfortunes have been so great that for the last twenty-five years he has been obliged to live in this country, under the assumed name of Rappelye. The cause of this retirement he has kept, and still wishes to keep, a profound secret.

"A short time after the death of his parents, for they expired within a few months of each other, and after his brother Arthur had come into possession of his title, little turmoils arose between the brothers, and seemed to embitter them exceedingly.

"Reginald, the second son, had an ugly, morose disposition, that was peculiarly exasperating, and whenever the opportunity occurred he delighted in getting Fitzroy into disgrace with the young baronet.

"These young men had a very pretty cousin, in whose society they each took extreme pleasure. Her name was Constance Leonore Glendenning. It was soon discovered that the affections of the young girl were centered upon Sir Arthur, and this knowledge was immediately followed by a betrothal.

"Reginald, being somewhat disappointed that he could not win the prize, undertook to report several little interviews of a purely innocent and accidental nature that Fitzroy had had with this lady to his brother, casting a very sinister light upon them, and assuring Arthur that Fitzroy was endeavoring, to supplant him in her favor.

"This artful story infuriated the young nobleman, and caused a very bitter interview. Fitzroy indignantly denied every thought of interference, declaring the truth, that his love for Constance was merely cousinly, and urging that he had been slandered.

"This Sir Arthur refused to believe, and they parted in anger, Fitzroy exclaiming, in a moment of unguarded passion, as he left him:

"'Very well, think so if it suits you; but, mark me, you shall yet repent your unjust accusations, and, as I live, shall never repeat this insult.'

"Closing the door as he spoke, he stepped into the hall, and stood face to face with Antoine Duval, the valet of his brother Reginald, and, from the conscious look he gave him, Fitzroy knew, and after events made him certain, that he had either purposely listened or accidentally heard the unfortunate remark.

"The brothers did not meet again that day, but early the next Fitzroy was awakened by an unusual tumult.

"Rising, he dressed rapidly, and proceeded to investigate the cause of the disturbance

"To his horror he was told that Sir Arthur had disappeared during the night. His bed had been occupied as usual, but he had probably been murdered, or very badly wounded, as, while no traces of his body could be found, evidences of a contest were on every side.

"Blood was upon the bed and floor, the window-seat was covered with it, as though he had been dragged through it, and then by means of a rope let down to the ground below.

"The rope still clung to the balcony.

"From the grass to an ornamental lake not far distant were irregular patches of the same human gore.

"Beyond that, nothing was ever discovered!

"That lake was thoroughly dragged for the body; the grave by the side of it was searched, not a spot being left in which a corpse could be buried—to no effect.

"The body of the murdered Sir Arthur Glendenning was never found.

"But, while stupefied with grief over his brother's loss, our poor friend was made aware that the finger of suspicion pointed to him with singularly fatal evidences of guilt.

"A dagger with his name engraved upon the handle was found by the bedside, on the floor, its blade still wet with blood.

"Beneath the window-seat, caught upon a nail, was a fragment of cloth which, upon search being made, fitted exactly into a rent in a dressing-gown of his, that was found hanging in his own closet.

"Horrible to relate, some of his brother's blood still clung to the gown!

Scooped by Death.

In a leading Western city there are two rival papers, one published in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Several years ago the city referred to celebrate in grand old style the inauguration of a new packet line service on the great river that flowed at its feet. The coming of the first of the floating palaces from the shipyard at which it was built was a matter of interest to the people of the city, and the two rival papers struggled to first give the best news of the steamboats.

Two bright young reporters were sent to the town at which the boats were being built to accompany the first steamer. The afternoon newspaper had the best account of the day's happenings on the voyage, but the morning paper had the advantage on evening and night news. Jim Hammond, who came from somewhere down East, represented the afternoon paper, and Will Eagan a Westerner, covered the morning field.

One pretty afternoon, just before a landing at which Hammond expected to file his last special for the day was made, there was a hissing sound, a great report, and the handsome new steamer appeared to break in two and settle in the water. Hammond was on the swimming stage when the boiler burst, and the falling jackstaff struck him on the head. Poor fellow! He never spoke after that, and so Eagan tenderly drew his body into the yawl that put off from the sinking boat; a tear stole out of his eye and ran down his cheek. Hammond was the only one killed.

Thirty minutes after the explosion the distant afternoon paper went to press, its telegraph editor wondering if Hammond could not get a landing.

The morning paper the next day told how the explosion occurred and how the Pioneer went down. The afternoon paper, strangely enough, reprinted the news under a "scare" head, the top line of which was: "Scooped by Death!"—Chicago Press Bureau.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

[From the Ram's Horn.]

Keep yourself pure, and God will keep you safe.

God never gave any man the right to hate his brother.

The more money a man has the more he needs religion.

It is better to fail in trying to do good than never to try.

The more religion people have the less they need money.

Wrong doing people are the most exacting of all people.

A man who can catch a flea in the dark has little to learn in politics.

The woman who never takes an interest in the fashions needs medicine.

The surest way to find out that you need Christ is to try to live like Him.

You won't find it half as hard to please God as you do the folks you live with.

The man who is always looking for an easy place will have a hard time of it.

If you conclude to keep your sins to-day, you may have to keep them forever.

God's children work because they love to, and the devil's ecause they have to.

The man who gives himself to God does as much for love as anybody can do.

Among the cares of life it is exhilarating sometimes to remember that the cold days are the shortest.

Some men will work harder to get a divorce than they ever did to support a family.

A woman never so fully realizes her dependence upon man as when she undertakes to sharpen a lead-pencil.

If you want to please a woman, praise her baby. If you want to please a Kentuckian, speak well of his horse.

The Widow McDoo says the main reason why so many men have family trouble is that they marry a miss.

Every man on earth needs more courage more than he does more money.

The minute the devil can catch the eye he feels sure of the hands and feet.

The preacher fails who tries to preach a doctrine that hasn't been tested in his own heart.

It is going to the world for shoe strings that keeps the church from being sure-footed.

If every mother were a Christian the devil would never have the courage to show himself.

If the devil could be kept away from the children, it wouldn't be long until he would lose his kingdom.

If you want to have plenty of opportunities for doing, be sure you that you do not neglect the first one.

It is the death of Christ that damns us, and His resurrection that saves us. We kill Him; God raises Him.

If the devil could manage to keep people from thinking about religion he would soon lose his kingdom.

No man who will faithfully walk in the light as God gives it to him will ever have any need of a lantern.

If God did not do all that He could do to save every sinner on earth, heaven would not be a safe place to go to.

When a man has to chalk his head and use a shoe-horn to get his hat on, it is time for him to put on the blue ribbon.

When a man dies in the Society Islands they paint his body, but in this country his character is the thing that is frescoed.

The digestion of an ostrich and the appetite of an American small boy are two things that have never been discouraged.

Sarah Bernhardt owns 120 birds, a tiger-cat and a half dozen dogs. No wonder she can't keep a husband very long.

There are just two kinds of sinners in this world. One kind is saved by grace, and the other isn't. Which class do you belong to?

"I never did any harm" is a claim that some people are always urging, whenever their rights to heaven are questioned. A rotten egg in the nest can say the same thing.

The more we love God the nearer we will live to Him. Love to God is sure to find expression in ways that will be pleasing to Him.

No man is under moral obligations to either God or man to do that which he can not do. No government requires a one-legged man to be a soldier.

"What is soul food?" inquires "A Constant Reader," in one of our exchanges. Soul food is what keeps an editor fat when he tries to publish a newspaper according to his honest convictions.

Gymnastics are said to be compulsory in all the schools in Germany. This probably explains why a Dutchman would die with lockjaw if compelled to do his talking with both hands tied behind him.

An Ohio man claims to have a wife who never asks him for money. He neglects to say whether the woman has been speechless from birth, or whether she simply holds him down and goes through his pockets without wasting breath.

Lightning struck a New Jersey farmer the other day and left him none the worse for the tussle, except that he complained for a day or two of feeling as though his mules had run away and dragged him through the hedge feet foremost. People who survive New Jersey mosquitoes for half a century can stand most anything.

In every department of knowledge noble men and women are bearing aloft the torch of science to make light the dark places of earth for the benefit of man, but it will still be a long while before human wisdom can make out why a change of weather is bad for corns.

Man is a feeble child of destiny who can't lose money or find a shoe button in his soup without being more or less disturbed about it, while a woman will not so much as bat an eyelash if she happens to come unexpectedly face to face with an old beau who honeyed up to her five years or more in the most attentive courtship, and then jilted her without a word of warning to marry a dowdy with a little money drawing interest. A woman may not be able to slice onions without shedding tears of pain, but she can step on her own heart without wincing.

The Wonders of Chemistry.

"Chemistry is a wonderful factor in civilization. They make everything out of chemicals now—whisky, beer and——"

"By the way, that reminds me I saw a proof of it to-day. A man took a quart of common beer in a common tin measure."

"Well?"

"He actually turned it into a butter kettle."

A MAN can be moral without being religious, but he can't be religious without being moral.

Advantages of Teachers' Associations.

BY W. D. SMITH.

I see before me the millions of the earth's inhabitants. They are struggling in various pursuits and vocations. Some are in a higher state of developement than others, and consequently have in view greater ends for a complete life.

But let us notice their relations, and influences on the great family of which they are a part. We might consider them from the standpoint of color. We might consider them on the basis of social condition, or on that of wealth. But I desire to use the basis—"My choice of labor." Among the many avocations followed in enlightened countries where personal liberty exists, we can generally think of an individual performing a certain work because he choes to do that particular kind of labor. I shall not endeavor to enumerate the different pursuits and professions, but I do desire to think, and to have you think of the teacher as one of a class who has a special function to perform, a responsible position to fill, and a work to do which he has voluntarily accepted.

We love to think of this nation as one of the enlightened nations of the earth. We know it has advanced rapidly, and is at present progressing. We know that education—the common school system, is the stronghold of our republic, because it makes our present boys and girls the future citizens of judgment. The final solution of the race problem in the United States will only be made when more attention is given to education in the South. Educate the negro in the true sense of the word, and we make him a man of sound judgment, a patriotic man, one who recognizes and values the freedom given him, and also one who knows how best to use his liberty.

I say then, that in this great machinery of our government, each part should be strong and do its work well. If one burr is loosened, or a few cogs broken, or possibly a lack of oil in some part, friction is caused and progress impeded. The teachers of our country are an element of strength in the nation but they might be stronger still. They have, or should have that peculiar property, as it were, of radiating an influence which is felt and which strengthens the whole body politic. Ice cream and sauce of different kinds are much more palatable when flavored by certain kinds of essence. In proportion as the good quality of the flavor exists is the whole mass with which it comes in contact made better. So the quality of work done by the teacher is felt among whole communities. If this principle be true that one class of individuals in a nation influences all other classes how much it must mean to those who are directing the growth of minds—of immortal souls.

I have been touched in my feelings by observing the simple yet sincere faith which the child reposes in its teacher. I have noticed the tear trickle down the erstwhile radiant cheek, the fountain of the heart pricked open by an unkind, ungrateful look from the teacher. I have seen those little countenances brighten—not alone because they saw their teacher's face, but because they felt his spirit. Teachers, can we do our work too well? Can we accomplish too much?

No one will question the statement that the teacher might and should do better work than he now does. He has become too individual. In the establishment of great educational principles, "my way or nothing" is a poor basis. Perhaps our kind of labor has had a tendency to make us feel that way. But we must have the will power, the strength of character to depart from such narrow views, when the application of the view makes it narrow. "None are so deaf as those who will not hear." But I have more faith in the teachers of our community however, than to believe that they would in a single instance, on a full realization of their place and position in society, and in our present civilzation, court the cursed malady—predjudice, or even remain indifferent to a cause that would raise our educational standard. Let us awaken even though it does cost us an effort.

If to any class of individual belongs the establishment of a proper educational public opinion, the teachers are certainly that class. But they can never accomplish this great work by standing aloof from one another. Geo. P. Brown, one of the ex-presidents of the State Normal says: "The great need of the present is a more enlightened public opinion upon matters educational. The fundamental condition for the meeting of this need is a union of opinion among teachers upon the doctrine to be preached and the general method of preaching it. All educational reforms should originate with the craft. It is the functions of teachers' associations and councils to secure this agreement. * * * How great an opportunity is now open to them to come to the front and lead the public opinion of this country through this, the most important and interesting period in the development of the idea of public education! Let us make of every teachers' meeting an inquiry meeting into the most pressing needs of the schools, and let us, in addition form such an association or council of leaders as will work to discover what is best to be done for the promotion of education in this great valley of the Mississippi, and what shall be done first."

This last suggestion, though a good one, could never properly and systematically be carried out except by a system of local organizations. But what are the local benefits, as well as general to be derived from local organiztion? We need to know each other better. Union of opinion among the teachers of even one county, would raise the educational standard of that county, but can never be attained so long as we are strangers to each other. We have, in the past been laboring under disadvantages because of the lack of united effort. We have, exercised an independence which is far from involving the principles of a true liberty. We, each, as it were, have become monarchs of our own little world, content so to be, with no desire for a broadening of our defective selves and scarcely recognizing the fact that there are others engaged in a labor similar to our own, and if we do recognize it, 'tis with a cold indifference. I sometimes feel that we regard our work as a labor in common, about as much as an assembly composed of blacksmiths, carpenters, farmers, merchants, physicians, lawyers and ministers would regard theirs. We are too indefinite in our purposes, laboring in many parts and not as one man. We don't know each other, and this condition alone is a barrier to the best educational interests of our community.

Why do the members of the G. A. R, the boys of '62—clasp glad hands at their re-unions? Why do the members of the bar from the law courts in different communities speak with emotional utterance beside the bier of a co-worker? What is the philosophy of school friendships, or the close line of distinction drawn between collegiate classes? Ah, it is because of the silken cord of sympathy that binds men together. Bound together only in a common danger, a commom joy, or a common labor! A fulfillment of a great law made in the social nature of man by which he may realize the assisting influence of his fellows.

We do our work well in proportion as it holds a pleasurable interest for us. Are there any here so wrapped up in the cloak of selfishness or so perfectly successful in his work, that to breathe the atmosphere of an enthusiastic teachers' meeting is not strengthening to his professional vitality? If so, your is a false contentment. Are we growing so apathetic that we can no longer follow the simple laws of nature for the attainment of happiness and a life of usefulness? Let us listen to the words of Wendell Phillips when he says—"To rise in the morning only to eat and drink, and gather gold—that is a life not worth living. Enthusiasm is the life of the soul."

At such meetings as this should be, is where words are spoken and sentiments expressed that become brilliant lights for us in the dark, gloomy days of our professional life, and welcome messengers to us in happier moments.

As a brief summary, permit me to suggest a few topics relative to this subject, which if you carefully develop, will make you understand its importance better than I have been able to express.

1. Acquaintance of teachers with each other.
2. Sympathy in common labor created and realized.
3. System in educational work.
4. By union, an educational public opinion may be established by the teachers and educators, which could not be established without it.

I regard these four advantages worthy of consideration, and a properly conducted Teachers' Association is the means by which our teachers may enjoy them. There are many others which I have not enumerated; but I feel that when the teachers of DeKalb once fully awaken to the meaning and true sense of their profession, if they have not already done so, there is enough stamina within them to investigate and enjoy what they may enjoy, and to realize that fraternal bonds can surmount difficulties, and that unity for good is action prompted by true manhood and ennobling womanhood.

"There are brighter things in this world than gold,
There are nobler things in this world than name;
To silently do with your deeds untold,
To silently die unnoised to fame.
Then forth to fight, unnamed and alone;
Let us lead the world to its destined height;
Enough to know, if but this be known,
We live and we die for the right!"

Blanchard, of Wolcottville, as well as several in Auburn including Mr. Kinmont. James McDowell, Miss Cora Spitler, Mrs. Julia Sherlock and others. All interested in Sunday School work are invited to attend and assist.

Constipation,

If not remedied in season, is liable to become habitual and chronic. Drastic purgatives, by weakening the bowels, confirm, rather than cure, the evil. Ayer's Pills, being mild, effective, and strengthening in their action, are generally recommended by the faculty as the best of aperients.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills. I deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"I have been taking Ayer's Pills and using them in my family since 1857, and cheerfully recommend them to all in need of a safe but effectual cathartic."—John M. Boggs, Louisville, Ky.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels recovered their natural and regular action, so that now I am in excellent health."—S. L. Loughbridge, Bryan, Texas.

"Having used Ayer's Pills, with good results, I fully indorse them for the purposes for which they are recommended."—T. Conners, M. D., Centre Bridge, Pa.

BUTLER.

The Thanksgiving service will be held in the U. B. church.

McIntosh and Ray, two young men of Auburn, have bought Tombow's dining hall and have opened up with fair prospects of success.

The new mill is roofed, sided and the floor laid, also the machinery is being put in and will be ready for operation in about 40 to 60 days.

The big tile drain that our town board has been so long in completing is about done and will make a marked change in the appearance of things on the north side.

Another of Auburn's solid men has deserted her lively plains and started a jewelry and notion store in Maxwell & Shoub's agricultural store. We have not learned his name.

A little daughter of Martha Iler's, of Cleveland, was brought here for burial last Friday. We learn the little one came to its sudden death by a drunken devil who came into the hall where the little one was playing and in his drunken delirum dragged the child about the hall frighting her to death.

The long open ditch that has been an eyesore to that part of town is a thing of the past and the mothers of toddlers need no longer spend the hours of the long summer days as "things of beauty" on the front steps watching their little hopefuls lest they tumble into its slimy depths. This popular avenue will lose much of its former attraction to the average lover of sweetness.

Casebeer & Thurston have opened their P. I. store and are doing a thriving business. Our other business houses begin to see the writing on the wall and one of them, Knisely Brothers, the largest dry goods house in this part of the state has already shown signs of weakening, (?) by offering their immense stock at a sacrifice, preparatory to retiring from a trade that is threatened with destruction by their formidable rival.

SPENCERVILLE.

Mrs. Flora Steward is seriously ill.

J. A Provines went to Toledo Frtday.

Israel Horn went to Ft. Wayne Thursday.

Hursh & McNabb are buying and shipping poultry.

J. F. Baltz and wife are visiting friends in Tiffin, Ohio.

I. N. Hursh has built an addition to his meat market.

Mrs. Ed. Horn, of Charlotte, Mich., is visiting friends here.

The plasterers have been at work on Mrs. Oberholtzer's new house.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H Dills attended the funeral of Mrs. Mary Rhoads Wednesday.

Rev. J. S. Nelson preached an excellent sermon in the Lutheran church Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilhouser, of Garrett, were the guests of Florence Smith and family, Sunday.

Some of our citizens have got the spirit of enterprise, and a number of street crossings have been built.

Union Thanksgiving service is held in the Lutheran church Thursday morning. Rev. J. J. Fred delivered the sermon.

The woman's missionary society of the M. E. church, will be entertained by Mrs. John Henderson Saturday afternoon December 6.

FEAGLER'S CORNERS.

Albert Fickes butchered his hogs Monday.

B. F. Reeder has purchased a new harness.

Albert Fickes is still working on the railroad.

J. W. Johnson is still drawing his wood to market.

George Feagler is hauling his fodder into the dry.

We have had very fine weather in the last few weeks.

Weso Roop has hired out to George Feagler & Company.

Scott Bangs, of Michigan, is visiting relatives north and west of Sedan.

Gerry Rastler is keeping his eye on the girls, thats right Gerry don't stand back.

Michael Reinoehl and wife and Jacob Ringer were the guests of J. W. Johnson Sunday.

Farmers' Alliance met and cut wood for Mr. Groora as he is not able to do anything.

Charles Hartman has purchased a new cart and harness; he is going out amongst them now.

There have been fourteen conversions at Richland Center, six of whom united with the church.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To The Editor:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M. A Pioneer Gone.

Died near Huntertown, Nov. 16, 1890, Mary Rhodes, aged 81 years.

She with her husband, Daniel Rhodes and family removed from Ohio to this county in 1834 and settled on land they entered from the general government about a mile and a half below St. Joe, and one mile northeast of Spencerville, now owned by their son Milas Rhodes. Here her husband died in 1852, and here she lived for over a half century, a hard working, quiet, unassuming and worthy christian wife, mother and neighbor, admired, respected and loved by all who knew her.

The writer knew her for nearly half a century, and is a willing witness to these worthy and examplary traits of character which adorned her life. Truly, a mother in Israel and a real pioneer has departed, one who bore more than the ordinary privations of a new country, one who performed her full share in transplanting to this, then wild forest, christianity and modern civilization. She raised a very large family of children who with their children and grandchildren, and many other warm friends and neighbors mourn the loss.

What more can be said? Ah! what more need be said? Only this. The history of DeKalb county can not be correctly written unless it embraces the the labors, privations and lives of Mary Rhodes and her husband, Daniel Rhodes.

W. H. D.

Since the above was written, and while attending the funeral of Mrs. Rhodes, one of the children handed the following slip, preserved from an issue of the Fort Wayne Times, of June, 1852.

"DIED:—On the 6th inst, at his residence in Concord township, DeKalb county, Ind., DANIEL RHODES, in the 53rd year of his age. The deceased was one of the first settlers of this county, and contributed perhaps more than any other man to forward improvement in this county, and as such deserves a short biographical sketch.

Mr. Rhodes was born in the State of Virginia, in the year 1799, his father and family shortly after removed to Ross county, Ohio, where the subject of this sketch remained until the year 1834, in which he removed to what was then unorganized territory attached to Allen county. All of Northern Indiana, with the exception of a few isolated settlements was at that time an unbroken wilderness. Mr. Rhodes settled on the lands of the Little St. Joseph River, 21 miles from Ft. Wayne, in the midst of a dense forest, with but little means, excepting the land on which he settled, and a character of indomitable energy and industry, such as but few men possess. His own hand leveled the forest, and opened up one of the finest farms in this county. Possessed of a competency, and surrounded by a beloved and highly respectable family and friends, he was cut off in the midst of his years, a sacrifice to hardships and privations of pioneer life. In him society has lost one of its most efficient members, and his disconsolate family an affectionate protector. May he rest in peace. [Com.

We desire to add our testimony to the foregoing tribute of respect to the deceased. We have been acquainted with Mr. Rhodes for many years, and always found him one of the most honorable and upright of men. We sincerely sympathize with his afflicted family in their great bereavement. Their stay and staff has passed away in the vigor of life, and in the midst of his usefulness. Truly we may say "An honest man has fallen."

Mrs. Rhodes' maiden name was Crabil, and was born in Ross county, Ohio, in 1810; married there in 1827. In looking for the date of entry of lands in this county, by Daniel Rhodes, I find that the first entries were made in 1833. Twenty-three different tracts were entered by nine different persons, as follows: 40 acres in Sec. 1, Franklin township, by John Houlton, July 10, 1833; still owned by his family. Sept. 13, Thos. L. Yates entered the land where the old part of Spencerville is. Oct. 12, Daniel Butler entered the land now occupied by his two sons, Daniel and David. Oct. 21, Daniel Rhodes, entered the land occupied by his son Milas. Nov. 22, Isaac Patterson (who never occupied it) entered the land occupied by the family of Henry Dove. Nov. 23, Wm. Mathews, the land now owned by John W. Dills. Nov. 28, John Dawson, of Dearborn county, Ind., a grandfather of the writer, entered twelve small fractions along the St. Joe River, in Concord and Stafford townships, containing 213 acres. Nov. 30, John Mathews, a grandfather of the Harris boys, of Auburn, the land in the bend of the river, south of Spencerville, now owned by Baltz, and Dec. 24, Hector Blake entered the land just east of the Spencerville cemetery, now owned by Mrs. Carns and family. John Rhodes the father of Daniel Rhodes, Nov. 14, 1835, entered the land where S. S. Shutt resides. Although Samuel Wasson came to the county in 1833, with Daniel Butler, he did not until Oct. 22, 1836, enter any land, but on that day purchased, of the government, the land on which he has resided now over fifty years, making him, I think, the longest continued occupant of any tract of land now residing in the county.

A GREAT AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

The Success of "The Century" and its Plans for 1891.

The Century Magazine is now so well-known that to tell of its past success seems almost an old story. The New York Tribune has said that it and its companion, St. Nicholas for Young Folks, issued by the same house, "are read by every one person in thirty of the country's population,"—and large editions of both are sent beyond the seas. It is an interesting fact that a few years ago it was found that seven thousand copies of The Century went to Scotland, quite a respectable edition in itself. The question in England is no longer "Who reads an American book?" but "Who does not see the American magazines?" A few years ago The Century about doubled its circulation with the famous War Papers, General Grant and others, adding many more readers later with the Lincoln History and Kennan's thrilling articles on the Siberian Exile System. One great feature of 1891 is to be "The Gold Hunters of California" describing that remarkable movement to the gold fields in '49, in a series of richly illustrated articles written by survivors, including the narratives of men who went to California by the different routes, accounts of the gold discoveries, life in the mines, the work of the vigilance committees (by the chairman of the committees) etc., etc. General Fremont's last writing was done for this series. In November appears the opening article, "The First Emigrant Train to California," crossing the Rockies in 1841, by General Bidwell, a pioneer of pioneers. Thousands of American families who had some relative or friend "the Argonauts of '49" will be interested in these papers. Many other good things are coming, the narrative of an American's travels through that unknown land Thibet (for 700 miles over ground never before trod by a white man); the experiences of escaping War-Prisoners; American Newspapers described by well-known journalists; accounts of the great Indian Fighters, Custer and others; personal anecdotes of Lincoln, by his private secretaries; "The Faith Doctor," a novel by Edward Eggleston, with a wonderful rich program of novelets and stories by most of the leading writers, etc., etc. It is also announced that The Century has purchased the right to print, before its appearance in France or any other country, extracts from advance sheets of the famous Talleyrand Memoirs which have been secretly preserved for half a century to be first given to the world through the pages of an American magazine. All Europe is eagerly awaiting the publication of this personal history of Talleyrand—greatest of intriguers and diplomats. The November Century begins the volume, and new subscribers should commence with that issue. The subscription price ($4.00) may be remitted directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York, or single copies may be purchased of any newsdealer. The publishers offer to send a free sample—a recent back number—to any one desiring it.

Harper's Magazine.

ILLUSTRATED.

The important series of papers on South America, by Theodore Child, will be continued in HARPER'S MAGAZINE during the greater part of the year 1891. The articles on Southern California, by Charles Dudley Warner, will also be continued. Among other noteworthy attractions will be a novel by Charles Egbert Craddock; a collection of original drawings by W. M. Thackeray, now published for the first time; a novel written and illustrated by George du Maurier; a novelette by William Dean Howells; and a series of papers on London by Walter Besant.

In the number and variety of illustrated papers and other articles on subjects of timely interest, as well as in the unrivaled character of its short stories, poems, etc., HARPER'S MAGAZINE will continue that standard of excellence for which it has so long been distinguished.

SIGHTLESS BUT NOT HELPLESS.

The Active Business Life of a Chicago Man Who Is Wholly Blind.

The wonder of West Harrison street is a blind man, William F. Buschick, who lives at 1115, where he conducts a retail cigar and confectionery store. A casual observer would not be apt to discover that the storekeeper is totally blind from the manner in which he moves around and shows off his goods. Mr. Buschick keeps his own accounts, waits on the customers, takes in money and hands out change as deftly as any saleswoman in a down town store. He seldom makes mistakes in handling coin, and if anybody were mean enough to try it would not be an easy matter to pass counterfeit coins on him.

His sense of feeling is keen, and perhaps more so as a result of the absence of sight. He hands out any brand of cigars asked for, and his sensitive finger tips light upon the right brand of chewing gum without any fumbling. His eyes, which are not concealed from view, are a beautiful dark blue, and a stranger looking into them would not guess that they were so utterly useless.

Mr. Buschick buys all his stock, going down town on the street cars and about the crowded streets of the business section of the south side without a guide. He never loses his bearings. When ready to return home he waits quietly beside a peanut stand and asks the vender to tell him when a Harrison street car comes. This car passes his store, and he intuitively knows when it is opposite his home.

He jumps from the car while it is in motion. He walks about his store and turns sharp corners without mishap. He can walk straight to a door and grasp the knob without fumbling it, or trip down stairs as lively and as gracefully as a young woman, and never makes a miscalculation when reaching the last step. He is a candy maker and makes all the candy he sells.

As is usual in cases of blindness, the loss of this man's vision has quickened his sense of feeling and hearing. When his eyes went out of business their available assets appear to have been transferred to his ears and finger tips. His ability to locate objects by sound is wonderful. This was demonstrated one night when a burglar broke into his store. The robber left hastily with a leaden bullet in his anatomy, as spots on the floor proved the next morning. The blind man handles a revolver cleverly and shoots accurately for one so heavily handicapped, locating the object to be aimed at by sound.—Chicago Tribune.

Not Altogether Modern.

The opinion held by many people who have never had their attention especially turned to the work of Jean Jacques Rousseau is not that he was a benefactor of his kind, but in reality he was one of the first apostles of the modern methods of education, and it is only after all this lapse of years that his ideas have come to be widely adopted. It is he who once said that we came into the world ignorant, but with capacity; that education begins at birth; that we learn incredibly in the first years, and that as impressions supply our first knowledge those impressions should be of the best and should be presented in the right order; that the first cry of a child is a request, the second a command; that destructiveness in a child is not cruelty, but activity; that the sin of children is their weakness; that strength brings about virtue, and he who can do all things will never do wrong things.

This we see to be undoubtedly good reasoning in the light thrown on the subject of late years, and understanding now how greatly our children are affected by what they see us to be we comprehend more fully what Thales meant when he said that men must live in the consciousness that all around them is filled with gods, and that this should keep them more chaste than if they were in the holiest of temples.—Harper's Bazar.

Tough Sole.

Mrs. Custer reports a story related to her by a frontiersman which may be taken as an amusing illustration of a very solemn truth. The teller of the story had stopped at a cabin to get a supply of milk.

The family consisted of a mother and several "strapping daughters." As the traveler sat by the fire the shriveled old mother bent over the fireplace puffing at a clay pipe, perfectly stolid and silent, till one of the girls came in and stood at the fire trying to dry her homespun dress.

Without raising herself, and in a drawling tone, the mother said presently, "Sal, there's a coal under your fut."

In no more animated tone, and without even moving, the daughter replied. "Which fut, mammy?"

The girl had run barefoot all her life over the shale and rough ground of that country, and the red hot coal was some time in making its way through the hard surface to a sensitive tissue.

The Product of the Silkworm.

The thread of the silkworm is so small that an average of forty-two of them are twisted together to form a thread of common sewing silk; that of the spider is many diameters smaller. Two drams of spider web by weight would, if stretched into a straight line, reach from London, England, to Edinburgh, Scotland, a distance of over 400 miles.—St. Louis Republic.

Fashion's Slaves.

Husband—You women are regular slaves of fashion.

Wife—I know it, my dear. What was it you wanted me to do for you?

Husband—Oh yes, I forgot. Those two buttons on the back of my coat just above the coat tails are loose. I wish you'd sew them on.—Good News.

The Vexed Question Settled.

Tom—What's your choice of a national flower?

Jerry—Golden rod. And yours?

Tom (resting on his crutches)—Well, I've come to think it should be a railway dis-aster.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Startling Facts.

The American people are rapidly becoming a race of nervous wrecks, and the following suggests the best remedy: Alphonso Hempfling, of Butler, Pa., swears that when his son was speechless from St. Vitus dance Dr. Miles' great Restorative Nervine cured him. Mrs. J. R. Miller, of Valparaiso, and J. D. Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., each gained 20 pounds from taking it. Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., was cured of 40 to 50 convulsions a day, and much headache, dizziness, backache and nervous prostration by one bottle. A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. Washington Letter.

Washington, D. C. Nov. 21, 1890.

Every democrat in the country is interested in Washington this winter, because of the important political events certain to occur here. In the first place, the democratic minority in congress, feeling that the policy of their party has been endorsed by the country, are determined to resist every attempt of the republicans to pass radical political legislation, and they expect the moral support of every democrat. It is also proposed that the republicans shall, if possible, be made to provide for the big deficit in the National Treasury, which their wasteful and extravagant legislation has made a certainty for the next fiscal year, instead of leaving it for the democratic House of the Fifty second congress to do. At least if they cannot be made to adopt the necessary legislation to provide the money to meet this deficit, the attention of the country can be called to their refusal or do so, and the blame placed where it properly belongs. It is now admitted by Government officials that by the end of the next fiscal year our annual payments for pensions will have reached $200,000,000.

The struggle which will take place this winter between Mr. Blaine and Speaker Reed for the control of the republican party machine will be decidedly exciting, and democrats are very much interested in it, because for one thing, it embraces the fate of the Force bill. If Mr. Blaine becomes the dictator of the party's policy the Force bill will at once be shelved for good and all, and reciprocity, which has in a sense, become Mr. Blaine's special trade-mark will be used as a salve for the many and grevious wounds that the republican party has inflicted upon the country. If Mr. Harrison in his annual message recommends the passage of the Force bill, as it is believed here that he will, it will show that Speaker Reed has more influence with him than Mr. Blaine; but if on the other hand the message ignores the Force bill, then it may be presumed that Mr. Blaine is still in supreme command at the White House.

The immense vote cast by the Farmers Alliance in states which have for many years been reliably republican has thrown the republican leaders into a panic, and they are puzzling their bewildered brains to get up a scheme that will get back their lost voters. At a conference of prominent republicans held here a few days ago Mr. Blaine was deputed to ascertain whether by making concessions in the shape of legislation at this session of congress the alliance men could not be pacified, and the result is, that a confidential agent of Mr. Blaine's has been sent to the Northwestern states to confer with the Alliance leaders, and it is believed by my informant, who usually knows what he talks about, that he is authorized to enter into a deal with them if they will agree, in return for the passage of a bill for the free and unlimited coinage of silver or some other bill that will largely increase the amount of money in circulation, to support the National republican ticket in 1892.

By the way, speaking of the Farmers Alliance, Representative Outwaite, of Ohio, said here a day or two ago, that if the combination, which has been more or less talked about, between the Alliance and the labor organizations of the cities could be brought about that he believed they could elect the next president. I know that the Alliance people are doing their level best to bring about that combination.

It is now regarded as so certain that there will be an extra session of this Fifty second congress held in the spring that several of the gentlemen who have announced themselves as candidates for speaker of the next House have opened headquarters here and begun their campaign for the position. Only a small proportion of the democratic majority in the next House are members of the present congress, but owing to the nearness of the national campaign and the great political interests now centered at Washington it is expected that nearly all of them will be here within a few weeks. So far the contest for speakership is being conducted in the best of humor, and I see no reason why it should not continue to the end in the same spirit, except the disposition on the part of certain newspapers to make it appear as a fight between Governor Hill and Mr. Cleveland.

Only two of the republican members of the House committee on Ways and Means, which is responsible for for the McKinley tariff bill, have received certificates of election to the next House, and one of them—Burrows, of Michigan, is to have his seat contested on the ground of fraud. The other one is McKenna, of California, who it will be remembered made a minority of the report against the sugar schedule of the tariff bill. So that it looks as if none of the men who fathered that bill as a whole received the endorsement of their constituents, all of which shows the good sense of the constituents.

Not two years ago, by something over three months, the republicans took charge of the government, finding a big surplus in the treasury. Since then our receipts have constantly increased and yet it is now necessary to consider how we may increase the income of the government, in order to raise the money to meet its annual expenditures. That tells the story.

Before the invention of the telescope an object upon the moon's surface fifty miles in diameter could not be seen.

THE MESSAGE.

President Harrison Discusses National Affairs.

In His Annual Communication to Congress

He Urges the Passage of the Lodge Election Bill

And Says the McKinley Tariff Law Must Be Given a Fair Trial.

Our Foreign Relations in a Satisfactory Condition.

The State of the Nation's Finances Discussed—Reciprocity Indorsed.

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

They Are Friendly.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

The reports of the several executive departments, which will be laid before Congress in the usual course, will exhibit in detail the operations of the Government for the last fiscal year. Only the more important incidents and results, and chiefly such as may be the foundation of the recommendations I shall submit, will be referred to in this annual message.

The vast and increasing business of the Government has been transacted by the several departments during the year with faithfulness, energy and success. The revenues, amounting to above four hundred and fifty million dollars, have been collected and disbursed without revealing, so far as I can ascertain, a single case of defalcation or embezzlement. An earnest effort has been made to stimulate a sense of responsibility and public duty in all officers and employes of every grade, and the work done by them has almost wholly escaped unfavorable criticism. I speak of these matters with freedom, because the credit of this good work is not mine, but is shared by the heads of the several departments with the great body of faithful officers and employes who serve under them. The closest scrutiny of Congress is invited to all methods of administration and to every item of expenditure.

The friendly relations of our country with the nations of Europe and the East have been undisturbed, while the ties of good-will and common interest that bind us to the States of the western hemisphere have been notably strengthened by the conference held in this capital to consider measures for the general welfare. Pursuant to the invitation authorized by Congress, the representative of every independent State of the American Continent and of Hayti met in conference in this capital in October, 1889, and continued in session until the 19th of last April. This important convocation marks a most interesting and influential epoch in the history of the western hemisphere. It is noteworthy that Brazil, invited while under an imperial form of government, shared as a Republic in the deliberations and results of the conference. The recommendations of this conference were all transmitted to Congress at the last session.

Divers Foreign Matters.

The communications of the Chinese Minister have brought into view the whole subject of our conventional relations with his country, and at the same time this Government, through its legation at Pekin, has sought to arrange various matters and complaints touching the interests and protection of our citizens in China.

In pursuance of the concurrent resolution of Oct. 1, 1890, I have proposed to the Governments of Mexico and Great Britain to consider a conventional regulation of the passage of Chinese laborers across our southern and northern frontiers.

On the 22d day of August last Sir Edmund Monson, the arbitrator, selected under the treaty of December, 1888, rendered an award to the effect that no compensation was due from the Danish Government to the United States on account of what is commonly known as the Carlos Butterfield claim.

Our relations with the French republic continue to be entirely cordial. Our representative at that court has very diligently urged the removal of the restrictions placed upon our meat products, and it is believed that substantial progress has been made toward a just settlement.

The Samoan treaty, signed last year at Berlin by the representatives of the United States, Germany and Great Britain, after due ratification and exchange, has begun to produce salutary effects. The formation of the government agreed upon will soon replace the disorder of the past by a stable administration, alike just to the natives and equitable to the three powers most concerned in trade and intercourse with the Samoan Islands. The Chief Justice has been chosen by the King of Sweden and Norway on the invitation of the three powers, and will soon be installed. The Land Commission and the Municipal Council are in process of organization. A rational and evenly distributed scheme of taxation, both municipal and upon imports, is in operation. Malietoa is respected as king.

The new treaty of extradition with Great Britain, after due ratification, was proclaimed on the 25th of last March. Its beneficent working is already apparent.

The Seal Question.

The difference between the two governments touching the fur seal question in the Behring Sea is not yet adjusted, as will be seen by the correspondence which will soon be laid before Congress. The offer to submit the question to arbitration, as proposed by her Majesty's Government, has not been accepted, for the reason that the form of submission proposed is not thought to be calculated to assure a conclusion satisfactory to either party. It is sincerely hoped that before the opening of another sealing season some arrangement may be effected which will assure to the United States a property right, derived from Russia, which was not disregarded by any nation for more than eighty years preceding the outbreak of the existing trouble.

In the tariff act a wrong was done to the Kingdom of Hawaii which I am bound to presume was wholly unintentional. Duties were levied on certain commodities which are included in the reciprocity treaty now existing between the United States and the Kingdom of Hawaii, without indicating necessary exception in favor of that Kingdom. I hope Congress will repair what might otherwise seem to be a breach of faith on the part of this Government.

An award in favor of the United States in the matter of the claim of Mr. Van Bokkelen against Hayti was rendered on the 4th of December, 1888, but owing to disorders then and afterward prevailing in Hayti, the terms of payment were not observed. A new agreement as to the time of payment has been approved and is now in force. Other just claims of citizens of the United States for redress of wrongs suffered during the late political conflict in Hayti will, it is hoped, speedily yield to friendly treatment.

Propositions for the amendment of the treaty of extradition between the United States and Italy are now under consideration.

You will be asked to provide the means of accepting the invitation of the Italian Government to take part in an approaching conference to consider the adoption of a universal prime meridian from which to reckon longitude and time. As this proposal follows in the track of the reform sought to be initiated by the meridian conference at Washington, held on the invitation of this Government, the United States should manifest a friendly interest in the Italian proposal.

In this connection I may refer with approval to the suggestion of my predecessors that standing provision be made for accepting, whenever deemed advisable, the frequent invitations of foreign governments to share in conferences looking to the advancement of international reforms in regard to science, sanitation, commercial law, and procedure, and other matters affecting the intercourse and progress of modern communities.

The Country's Finances—Receipts and Expenditures.

The revenues of the Government from all sources for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, were $463,963,080.55, and the total expenditures for the same period were $358,618,584.52. The postal receipts have not heretofore been included in the statement of these aggregates, and for the purpose of comparison the sum of $60,882,097.92 should be deducted from both sides of the account. The surplus for the year, including the amount applied to the sinking fund, was $105,344,496.03. The receipts for 1890 were $16,030,923.79, and the expenditures $15,739,871 in excess of those of 1889. The customs receipts increased $5,835,842.88, and the receipts from internal revenue $11,725,191.89, while, on the side of expenditures, that for pensions was $19,312,075.96 in excess of the preceding year.

The Treasury statement for the current fiscal year, partly actual and partly estimated, is as follows: Receipts from all sources, $406,000,000; total expenditures, $354,000,000, leaving a surplus of $52,000,000—not taking the postal receipts into account on either side. The loss of revenue from customs for the last quarter is estimated at $25,000,000, but from this is deducted a gain of about $16,000,000, realized during the first four months of the year.

For the year 1892, the total estimated receipts are $373,000,000, and the estimated expenditures $357,852,209.42, leaving an estimated surplus of $15,147,790.58, which, with a cash balance of $52,000,000 at the beginning of the year, will give $67,147,790.58 as the sum available for the redemption of outstanding bonds or other uses. The estimates of receipts and expenditures for the Post Office Department being equal, are not included in this statement on either side.

I notice with great pleasure the statement of the Secretary that the receipts from internal revenues have increased during the last fiscal year nearly $12,000,000, and that the cost of collecting this larger revenue was less by $90,617 than for the same purpose in the preceding year. The percentage of cost of collecting the customs revenue was less for the last fiscal year than ever before.

The Silver Question.

The act "directing the purchase of silver bullion and issue of Treasury notes thereon," approved July 14, 1890, has been administered by the Secretary of the Treasury with an earnest purpose to get into circulation at the earliest possible dates the full monthly amount of notes contemplated by its provisions and at the same time to give to the market for silver bullion such support as the law contemplates. The recent depreciation in the price of silver has been observed with regret. The rapid rise in price which anticipated and followed the passage of the act was influenced in some degree by speculation and the recent reaction is in part the result of the same cause and in part of the recent monetary disturbances.

Some months of further trial will be necessary to determine the permanent effect of the recent legislation upon silver values, but it is gratifying to know that the increased circulation secured by the act has exerted and will continue to exert a most beneficial influence upon business and upon general values.

While it has not been thought best to renew formally the suggestion of an international conference looking to an agreement touching the full use of silver for coinage at a uniform ratio, care has been taken to observe closely any change in the situation abroad, and no favorable opportunity will be lost to promote a result which it is confidently believed would confer very large benefits upon the commerce of the world.

The recent monetary disturbances in England are not unlikely to suggest a re-examination of opinions upon this subject. Our very large supply of gold will, if not lost by impulsive legislation in the supposed interest of silver, give us a position of advantage in promoting a permanent and safe international agreement for the free use of silver as a coin metal.

About Circulation.

The efforts of the Secretary to increase the volume of money in circulation by keeping down the Treasury surplus to the lowest practicable limit have been unremitting and in a very high degree successful. The tables presented by him, showing the increase during the nineteen months he has administered the affairs of the department, are interesting and instructive. The increase of money in circulation during the nineteen months has been in the aggregate $93,866,813, or about $1.50 per capita, and of this increase only $7,100,000 was due to the recent silver legislation. That this substantial and needed aid given to commerce resulted in an enormous reduction of the public debt and of the annual interest charge is matter of increased satisfaction. There have been purchased and redeemed since March 4, 1889, 4 and 4½ per cent bonds to the amount of $211,832,450, at a cost of $246,620,741, resulting in the reduction of the annual interest charge of $8,967,609, and a total saving of interest of $51,576,706.

The Customs Service.

The Customs Administration Board provided for by the act of June 10, 1890, was selected with great care and is composed in part of men whose previous experience in the administration of the old customs regulations had made them familiar with the evil to be remedied, and in part of men whose legal and judicial acquirements and experience seemed to fit them for the work of interpreting and applying the new statute. The chief aim of the law is to secure honest valuations of all dutiable merchandise, and to make these valuations uniform at all our ports of entry. It has been made manifest by a congressional investigation that a system of undervaluation had been long in use by certain classes of importers, resulting not only in a great loss of revenue but in a most intolerable discrimination against honesty. It is not seen how this legislation, when it is understood, can be regarded by the citizens of any country having commercial dealings with us as unfriendly. If any duty is supposed to be excessive let the complaint be lodged there. It will surely not be claimed by any well-disposed people that a remedy may be sought and allowed in a system of quasi smuggling.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

Desertions Decreasing.

The report of the Secretary of War exhibits several gratifying results attained during the year by wise and unostentatious methods. The percentage of desertions from the army (an evil for which both Congress and the department have long been seeking a remedy) has been reduced during the past year 24 per cent. and for the months of August and September, during which time the favorable effects of the act of June 16 were felt, 33 per cent as compared with the same months of 1889.

The results attained by a reorganization and consolidation of the divisions having charge of the hospital service records of the volunteer service are very remarkable. This change was effected in July, 1889, and at that time there were 40,654 cases awaiting attention, more than half of these being calls from the Pension Office for information necessary to the adjudication of pension claims. On the 30th day of June last, though over 300,000 new calls had come in, there was not a single case that had not been examined and answered.

Coast Defenses.

I concur in the recommendations of the Secretary that adequate and regular appropriations be continued for coast-defense works and ordnance. Plans have been practically agreed upon, and there can be no good reason for delaying the execution of them; while the defenseless state of our great seaports furnishes an urgent reason for wise expedition.

The Militia.

The encouragement that has been extended to the militia of the States, generally and most appropriately designated the "National Guard," should be continued and enlarged. These military organizations constitute, in a large sense, the army of the United States, while about five-sixths of the annual cost of their maintenance is defrayed by the States.

THE NATIONAL LAWS.

Satisfactorily Administered.

The report of the Attorney General is under the law submitted directly to Congress, but, as the Department of Justice is one of the executive departments, some reference to the work done is appropriate here.

A vigorous and in the main an effective effort has been made to bring to trial and punishment all violators of the law; but, at the same time, care has been taken that frivolous and technical offenses should not be used to swell the fees of officers or to harass well-disposed citizens. Especial attention is called to the facts connected with the prosecution of violations of the election laws and of offenses against United States officers. The number of convictions secured, very many of them upon pleas of guilty, will, it is hoped, have a salutary, restraining influence. There have been several cases where Postmasters appointed by me have been subjected to violent interference in the discharge of their official duties, and to persecutions and personal violence of the most extreme character. Some of these cases have been dealt with through the Department of Justice, and in some cases the postoffices have been abolished or suspended. I have directed the Postmaster General to pursue this course in all cases where other efforts have failed to secure for any Postmaster, not himself in fault, an opportunity peacefully to exercise the duties of his office. But such action will not supplant the efforts of the Department of Justice to bring the particular offenders to punishment.

Fraudulent Naturalization.

The vacation by judicial decrees of fraudulent certificates of naturalization, upon bills in equity filed by the Attorney General in the Circuit Court of the United States, is a new application of a familiar equity jurisdiction. Nearly one hundred decrees have been taken during the year, the evidence disclosing that a very large number of fraudulent certificates of naturalization have been issued. And in this connection I beg to renew my recommendation that the laws be so amended as to require a more full and searching inquiry into all the facts necessary to naturalization before any certificates are granted. It certainly is not too much to require that an application for American citizenship shall be heard with as much care and recorded with as much formality as are given to cases involving the pettiest property right.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

Methods Greatly Improved.

The report of the Postmaster General shows the most gratifying progress in the important work committed to his direction. The business methods have been greatly improved. A large economy in expenditures and an increase of four and three-quarters millions in receipts have been realized. The deficiency this year is $5,786,300 as against $6,350,183 last year, notwithstanding the great enlargement of the service. Mail routes have been extended and quickened, and greater accuracy and dispatch in distribution and delivery have been attained. The report will be found to be full of interest and suggestion, not only to Congress but to those thoughtful citizens who may be interested to know what business methods can do for that department of public administration which most nearly touches all our people.

The Anti-Lottery Act.

The passage of the act to amend certain sections of the Revised Statutes relating to lotteries, approved September 19, 1890, has been received with great and deserved popular favor. The Postoffice Department and the Department of Justice at once entered upon the enforcement of the law with sympathetic vigor, and already the public mails have been largely freed from the fraudulent and demoralizing appeals and literature emanating from the lottery companies.

THE NAVY.

Splendid New Vessels.

The construction and equipment of the new ships for the navy have made very satisfactory progress. Since March 4, 1889, nine new vessels have been put in commission, and during this winter four more, including one monitor will be added. The construction of the other vessels authorized is being pushed, both in the Government and private yards, with energy and watched with most scrupulous care.

Valuable Experiments.

The experiments conducted during the year to test the relative resisting power of armor plates have been so valuable as to attract great attention in Europe. The only part of the work upon the new ships that is threatened by unusual delay is the armor plating, and every effort is being made to reduce that to the minimum. It is a source of congratulation that the anticipated influence of these modern vessels upon the esprit de corps of the officers and seamen has been fully realized. Confidence and pride in the ship among the crew are equivalent to a secondary battery. Your favorable consideration is invited to the recommendations of the Secretary.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

Satisfactory Results Attained.

The report of the Secretary of the Interior exhibits, with great fullness and clearness, the vast work of that great department and the satisfactory results attained. The suggestions made by him are earnestly commended to the consideration of Congress, though they cannot all be given particular mention here.

Reduction of Indian Reservations.

The several Acts of Congress looking to the reduction of the larger Indian reservations, to the more rapid settlement of the Indians upon individual allotments, and the restoration to the public domain of lands in excess of their needs, have been largely carried into effect, so far as the work was confided to the Executive. Agreements have been concluded since March 4, 1889, involving the cession to the United States of about 14,726,000 acres of land. These contracts have, as required by law, been submitted to Congress for ratification and for the appropriations necessary to carry them into effect. Those with the Sisseton and Wahpeton, Sac and Fox, Iowa, Pottawatomies and Absentee Shawnees and Cœur d'Alene tribes have not yet received the sanction of Congress. Attention is also called to the fact that the appropriations made in the case of the Sioux Indians have not covered all the stipulated payments. This should be promptly corrected. If an agreement is confirmed, all of its terms should be complied with without delay, and full appropriations should be made.

Affairs in Utah.

The increasing numbers and influence of the non-Mormon population in Utah are observed with satisfaction. The recent letter of Wilford Woodruff, President of the Mormon Church, in which he advised his people "to refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by the laws of the land," has attracted wide attention, and it is hoped that its influence will be highly beneficial in restraining infractions of the laws of the United States. But the fact should not be overlooked that the doctrine or belief of the church that polygamous marriages are rightful and supported by divine revelation remains unchanged. President Woodruff does not renounce the doctrine, but refrains from teaching it, and advises against the practice of it because the law is against it. Now, it is quite true that the law should not attempt to deal with the faith or belief of any one; but it is quite another thing, and the only safe thing, so to deal with the Territory of Utah as that those who believe polygamy to be rightful shall not have the power to make it lawful.

Lands for Settlers.

The policy outlined in my last annual message in relation to the patenting of lands to settlers upon the public domain has been carried out in the administration of the Land Office. No general suspicion or imputation of fraud has been allowed to delay the hearing and adjudication of individual cases upon their merits. The purpose has been to perfect the title of honest settlers with such promptness that the value of the entry might not be swallowed up by the expenses and extortions to which delay subjected the claimant. The average monthly issue of agricultural patents has been increased about six thousand.

The Pension Office.

The disability pension act, which was approved on the 27th of June last, has been put into operation as rapidly as practicable. The increased clerical force provided was selected and assigned to work, and a considerable part of the force engaged in examinations in the field was recalled and added to the working force of the office. The examination and adjudication of claims have, by reason of improved methods, been more rapid than ever before. There is no economy to the Government in delay, while there is much hardship and injustice to the soldiers. The anticipated expenditure, while very large, will not, it is believed, be in excess of the estimates made before the enactment of the law. This liberal general law should suggest a more careful scrutiny of bills for special relief, both as to the cases where relief is granted and as to the amount allowed.

Useless Public Building Bills.

At the last session I had occasion to return with my objections several bills making provisions for the erection of public buildings, for the reason that the expenditures contemplated were, in my opinion, greatly in excess of any public need. No class of legislation is more liable to abuse, or to degenerate into an unseemly scramble about the public treasury, than this. There should be exercised in this matter a wise economy based upon some responsible and impartial examination and report as to each case, under a general law.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Farmers Prospering.

The report of the Secretary of Agriculture deserves especial attention in view of the fact that the year has been marked in a very unusual degree by agitation and organization among the farmers looking to an increase in the profits of their business. It will be found that the efforts of the Department have been intelligently and zealously devoted to the promotion of the interests intrusted to its care.

A very substantial improvement in the market prices of the leading farm products during the year is noticed. The price of wheat advanced from 81 cents in October, 1889, to $1.00¾ in October, 1890; corn from 31 cents to 50¼ cents; oats from 19¼ cents to 43 cents, and barley from 63 cents to 78 cents. Meats showed a substantial but not so large an increase. The export trade in live animals and fowls shows a very large increase; the total value in such exports for the year ending June 30, 1890, was $33,000,000, and the increase over the preceding year was over $15,000,000. Nearly 200,000 more cattle and over 45,000 more hogs were exported than in the preceding year. The export trade in beef and pork products and in dairy products was very largely increased, the increase in the articles of butter alone being from 15,504,978 pounds to 29,748,042 pounds, and the total increase in the value of meat and dairy products exported being $34,000,000. This trade, so directly helpful to the farmer, it is believed will be yet further and very largely increased when the system of inspection and sanitary supervision now provided by law is brought fully into operation.

Protecting American Meats.

The efforts of the Secretary to establish the healthfulness of our meats against the disparaging imputations that have been put upon them abroad have resulted in substantial progress. Veterinary surgeons sent out by the Department are now allowed to participate in the inspection of the live cattle from this country landed at the English docks, and during the several months they have been on duty no case of contagious pleuro-pneumonia has been reported. This inspection abroad and the domestic inspection of live animals and pork products, provided for by the act of August 30, 1890, will afford as perfect a guaranty for the wholesomeness of our meats offered for foreign consumption as is anywhere given to food product, and its non-acceptance will quite clearly reveal the real motive of any continued restriction for their use; and that having been made clear, the duty of the Executive will be very plain.

Beet Sugar Interests.

The information given by the Secretary of the progress and prospects of the beet sugar industry is full of interest. It has already passed the experimental stage and is a commercial success. The area over which the sugar beet can be successfully cultivated is very large, and another field crop of great value is offered to the choice of the farmers.

The Secretary of the Treasury concurs in the recommendation of the Secretary of Agriculture that the official supervision provided by the tariff law for sugar of domestic production shall be transferred to the Department of Agriculture.

The law relating to the civil service has, so far as I can learn, been executed by those having the power of appointment in the classified service with fidelity and impartiality, and the service has been increasingly satisfactory. The report of the commission shows a large amount of good work done during the year with very limited appropriations.

THE TARIFF AND ITS EFFECTS.

Congress Congratulated.

I congratulate the Congress of the country upon the passage at the first session of the Fifty-first Congress of an unusual number of laws of very high importance. That the results of this legislation will be the quickening and enlargement of our manufacturing industries, larger and better markets for our breadstuffs and provisions both at home and abroad, more constant employment and better wages for our working people, and an increased supply of safe currency for the transaction of business, I do not doubt. Some of these measures were enacted at so late a period that the beneficial effects upon commerce which were in the contemplation of Congress have as yet but partially manifested themselves.

Some Statistics.

The general trade and industrial conditions throughout the country during the year have shown a marked improvement. For many years prior to 1888 the merchandise balances of foreign trade had been largely in our favor, but during that year and the year following they turned against us. It is very gratifying to know that the last fiscal year again shows a balance in our favor of over $68,000,000. The bank clearings which furnish a good test of the volume of business transacted, for the first ten months of the year 1890 show, as compared with the same months of 1889, an increase for the whole country of about 8.4 per cent., while the increase outside the city of New York was over 13 per cent. During the month of October the clearings of the whole country showed an increase of 3.1 per cent. over October, 1889, while outside of New York the increase was 11½ per cent. These figures show that the increase in the volume of business was very general throughout the country. That this larger business was being conducted upon a safe and profitable basis is shown by the fact that there were 300 less failures reported in October, 1890, than in the same month of the preceding year, with liabilities diminished by about $5,000,000.

Increase in Exports.

The value of our exports of domestic merchandise during the last year was over $115,000,000 greater than the preceding year, and was only exceeded once in our history. About $100,000,000 of this excess was in agricultural products. The production of pig iron—always a good gauge of general prosperity—is shown by a recent census bulletin to have been 153 per cent. greater in 1890 than in 1880, and the production of steel 290 per cent. greater. Mining in coal has had no limitation except that resulting from deficient transportation. The general testimony is that labor is everywhere fully employed, and the reports for the last year show a smaller number of employes affected by strikes and lockouts than in any year since 1884. The depression in the prices of agricultural products had been greatly relieved, and a buoyant and hopeful tone was beginning to be felt by all our people.

England's Financial Panic.

These promising influences have been in some degree checked by the surprising and very unfavorable monetary events which have recently taken place in England. It is gratifying to know that these did not grow in any degree out of the financial relations of London with our people, or any discredit attached to our securities held in that market. The return of our bonds and stocks was caused by a money stringency in England, not by any loss of value or credit in the securities themselves. We could not, however, wholly escape the ill effects of a foreign monetary agitation accompanied by such extraordinary incidents as characterized this. It is not believed, however, that these evil incidents, which have for the time unfavorably affected values in this country, can long withstand the strong, safe, and wholesome influences which are operating to give to our people profitable returns in all branches of legitimate trade and industry. The apprehension that our tariff may again and at once be subjected to important general changes would undoubtedly add a depressing influence of the most serious character.

The Late Tariff Act.

The general Tariff act has only partially gone into operation, some of its important provisions being limited to take effect at dates yet in the future. The general provisions of the law have been in force less than sixty days. Its permanent effect upon trade and prices still largely stand in conjecture. It is curious to note that the advance in the prices of articles wholly unaffected by the Tariff act was by many hastily ascribed to that act. Notice was not taken of the fact that the general tendency of the markets was upward, from influences wholly apart from the recent tariff legislation. The enlargement of our currency by the Silver Bill undoubtedly gave an upward tendency to trade and had a marked effect on prices; but this natural and desired effect of the silver legislation was by many erroneously attributed to the Tariff act.

Must Have a Fair Trial.

There is neither wisdom nor justice in the suggestion that the subject of tariff revision shall be opened before this law has had a fair trial. It is quite true that every tariff schedule is subject to objections. No bill was ever framed, I suppose, that in all of its rates and classifications had the full approval even of a party caucus, since legislation is always and necessarily the product of compromise as to details, and the present law is no exception. But in its general scope and effect I think it will justify the support of those who believe that American legislation should conserve American trade and the wages of workingmen. The misinformation as to the terms of the act which has been so widely disseminated at home and abroad will be corrected by experience, and the evil auguries as to its results confounded by the market reports, the savings banks, internal trade balances and the general prosperity of our people. Already we begin to hear from abroad and from our custom houses that the prohibitory effect upon importations imputed to the act is not justified. The imports at the port of New York for the first three weeks of November were nearly 8 per cent. greater than for the same period in 1889, and 29 per cent. greater than in same period of 1888. And so far from being an act to limit exports, I confidently believe that under it we shall secure a larger and more profitable participation in foreign trade than we have ever enjoyed, and that we shall recover a proportionate participation in the ocean carrying trade of the world.

Foreign Criticisms of the Bill.

The criticisms of the bill that have come to us from foreign sources may well be rejected for repugnancy. If these critics really believe that the adoption by us of a free-trade policy, or of tariff rates having reference solely to revenue, would diminish the participation of their own countries in the commerce of the world, their advocacy and the promotion by speech and other forms of organized effort of this movement among our people is a rare exhibition of unselfishness in trade. And on the other hand, if they sincerely believe that the adoption of a protective tariff policy by this country inures to their profit and our hurt, it is noticeably strange that they should lead the outcry against the authors of a policy so helpful to their countrymen and crown with their favor those who would snatch from them a substantial share of a trade with other lands, already inadequate to their necessities.

There is no disposition among any of our people to promote prohibitory legislation. Our policies are adopted not to the hurt of others, but to secure for ourselves those advantages that fairly grow out of our favored position as a nation. Our form of government, with its incident of universal suffrage, makes it imperative that we shall save our working people from the agitations and distresses which scant work and wages that leave no margin for comfort always beget. But after all this is done it will be found that our markets are open to friendly commercial exchanges of enormous value to other great powers.

Wages of Working People.

From the time of my induction into office, the duty of using every power and influence given by law to the Executive Department for the development of larger markets for our products, especially our farm products, has been kept constantly in mind, and no effort has been, or will be, spared to promote that end. We are under no disadvantage in any foreign market except that we pay our workingmen and workingwomen better wages than are paid elsewhere—better abstractly, better relatively to the cost of the necessaries of life. I do not doubt that a very largely increased foreign trade is accessible to us without bartering for either our home market for such products of the farm and shop as our own people can supply or the wages of our working-people.

The Reciprocity Feature.

In many of the products of wood and iron, and in meats and breadstuffs, we have advantages that only need better facilities of intercourse and transportation to secure for them large foreign markets. The reciprocity clause of the tariff act wisely and effectively opens the way to secure a large reciprocal trade in exchange for the free admission to our ports of certain products. The right of independent nations to make special reciprocal trade concessions is well established, and does not impair either the comity due to other powers or what is known as the "favored nation clause" so generally found in commercial treaties. What is given the one for an adequate agreed consideration cannot be claimed by another freely. The state of the revenues was such that we could dispense with any import duties upon tea, hides, and the lower grades of sugar and molasses. That the large advantage resulting to the countries producing and exporting these articles by placing them on the free list entitled us to expect a fair return in a way of customs concessions upon articles exported by us to them was so obvious that to have gratuitously abandoned this opportunity to enlarge our trade would have been an unpardonable error.

There were but two methods of maintaining control of this question open to Congress: To place all of these articles upon the dutiable list, subject to such treaty agreements as could be secured, or to place them all presently upon the free list, but subject to the reimposition of specified duties if the countries from which we received them should refuse to give to us suitable reciprocal benefits. This latter method, I think, possesses great advantages. It expresses in advance the consent of Congress to reciprocity arrangements affecting these products, which must otherwise have been delayed and unascertained until each treaty was ratified by the Senate and the necessary legislation enacted by Congress. Experience has shown that some treaties looking to reciprocal trade have failed to secure a two-thirds vote in the Senate for ratification, and others having passed that stage have for years awaited the concurrence of the House and Senate in such modifications of our revenue laws as was necessary to give effect to their provisions. We now have the concurrence of both Houses in advance in a distinct and definite offer of free entry to our ports of specific articles. The Executive is not required to deal in conjecture as to what Congress will accept. Indeed, this reciprocity provision is more than an offer. Our part of the bargain is complete; delivery has been made, and when the countries from which we receive our sugar, coffee, tea and hides have placed on their free lists such of our products as shall be agreed upon, as an equivalent for our concession, a proclamation of that fact completes the transaction, and in the meantime our own people have free sugar, tea, coffee and hides.

Looking Forward.

The indications thus far given are very hopeful of early and favorable action by the countries from which we receive our large imports of coffee and sugar, and it is confidently believed that if steam communication with these countries can be promptly improved and enlarged, the next year will show a most gratifying increase in our exports of breadstuffs and provisions, as well as of some important lines of manufactured goods.

COMING LEGISLATION.

Work that Remains to Be Done.

In addition to the important bills that became laws before the adjournment of the last session, some other bills of the highest importance were well advanced toward a final vote, and now stand upon the calendars of the two houses in favored positions. The present session has a fixed limit, and if those measures are not now brought to a final vote all the work that has been done upon them by this Congress is lost. The proper consideration of these, of an apportionment bill, and of the annual appropriation bills, will require not only that no working day of the session shall be lost, but that measures of minor and local interest shall not be allowed to interrupt or retard the progress of those that are of universal interest. In view of those conditions I refrain from bringing before you at this time some suggestions that would otherwise be made, and most earnestly invoke your attention to the duty of perfecting the important legislation now well advanced. To some of those measures which seem to me most important I now briefly call your attention.

To Develop American Steamship Lines.

I desire to repeat with added urgency the recommendations contained in my last annual message in relation to the development of American steamship lines. The reciprocity clause of the tariff bill will be largely limited, and its benefits retarded and diminished, if provision is not contemporaneously made to encourage the establishment of first-class steam communication between our ports and the ports of such nations as may meet our overtures for enlarged commercial exchanges. The steamship carrying the mails statedly and frequently, and offering to passengers a comfortable, safe, and speedy transit, is the first condition of foreign trade. It carries the order of the buyer, but not all that is ordered or bought. It gives to the sailing vessels such cargoes as are not urgent or perishable, and, indirectly at least, promotes that important adjunct of commerce. There is now both in this country and in the nations of Central and South America a state of expectation and confidence as to increased trade that will give a double value to your prompt action upon this question.

Water for Arid Regions.

The subject of the conservation and equal distribution of the water supply of the arid regions has had much attention from Congress, but has not as yet been put upon a permanent and satisfactory basis. The urgency of the subject does not grow out of any large present demand for the use of these lands for agriculture, but out of the danger that the water supply and the sites for the necessary catch-basins may fall into the hands of individuals or private corporations and be used to render subservient the large areas dependent upon such supply. The owner of the water is the owner of the lands, however the titles may run. All unappropriated natural water sources and all necessary reservoir sites should be held by the Government for the equal use, at fair rates, of the homestead settlers who will eventually take up these lands. The United States should not, in my opinion, undertake the construction of dams or canals, but should limit its work to such surveys and observations as will determine the water supply, both surface and subterranean, the areas capable of irrigation, and the use, location of, and storage capacity of reservoirs. This done, the use of the water and of the reservoir sites might be granted to the respective States or Territories, or to individuals or associations, upon the condition that the necessary works should be constructed and the water furnished at fair rates, without discrimination, the rates to be subject to supervision by the Legislatures or by boards of water commissioners duly constituted. The essential thing to be secured is the common and equal use at fair rates of the accumulated water supply. It were almost better that these lands should remain arid than that those who occupy them should become the slaves of unrestrained monopolies, controlling the essential element of land values and crop results.

Better Election Laws.

If any intelligent and loyal company of American citizens were required to catalogue the essential human conditions of life, I do not doubt that with absolute unanimity it would begin with "free and honest elections." And it is gratifying to know that generally there is a growing and non-partisan demand for better election laws. But against this sign of hope and progress must be set the depressing and undeniable fact that election laws and methods are sometimes cunningly contrived to secure minority control, while violence completes the shortcomings of fraud.

Pass the Election Law.

In my last annual message I suggested that the development of the existing law providing a Federal supervision of Congressional elections offered an effective method of reforming these abuses. The need of such a law has manifested itself in many parts of the country, and its wholesome restraints and penalties will be useful in all. The constitutionality of such legislation has been affirmed by the Supreme Court. Its probable effectiveness is evidenced by the character of the opposition that is made to it. It has been denounced as if it were a new exercise of Federal power and an invasion of the rights of the States. Nothing could be further from the truth. Congress has already fixed the time for the election of members of Congress. It has declared that votes for members of Congress must be by written or printed ballots; it has provided for the appointment by the Circuit Courts in certain cases, and upon the petition of a certain number of citizens, of election supervisors, and made it their duty to supervise the registration of voters conducted by the State officers; to challenge persons offering to register; to personally inspect and scrutinize the registry lists, and to affix their names to the lists for the purpose of identification and the prevention of frauds; to attend at elections and remain with the boxes till the votes are all cast and counted; to attach to the registry list and election returns any statement touching the accuracy and fairness of the registry list and election; and to take and transmit to the Clerk of the House of Representatives any evidence of the fraudulent practices which may be presented to them. The same law provides for the appointment of Deputy United States Marshals to attend at the polls, support the supervisors in the discharge of their duties and to arrest persons violating the election law. The provisions of this familiar title in the Revised Statutes have been put to exercise by both the political parties, and in the North as well as in the South, by the filing with the court of the petitions required by law.

It is not, therefore, a question whether we shall have a federal election law, for we now have one, and have had for nearly twenty years, but whether we shall have an effective law. The present law stops just short of effectiveness, for it surrenders to the local authorities all control over the certification which establishes the prima facie right to a seat in the House of Representatives. This defect should be cured. Equality of representation and the parity of the electors must be maintained, or everything that is valuable in our system of government is lost. The qualifications of an elector must be sought in the law, not in the opinions, prejudices, or fears of any class, however powerful. The path of the elector to the ballot-box must be free from the ambush of fear and the enticements of fraud; the count so true and open that none shall gainsay it. Such a law should be absolutely non-partisan and impartial. It should give the advantage to honesty and the control to majorities. Surely there is nothing sectional about this creed, and if it shall happen that the penalties of laws intended to enforce these rights fall here and not there, it is not because the law is sectional, but because, happily, crime is local and not universal. Nor should it be forgotten that every law, whether relating to elections or to any other subject, whether enacted by the State or by the nation, has force behind it. The courts, the marshal or constable, the posse comitatus, the prison, are all and always behind the law.

One can not justly be charged with unfriendliness to any section or class who seeks only to restrain violation of law and of personal right. No community will find lawlessness profitable. No community can afford to have it known that the officers who are charged with the preservation of the public peace and the restraint of the criminal classes are themselves the product of fraud or violence. The magistrate is then without respect and the law without sanction. The floods of lawlessness cannot be leveed and made to run in one channel. The killing of a United States Marshal carrying a writ of arrest for an election offense is full of prompting and suggestion to men who are pursued by a City Marshal for a crime against life and property. But it is said that this legislation will revive race animosities, and some have even suggested that when the peaceful methods of fraud are made impossible they may be supplemented by intimidation and violence. If the proposed law gives to any qualified elector, by a hair's weight, more than his equal influence, or detracts by so much from any other qualified elector, it is fatally impeached. But if the law is equal and the animosities it is to evoke grow out of the fact that some electors have been accustomed to exercise the franchise for others as well as for themselves, then these animosities ought not to be confessed without shame and cannot be given any weight in the discussion without dishonor. No choice is left to me but to enforce with vigor all laws intended to secure to the citizen his constitutional rights, and to recommend that the inadequacies of such laws be promptly remedied.

If to promote with zeal and ready interest every project for the development of its material interests, its rivers, harbors, mines and factories, and the intelligence and peace and security under the law of its communities and its homes, is not accepted as sufficient evidence of friendliness to any State or section, I can not add connivance at election practices that not only disturb local results but rob the electors of other States and sections of their most priceless political rights.

Appropriation Bills.

The preparation of the general appropriation bills should be conducted with the greatest care and closest scrutiny of expenditures. Appropriations should be adequate to the needs of the public service, but they should be absolutely free from prodigality.

I venture again to remind you that the brief time remaining for the consideration of the important legislation now awaiting your attention offers no margin for waste. If the present duty is discharged with diligence, fidelity and courage, the work of the Fifty-first Congress may be confidently submitted to the considerate judgment of the people.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.

It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

All these and many other complaints cured by this wonderful Nervine Tonic.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDER,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach".

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of malignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

M'KINLEYISM IN FRANCE

THE FRENCH ARE ENGAGED IN HIGH TARIFF MAKING.

A Committee in Paris Building a McKinley Wall—No Tom Reed Hurry About It—Maximum Duties for America—Effects of the Democratic Tidal Wave in Europe.

France is at present engaged in reforming her tariff upward, after the McKinley fashion. But there is a difference. France goes about the job in a very leisurely way, allowing an abundance of time for discussion. The Paris correspondent of the London Economist, writing under date of Oct. 30, says that the Customs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies had just held a meeting and outlined a plan to be adopted in the revision.

At this meeting it was pointed out by M. Meline that, as the new tariff must be applied on Feb. 1, 1892, it will be absolutely necessary to vote on the measure by Nov. 1, 1891. The committee must, therefore, finish its labors by next February, he said, as the Chamber would, probably, occupy three months and the Senate two months in discussing the measure. Beginning next February, and allowing for the ordinary summer vacation, this would delay the final passage of the bill till the first of November.

This deliberation is a great contrast with the way in which our McKinleyites rushed the tariff bill through the House last May, in less than two weeks, and when only a small portion of the bill had been discussed. Our Senate took up about six weeks in discussing the McKinley bill, and the Republican organs were extremely impatient of the delay and were clamoring for greater hurry, their catch-word being, "Pass the bill in haste." On the other hand, the French committee plans in advance that their Senate will discuss the tariff measure two months. The French do not seem to take kinkly to suppression of debate, such as we have just seen, and in France there is apparently no demand for a patent double-back-action "tomreed."

The point of chief interest to us in the new French tariff is the fact that it is to be a piece of high McKinleyism, many of our own products coming in for high or even prohibitory duties of the McKinley type. One of the motives for these higher duties, as the French Minister of Commerce says, is "derived from the examples set by other nations." The chief of these other nations is just now the United States, our McKinley tariff having awakened feelings of strong opposition in France, which demanded a general scheme of retaliation against us. It is still fresh in the public mind that M. Ribot, the French Minister, approached the other principal European cabinets with proposals for united action in retaliating upon us. The plan came to nothing, but the same retaliation sentiment which caused the French to amend their grain duties last summer by imposing a tax of 33 cents a bushel on our grain as against 15 cents on that from other countries will find expression in the new measure.

Under the present French tariff live beeves pay $7.25 per head; under the proposed law the duty will be equivalent to about $11.50. The present duty on salted beef is about four-tenths of 1 cent per pound; under the new law it will be raised to slightly less than 2 cents per pound. Lard has been free, but it is to be taxed nearly 2 cents per pound.

The new rates here given, however, are the minimum rates. A peculiarity of the new law will be that it will impose two distinct rates on each article—a minimum and a maximum, and leave the Government to apply the lower or higher rate to the goods of each nation according to the reciprocal trade advantages that each offers to France. The maximum will average about one-fourth higher than the minimum. It goes without saying that our products will be ruthlessly taxed at maximum rates from the start.

Such is the tariff outlook in France now. The baneful example of McKinleyism will apparently be followed to the letter, and our own farmers will be the greatest sufferers through the consequent narrowing of their markets.

There is, however, one ray of hope. The McKinley example is one thing; the tariff action foreshadowed by the late elections will be quite a different example. As the raising of the McKinley wall here raises a high tariff wall in Europe, so the downfall here may cause a like downfall there.

The London Statist, a very able commercial and economic journal, discusses the effects in Europe of our election, and says:

"Everybody knows that American example has, all through the present century, had great weight in European opinion. It is hardly too much to say, indeed, that the American predilection for protection outweighed the English adhesion to free trade, and very considerably contributed to bring protection into favor upon the continent. But now that it has become highly probable that America will get rid of protection, American influence will be transferred from the protectionist to the free trade side all over Europe. Further, the McKinley act excited great resentment all over the continent, and there have been many threats of retaliation. It is possible that retaliation would have been resorted to if the McKinley act were likely to continue upon the American statute book; but, now that its repeal is much more probable, the demand for retaliation will die away. For that reason also the protectionist party on the continent will be weakened. Whether the change of prospects in the United States will have such an effect upon French opinion as to modify in a liberal sense the tariff bill just introduced remains to be seen. But it is at least probable that outside France the revulsion of American feeling will have a great and a lasting influence."

If the Statist is correct in its forecast, the recent Democratic victory will prove a great blessing to our own people in a two-fold way. When our tariff has been cut down to reasonable rates, not only shall we have the advantage of cheaper manufactured commodities at home, but perhaps what is more important, we shall have freer entrance into European markets with our farm products and manufactures, and this freer entrance will vastly enlarge the European demand for American products. The day for the widest possible reciprocity has come.

James G. Blaine said in his speech at Waterville, Me., Aug. 29: "I wish to declare the opinion that the United States has reached a point where one of its highest duties is to enlarge the area of its foreign trade." Removing tariff duties will do the business with a rush.

Buying Handkerchiefs.

The McKinley duty on cotton handkerchiefs is 50 per cent. ad valorem, and in linen handkerchiefs is 60 per cent. In other words, when a woman buys a dollar's worth of cotton handkerchiefs, the price of the handkerchiefs is only 66⅔ cents and the duty is 33⅓. If she buys a dollar's worth of linen handkerchiefs, 63½ cents will represent the price of the goods and the duty will be 37½ cents. Those duties were imposed for the purpose of helping domestic manufacturers to change higher prices for handkerchiefs. That is what our protectionist law-makers mean by "protection." They have found out that women do not believe in protection, and they are laying the blame of their great defeat upon them. Somehow it is extremely difficult to get women to see that it is a good thing to make them pay extra high prices in order to line other people's pockets. Women are queer creatures—to the protectionists.

Obstructing Trade.

The protectionists are continually lamenting the fact that we sell so little of our goods in Mexico and other countries lying south of us. But the matter is very plain. Take Mexico, for example: For the fiscal year 1889 our exports to that country were only $10,000,000, while our imports amounted to $21,000,000.

Hereafter our Mexican trade will make a still more unfavorable showing, both in imports and exports. This appears clear from a recent report from Mr. Fetchet, our Consul at Piedras Negras (Eagle Pass), Mexico. Speaking of the recent changes in Mexico's trade, he says:

"A larger tonnage of ores, low in silver and high in lead, that was formerly shipped to the United States for treatment, is now smelted in Mexico, thus largely swelling the amount of base bullion (silver-lead) to seek a foreign market. Unfortunately, the markets of England and Germany are more advantageous than those of the United States for base bullion. This base bullion forms a very convenient and profitable mode of remittance to meet European maturing credits of the importing merchants of Mexico, so that the use of silver-lead bullion in Europe becomes a factor to be considered in the ultimate determination of the question why Mexico buys so largely of Europe. In the coming year, it is anticipated, there will be a still larger falling off of ore exports to the United States and a consequent increase of silver-lead bullion shipped in transit through the United States to Europe."

All this is quite natural. We put a duty on silver-lead ores to keep them out of the country and insure larger profits to a few Colorado mine-owners. We have accomplished both these objects, and our Consul very naturally finds that Mexico is shipping her products to Europe right through our own country.

In the meantime, what are we gaining by the policy set in motion by our protectionist rulers? The price of pig lead in our markets was 3¾ cents a pound not many months ago. The tariff legislation has caused a rise to 6 cents a pound; and lead has become so scarce that we have begun to import it from Europe again, notwithstanding what was, until the recent rise in price, a prohibitory duty. After the lead has been re-smelted in Europe, it is shipped back to us at an increased price—and all because we refuse to let our smelters have the silver-lead ores free of duty as formerly. Some of our smelters have moved their works to Mexico to escape this duty, and even Leadville, Col., is forced to import the Mexican ores at the increased duty, for mixing purposes. We bought some $6,000,000 worth of these ores from Mexico in 1889; but the importation has fallen off greatly under the duty of 1½ cents per pound.

Provoked by our silver-lead ore duty Mexico has laid retaliatory duties upon some of our products; and already the Treasury reports show a great decline of exports to Mexico of these articles. Are we not paying too much for our protection?

No "Cheap and Nasty" Buttons.

McKinley raised the duty on pearl buttons several hundred per cent., and already our domestic manufacturers have taken advantage of the situation by forming a combination and putting up the price of agate buttons.

The Chicago Dry Goods Reporter has the following to say on the subject:

"If the manufacturers of agate buttons are not careful they are liable to over-reach themselves in the endeavor to raise prices by their combination. The association has fixed a price of 24 cents for B T 1½-line agate buttons, although other manufacturers are selling them at 22½ cents and making a good profit. The manufacturers evidently expect that agate buttons will, in a large measure, take the place formerly held by pearls, and therefore there should be a bonanza in the agate button business. Be this as it may, the people are becoming a little restive under the continual formation of trusts, and in case the agate button people get too obstreperous some method may be found of placing pearl buttons back under the old 25 per cent. ad valorem duty where they belong. The placing of the 2½-cent per line duty on pearl buttons was nothing less than infamous in the first place, and a very little nonsense on the part of the agate button trust might go a long ways in wiping that sort of legislation out of existence."

The button-makers do not seem to remember Senator Sherman's famous warning on the last day of the tariff debate; or perhaps they think that a Senator who votes for high duties, and then stands up and warns manufacturers not to take advantage of them, is not to be much feared in any case. Let the McKinley duty be taken off pearl buttons, and this baby button trust is done for. A few more button trusts will make free-traders of all our women.

Cotton-Weaving North and South.

The rapid development of cotton manufacturing in the South during the past ten years has been one of the most remarkable facts in our industrial progress during that time. The first form of manufacturing taken up was the coarser lines of spinning, then the weaving of the coarser grades of cloth. Now it is announced that the South has begun to compete in the finer grades of cloth with the old and well-established mills of the North, and many persons think that it is only a question of time when that competition will become formidable.

How can such a thing happen if the protectionist doctrine be true that an industry cannot spring up and flourish without protection in a new and undeveloped country in competition with a country long engaged in that industry? Can it be explained by the fact that Massachusetts and South Carolina are not separated by salt water?

Tin in the Black Hills.

The Chicago Inter Ocean, which is about the only prominent advocate of McKinleyism left among the Republican journals of the West, says:

"The tin ore of the Black Hills is richer by fourteen times in pure metal than that of Europe."

It is to be hoped that this is true. If it is true this high tariff organ ought to go on and explain why it is necessary to impose a protective tax of four cents a pound on pig tin. Does the organ claim that with fourteen times the advantage of the Europeans we cannot compete with their pauper tin?

The Difference.

It is reported that in France manufacturers are combining to prevent a duty on raw materials, such materials being now admitted into that country free. On the other hand, we tax raw materials, and McKinley has just piled up higher duties than ever on wool, which is the principal raw material needed by our manufacturers. While French manufacturers are fighting against putting a duty on their materials, the report comes from Philadelphia that since the elections the manufacturers of that city are talking more than ever in favor of free raw materials.

THRIFTY COTTON MILLS.

A CASE WHERE PROTECTION FOSTERS A "COMBINE."

The Great Profits of the Fall River, Mass., Cotton-Weavers—Duties Needlessly High—Cheaper Cotton but Not Cheaper Cloth, and Wages Are Going Lower.

The cotton mills of Fall River, Mass., have had their annual meeting, and the yearly report of earnings and dividends have been made public.

These mills have been complaining of dull times, and they shut down for a short time in September in order that the stocks on hand might be worked off without necessitating a reduction of prices. Besides this, the manufacturers of that city are in a "combine" to prevent the sale of 64x64 plain cotton cloth for printing calicoes at less than 3 5-16 cents a yard. They have kept up this price notwithstanding the fact that cotton is nearly 8 cents per pound lower than last summer.

The capacity of these mills to more than meet the wants of the market may be seen by the fact that they are not infrequently shut down in order to prevent a decline in prices owing to a glutted market. They now have on hand 858,000 pieces of printing cloths, against 249,000 at the same time in 1889 and 68,000 in 1888. With these enormous stocks on hand, these manufacturers form combinations to keep up prices, in spite of the great decline in the price of cotton.

The annual reports of the mills contain some information of much interest to the public in view of the facts just stated. The dividends as declared and the additional earnings laid by as a surplus, or put into improvements, are given in the reports. In order to simplify matters, let us take the actual earnings of a few of these mills, rather than the dividends as paid out, and see what per cent. of the capital this will give.

The Stafford mills have a capital of $800,000, and the net earnings for the year ending Sept. 30 were $122,000, which is equivalent to 14½ per cent. on the capital.

The Narragansett mills earned $61,000 net on a capital of $400,000, equal to 15¼ per cent. on the capital.

The Hargraves mill earned $63,000 net on a capital of $400,000, or nearly 16 per cent.

The net earnings of the King Philip mills were $181,000 on a capital of $1,000,000, or over 18 per cent.

The Union mills made net earnings of 16 per cent., the Bourne mills declared a dividend of 12 per cent., the Tecumseh mills 14, and the Granite mills 19 per cent.

Any one who will turn to the new tariff law will find that the cloth on which these prosperous manufacturers have combined to keep up the price to 3 5-16 cents is taxed at 2¼ cents per square yard, or more than 64 per cent. ad valorem of the artificially high figure maintained by the Fall River manufacturers. Do the people of this country believe that this is a case where the McKinley duty is either needed or deserved by the manufacturers? The duty in this case is not merely protective, it is prohibitory, and the Fall River combination simply takes advantage of the favorable conditions which the tariff creates for their benefit.

There is only one remedy for a combination of this kind—let the people see to it that these trust duties are either lowered or abolished, in order that foreign competition may undermine the combination. So long as the people elect Senators like Sherman who will vote for the highest protective duties and then stand up in the Senate and warn the muanufacturers not to take advantage of the situation thus created, so long may the people expect to foot the bills which make these enormous trust profits possible.

It is idle to say in answer to all this, as the protectionists do, that the price of cotton cloth is much lower now than it was before the war. Of course it is lower; the numerous inventions in cotton spinning and weaving were bound to lower prices. The real question is whether our manufacturers should now be allowed prohibitory duties which enable them to keep up trust prices.

These duties are certainly not needed on the score of labor, for labor in cotton-spinning and weaving is actually cheaper in Massachusetts than in England, and still cheaper than on the continent of Europe. The daily wages are slightly higher with us than in England, but the wages paid by the piece are decidedly lower. An operative in a Massachusetts mill spins or weaves so much more in a day than the English operative that the percentage of labor cost in the finished product is less with us than in England or in any other country.

Notwithstanding this lower cost of labor, cheaper cotton, and great dividends, the tendency in American mills is toward lower wages. The facts already given as to the large earnings of the Fall River mills are taken mainly from an article in the New York Dry Goods Economist. In a column adjoining that article is the following news item:

"The cotton weavers in Lonsdale, R. I., have received a notice of a cut-down. They were getting 53 cents on a fifty-yard long cut, but they are to run a finer grade of goods, with five yards additional on the length, and will receive but 38 cents a cut. The Valley Falls and Ashton weavers' wages have been reduced about as much."

Women's Ways.

When a woman announces that she hates all men, it is an indication that at one time she did not hate one of them enough.

When one woman hears that another woman has a new dress, she knows it is a good time to call on her, for the reason that she will not be at home.

It does not take very long for a slim little girl of 16 to become the kind of a woman who breaks down one end of the spring seat when she rides to town in the wagon.

You can learn something about men from experience, but you can't about women. A widow knows how to please men, but a widower knows nothing about pleasing women.

When a woman grows too old to imagine that every woman in the country is making advances to her husband, she begins to think that every girl in town is making eyes at her son. A woman who is interested in a man is always in hot water on account of some other woman.

They talk of the pleasures of the honeymoon, but if most women could give their testimony, it would be to the effect that they spent theirs in learning how to cook, in burning their fingers, and in seasoning everything they cooked with tears. Too many women do not learn how to fry a potato until they are married, and have to.—Atchison Globe.

Growth of London.

One of the most singular facts about the growth of London is its regularity. It may be roughly taken that every month about a thousand houses are added to London. In August of this year 766,577 houses had to be supplied by the water companies with water; in September that number had increased to 766,797. In August of last year 754,464 houses had to be supplied, or 12,113 below the number in the same month of this year. In September of this year the companies had to supply 10,976 houses more than in September of 1889. This extension is not confined to any one portion of the capital, but a preference is still being shown for the north and northwest suburbs.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Depth of the Sea.

Fifty years ago there was no reason to doubt the correctness of Bonpland's theory that the depth of the deepest sea corresponds to the height of the highest mountain; but the supposed maximum of five miles has now been found to fall short by more than 6,000 feet at three different points—neary midway between the island of St. Helena and Cape Lopez, on the West coast of Africa; sixty miles south of the Maldive Archipelago, and in the "Group of Abysses," as Capt. Baudissin calls a number of remarkable depressions near the eastern extremity of New Guinea.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE AUBURN COURIER,

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.... DECEMBER 4, 1890.

NATIONAL meeting of Farmers' Alliance at Ocala, Florida this week.

MONTANA sends a democrat to represent her in congress, W. W. Dixon.

FT. WAYNE will increase the size of her ice plant for making artificial ice.

P. B. SHILLABER, the humorist, is dead. He was better known as "Mrs. Partington".

ILLINOIS gave a republican majority of 28,000 in 1888. This year the democrats get a majority of 35,000.

RUSSIANS have given Finland a new form of government. Finns are mad, because the old form was much better.

THERE are now about 250,000 Indians all told, and they occupy territory as big as five states like Indiana. A good deal of unoccupied land.

CHICAGO police found an establishment that prepared and sold horseflesh to cheap boarding houses. All the meat was destroyed.

CANADIANS are getting ready to capture the commerce of South America. They say the McKinley bill will prevent the United States from getting it.

CHINESE banker in New York City skipped out last week with $6,000 his fellow Mongolians had deposited with him. Supposed to be now in Canada "Allee samee Melican man".

INDIANAPOLIS SENTINEL has been partly sold to the Belfords of Chicago, who publish Belford's Magazine. They get one-third. The paper will be enlarged and still be democratic.

THE president's message is out. He still believes in high tariff, and wants the McKinley bill to stand. He also advocates the federal election bill known as the Force bill. The message is on our 6th page.

SEVERAL Brazilian warships have been visiting this country. They have been well received. They brought the President a gold medal weighing nearly a pound. It pleased him more than the late election.

DEMOCRATIC majority in this state, as given on members of congress is about 36,000, they running ahead of the state ticket. This proves that the people like their course in congress. The overwhelming majority in the state legislatures shows the same thing.

SENATOR WADE HAMPTON, of South Carolina, was accidently shot by his son while out hunting last week. It was at the same place, nearly, where he lost his leg by being thrown by his mule while hunting, about ten years ago. This time he is but slightly hurt.

Wedded on Thanksgiving.

John T. Picker and Rebecca Edge were married last Thursday evening, Nov. 27, at the residence of George Quince on North Main street, the ceremony being performed by Rev. H. M. Lamport, of the M. E. church. A few invited guests, were present, besides the minister and his wife. They were Mrs Francis Picker mother of the groom, his brother Charles Picker and wife, W. H. Dirrim and wife, parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Long, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Dirrim, Chris. Baker, wife and daughters, Maud and Nettie, besides the host and hostess Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Quince. After the ceremony, the party sat down to a fine collation, the result largely of Mrs. Quince's good taste and skill in that art. The newly wedded pair will of course settle down in Auburn as this place has long been their home. The COURIER wishes them all possible happiness and prosperity,

Rules and Regulations of the Auburn Reading Room.

RULE 1. The Library will be open for the delivery of books from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily, Sundays and legal holidays excepted.

RULE 2. But one book can be taken on each card at a time.

RULE 3. No person shall lend either his library card, or any book belonging to the library, to any one not a member of the same household.

RULE 4. Books may be retained fourteen days, unless otherwise specified. No fourteen day book can be renewed or reissued, to the borrower's family until twenty-four hours after its return to the library. Books returned will be placed upon the library shelves, and will be delivered to the first person applying for them, other than the person or family by whom they have been returned; and no book will be reserved or promised by the librarian in any case whatever.

RULE 5. Books retained for a longer time than is specified, will be subject to a fine of 2 cents a day.

RULE 6. Books retained double the time specified will be sent for by messenger from the library, for which service 10 cents will be charged in addition to the amount of fines already due. No person will receive books who is in arrears for fines and forfeitures, until all such charges are paid.

RULE 7. Injuries to books beyond reasonable wear, and all losses, shall be made good by the borrower to the satisfaction of the Board of Directors. If one volume of a set is lost, the loser will will be held responsible for the value of the whole set, unless the lost volume can be satisfactorily replaced. A book retained more than three months will be deemed lost.

RULE 8. Books of reference, such as dictionaries, encyclopædias, and atlases, can be used only in the Reference Room.

RULE 9. All persons visiting the library rooms will be required to conduct themselves in a quiet, orderly manner, and no loud or continued conversation will be permitted. The use of tobacco in any form is prohibited. Any one abusing the privileges of the library by improper conduct, will be denied the use of the library and admittance to its Room.

Marshal Pfeffri.

That has a pretty good ring to it any-way you fix it. Joe, for everybody calls him "Joe," is a whole-souled fellow to begin with. Then he is a hardworking, industrious man, and by several years experience in assisting the marshal and doing various things for the town board, he has made himself perfectly familiar with all the duties of the office. Then, too, he has shown a disposition to prevent any waste, and to save at every point, every cent he can for the town. This is a very valuable feature, and one that should be a moving force with every man who takes a public office. He believes that "a public office is a public trust, and carries that principle into his everyday work. As soon as possible after his appointment he started out to repair the streets, and everywhere, could be seen the fresh loads of gravel, "put where they would the most good." Among the first and most vital points he tackled, was the Ninth street bridge. The sidewalks had failed to connect with the bridge ever since the bridge was torn down and rebuilt, and people had to jump and scramble for dear life when they went over. This was positively dangerous at night. Now, thanks to the authorities and the new marshal, it is in good shape. He is also opening up on the tough boys, and has already scared a lot of bad ones sufficiently to drive them off the streets at night and back to their homes. He will find plenty to do in this line, and will earn the gratitude of all our people by putting a stop to some of their rowdyism. He has tackled a few of the too common drunks, and put them where they belong, and even the drunken editor of the Garrett Clipper has not felt safe to make a two weeks' spectacle of himself lately. Perhaps we may rejoice in being temporarily rid of this particular nuisance. And in this good work of the marshal, we do not wish to ignore the efforts of the town board, who are bending all their energies to do the town as much service as possible at as little cost as they can. The number of fire wells has been increased and some of the old ones put in repair. Streets have been fixed up, and gutters cleaned, and much other good work done, or commenced. Let the good work go on.

Literary Note.

The J. G. Cupples Company of Boston, will soon issue a very dainty holiday book entitled "Aunty's Elfin Land." It is a collection of fairy stories; or rather, the combined histories of three children who had most strange adventures in the land of "the little folk." They are written by Mrs. Mariah Hildreth Parker, and are illustrated by Herman D. Murphy. The book will commend itself to those who are in search of holiday gifts for children who have outgrown the jingle of nursery rhymes. Mrs. Parker is the widow of Col. J. M. G. Parker, for many years a prominent citizen of New Orleans, and is the sister-in-law of Gen. B. F. Butler.

Mrs. Beecher's Reminiscences.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher's "Reminiscences" of her late husband, which she is now writing, has been purchased by The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, and the articles will shortly begin in that periodical. The series will have for its title "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him," and will cover the entire period of his fifty-seven years of married life, from young Beecher's first acquaintance with his wife, his college life, their courtship and marriage, his first public speech, the first year of married life with an income of $300, and so all through the great preacher's life until his later triumphs, his last sickness and days, and his death.

Commissioner's Court.

The board met on Monday, and proceeded to reorganize. Mr. Platter whose time had ceased, retired from the board, and was succeeded by James Henderson, the newly elected member. Board at once went on with its work, and has been quite busy, with ditches, bills, licenses and the like. As much of this is unfinished we cannot give a full report this week. The board re-organized by electing Mr. Hoffelder president for the coming year. We shall give a full report next week.

Winter Millinery.

Our large stock of fine winter millinery must be reduced as the season is far advanced. As the season is far advanced, everything will be sold very low to close out our winter stock as our expenses are small we can afford to sell for much less than can be done in a larger town. Ladies are kindly invited to call and inspect our goods while our stock is yet complete with all the novelties of the season.

Two Old Chums.

Old Chums at the Opera House Tuesday night promises to be the event of the season and it is one of the best companies on the road. Old Chums is one of the funniest comedies ever written, and with Messrs Field and Winchell as the Old Chums and a clever supporting company of comedians and specialty artists go to make an entertained that cannot be beat. Mr. Harry Austin as a musician justly deserves the title of prince of musical marvels. Johnny Patten, champion balance clog dancer is the holder of six gold medals. The peerless mandolin quartet and comical calliope brigade are all features of merit. For an evening of good pure solid fun no one should fail to see this show.

That Traction Engine Case.

All our readers will remember the Jones traction engine case which cost our county four or five hundred dollars some two years ago. It was a new case to us, as well to the attorneys and courts of the state. Our then county attorney Dills advised the county commissioners against allowing the claim, upon the ground that as our bridges were not made for the purpose of carrying such ponderous machines, there was no negligence by the county, because the bridge did not sustain the traction engine which weighed nearly five tons, if the bridge would have safely carried ordinary loads. The case was tried twice, Judge McBride holding that the county must maintain and build bridges sufficiently strong to carry almost anything the people might want to drive over them.

As it was a new and unsettled question in Indiana, Mr. Bowman and the attorney wished, to carry the case to the supreme court, but the other commissioners declined. Last week Judge Mitchell of the supreme court rendered the following decision in a similar case which shows that Judge McBride was wrong and our county attorney was right in the Jones case. It is in the Indianapolis Sentinel of Nov. 25, as follows:

BRIDGE—UNUSUAL USE OF—NEGLIGENCE. 14,554. The city of Wabash vs Eli. Carver, administrator. Wabash C. C. Reversed. Mitchell, Judge.

(1) Cities are only bound to construct bridges of such dimensions and strength, and keep them in such a state of repair as to afford facilities for the ordinary travel, or for the customary use to which they were devoted and for which they were designed, or to such public use, even though it might be only occasional, as the city knew they were being devoted to, in reliance upon their dimensions and apparent strength. (2) In the absence of an averment in a complaint for damages against a city for the death of a person occasioned by the falling of a bridge while it was being crossed by a steam traction engine, that the structure was adapted or designed to carry or had carried loads equal in weight to that under which it collapsed, it can not be held that the complaint allowed any dereliction on the part of the city in not anticipating and providing for the presumably unusual and extraordinary use to which it was subjected. (3) One who contemplates going upon a bridge with a vehicle of unusual construction or with a load of extraordinary weight, must himself ascertain the probable sufficiency of the bridge, and take notice of its condition and apparent strength, of the purpose for which it was built, and of the kind of vehicle ordinarily used thereon, and if he does not he must take the risk of injury.

Farmers' Alliance Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Farmers' Alliance societies of this county in Ensley's Hall on Saturday Dec. 6, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of organizing a county alliance and establishing a bureau of information and trade system. The officers of the various sub alliance societies will see that their order will be represented by the proper number of delegates. All alliance men are invited to be present. Thomas S East state organizer will be present to install the officers.

A Prominent Farmer.

Mr. Nicholas Wagoner, of Monroe, Ind., gives us the following statement in regard to Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. He says: I have used a great many different kinds of medicines for bronchitis, a disease I have had for the last ten years, and found nothing that would relieve me until I commenced to use Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. I took ten 50c bottles of this medicine and was entirely cured, and can recommend it to any person that is suffering from this disease.

Pounded the Pastor.

Seriously pounded,
Somewhat confounded
Slightly astounded,
Completely surrounded,
Not badly wounded:
Twice in one day,
They came to the fray,
Not for a flay.
But for a short stay,
Left much behind them,
To surely remind them,
Of the battle they fought,
When all of them brought,
Their pounds to their pastor that day.

In short the Baptist people and friends, old and young, twice on thanksgiving day, came loaded with good things to the home of their pastor, Rev T. C. Smith, and left for him and his family, many comforts of life, for which he tenders to them his entire thanks. After spending a short season in prayer and social conversation together, the the friends went home leaving the preacher in full possession of his own reflections.

Poultry.

10 000 pounds of poultry wanted at once at the Palace meat market. I am now prepared to buy all kinds of poultry fo which I will pay the highest markert price during the season.

The State Alliance.

The state meeting of the farmers' alliance at Indianapolis last week, proved what we have noticed before, that their ideas on most vital questions now before the people, are almost exactly those so long entertained by the democratic party. The resolutions demand that all public officers shall be paid fixed salaries; that a free and unlimited coinage of silver shall be adopted; that the state tax laws shall be revised so as to provide for a fair and equal assessment; that pension legislation shall be fair, and the passage of private pension bills stopped; that gambling in products which are articles of food shall be made a crime The Australian election law was indorsed, add the presence of deputy United States marshals at the polls was denounced as reflecting upon the ability of the citizens of Indiana to conduct elections.

Andersonville Redeemed.

(Indianapolis Sentinel.)

MACON, Ga., Nov. 27. The site of the old Andersonville prison is now the property of E. S. Jones post, G. A. R. of Macon. The commander, I D. Narford of Jones post, returned yesterday from Americus, where the formal transfer of the property was made. The purchase, negotiations for which were begun a year ago, included eighty acres of land on which were located the stockade, fortifications and rifle pits of the historic prison. The land was bought from George Kennedy, a negro, and the purchase price was $1,500. In thirty days the work of converting the site into a national G. A. R. post will be begun. The money for this purpose has been contributed by G. A. R. men in Georgia and elsewhere. The purchase will be surrounded by a hundred-foot driveway and a wide avenue will lead to the railroad station; walks, drives, fountains and beds of flowers and rare shrubs and berries will be plentiful and in the center, on an elevation, will be erected an elegant club house for the use of members of the G. A. R. and their guests. Each point of special interest will be marked by a suitable monument or building and at Providence spring a large ampitheater will be erected for the holding of decoration day exercises. The superintendent, J. M. Bryant of the Andersonville national cemetery, will overlook the making of these improvements.

SHERIFF'S SALE

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein John Leas is plaintiff and Josiah McAntarfer, Mary M. McAntarfer, Isaac Hague, Charles Raut and Jacob Lowenstine are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of Five hundred six dollars and sixty-one cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, December 27, 1890.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

The undivided one-third in the following tract, to-wit: Beginning at the east line of the North-east quarter (¼) of section nine (9) in township thirty-four (34) north of range thirteen (13) east at the south east corner of out lot owned by Elijah Hill, in said quarter, thence west on a line to the Jackson, Saginaw and Ft. Wayne railroad lands, thence south westerly along the line of said railroad lands to the south line of north-west quarter of said section nine [9], thence east on the quarter line to the east line of said section nine [9] and thence north on said line to place of beginning, being a tract known as the lands of the hiers of Jacob McAntarfer, deceased. Said to contain a tract of about ninety-three acres, situated in DeKalb county, State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

PHIL. PLUM,
Sheriff of DeKalb county, Indiana,
Wm. H. LEAS, Attorney for Plaintiff.
Sheriff's office Dec. 11th, 1890.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the estate of William Nelson deceased, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 23rd day of December, 1890, and show cause, if any, why my FINAL SETTLEMENT ACCOUNTS with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive shares

Witness my name this 1st day of December, 1890. LORENZO D. NELSON, Administrator.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate.

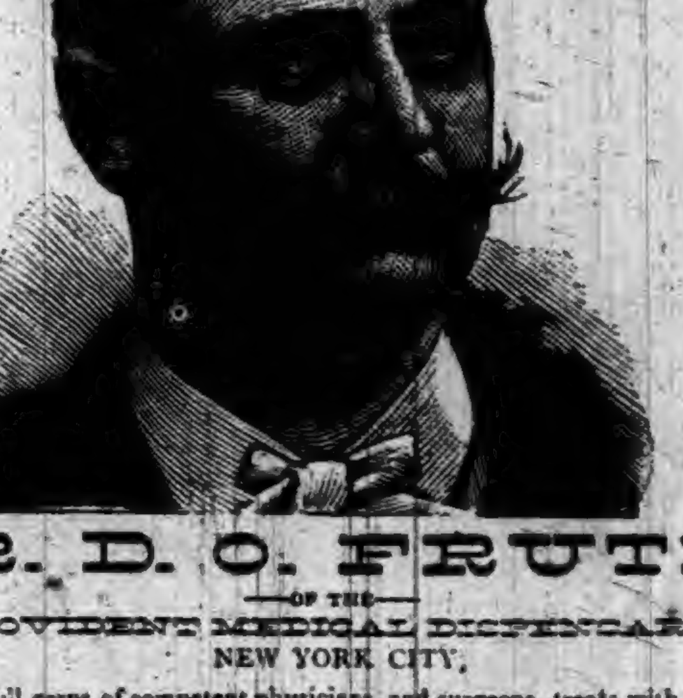
DR. FRUTH,

Of New York, the well known and successful Specialist in Chronic Diseases, and diseases of the Eye and Ear by request of many friends and patients, has decided to visit

AUBURN, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1890.

Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. One day only.

CHRONIC DISEASES,
—AND—
DISEASES of the EYE and EAR
A SPECIALTY



FREE.
Consultation and Examination

DR. D. O. FRUTH,

—OF THE—

PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,
NEW YORK CITY,

Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaption or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz:—He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. Let those given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhœa, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphillis, St Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the traces of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and [illegible] you positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failure. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free.

Western Address, DR. FRUTH,
TOLEDO, OHIO.

REFERENCES—We, the undersigned, do cheerfully and conscientiously recommend Dr. Fruth as a gentleman of rare professional ability, ripe in judgment, humane to a fault, considerate in price and enthusiastic in relief of his fellow men, and we therefore urge the afflicted to avail themselves of his superior skill:—Granville M. Weeks, M. D., L. L. D., President Provident Dispensary, N. Y.; T. Meredith Maxwell, A. M., M. D., N. Y.; Orrin Pomeroy, M. D., N. Y.; V. M. Davis, M. D., N. Y.; W. E. W[illegible], M. "I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral freely in my practice, and recommend it in cases of whooping cough among children, having found it more certain to cure that troublesome disease than any other medicine I know of." So says Dr. Bartlett, of Concord, Mass.

Treutman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

I was in need of a friend, but realized the full meaning of the word friendship, it was a task for me to choose out of the multitude. The same thing holds good when we are sick. We know we are in need of medicine, but find it hard work to choose from the mass. Do not jump hastily at anything that is offered you. The compounds you take, oftentimes relieve the pain but injure the system in such a manner that you only find it out when it is too late. Loose's Extract of Red Clover is nature speaking to you through one of its servants. If you suffer from rheumatism, scrofula, eruptions, running sores, any and all blood disorders, indigestion, sick headache and constipation or sour stomach, nature says to you, take Red Clover. Our Fluid Extract contains absolutely nothing but Red Clover and will not injure a baby. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

Dyspepsia and its attendant ills are quickly cured by Simmons Liver Regulator.

George Patterson was here last week at Thanksgiving. He is now located at Warsaw.

Mrs. Merica and daughter Stella, visited friends in Ft. Wayne last Friday and Saturday.

W. J. Wallace and L. T. Rice have planted a row of maple trees along their lots on West Seventh street.

Hundreds of teams in town Saturday. The day was so nice that everybody came in to trade and to visit.

There will be a merry Christmas in every family, whose presents are selected from our holiday stock, Robbins & McCord. 51

Dr. and Mrs. Buchtel helped out the Thanksgiving feasts in Ligonier last week, in the society of their people and former neighbors.

Will our Concord correspondent tell us about the "pioneer window" spoken of. It may be a good idea for some other parts of the county.

Little Katie Kiblinger has been quite sick, but Mrs. Swartz who has attended her, reports her much better, and with a fair chance for speedy recovery.

The Press says the democratic papers are quarreling over the patronage already. This is the first we have heard of it. Perhaps the wish is father to the item.

Three friends of the COURIER G. W. Murr, Sam. Squires and Wm. Ryan called last Thursday, and helped to make the editor enjoy thanksgiving all the more.

J. C. Miller, the popular candy maker from Hudson, was here Saturday. His hot candy goes down easy with the young folks, and in fact is popular with grown people.

A very good holiday gift for for your distant friends, would be a copy of the COURIER a year. They would get ten times as much of the news from the old home, as they could in any other way.

Mr. and Mrs. George Quince have our thanks for a generous supply of wedding cake from the wedding feast at their residence last Thursday. It was nice but very perishable—seemed to disappear rapidly.

John Feagler met with a painful accident last week. He was piling up logs on a new piece of land on his farm west of town, in order to burn and get rid of them. In some way one of them fell on to him, breaking one of his legs.

Talk of advancement in machinery and and the sewing machine cannot be over looked. The White is the highest state of perfection in finish, quiet running, strength, durability and convenience, of all others. Sold by G. W. Stahl. 52

The Postal telegraph office, has been moved into the new building, so that instead of going up the stair west of the postoffice, you go up the stairway next east of it. All who have occasion to take a ride on McDougal's wires should make a note of this change.

There is a good deal of petty thieving going on in town, especially in the line of clothes and wood. Somebody is evidently getting ready for winter. Several families have suffered, but the meanest theft that has come to our notice, is the robbing of Mrs. Rickard of her little stock of wood. She is a lady who works hard to support her family and anyone who would steal from her is below the level of the common thief.

The Thanksgiving dinner at the M. E. church was well patronized. We believe they cleared some seventy dollars. We are glad to hear it, for these self sacrificing ladies are bending every nerve, to assist in building their church, just as they always assist in every good work. We feel sure the people of Auburn appreciate the sacrifices her ladies of various denominations have made and are still making, and the debt of gratitude we owe them.

The Press says Indiana will have a factory for making tin plate "thanks to the McKinley bill," that will employ 400 hands. Well, suppose it does. Why should the two millions of Indiana people pay extra prices for their tin, just to accomodate those 400? These same 400 men, would have been employed at some thing else, if there had been no tin industry here. And in fact it is more than likely the men will be brought from England, and then no Indiana man will be used. Why should we thank McKinley for giving us higher prices and no more work?

Last week's Garrett Bologna was stuffed full of errors as usual. It had a blood curdling story about John Shugers having trouble with C. P. Houser, and waylaying Mr. H. and striking him. There is not an atom of truth in the whole screed. The gentlemen have had no trouble whatever. Mr. Shugers very properly resents the item in that disreputable sheet. The COURIER gladly sets the matter right, and the people all over this county will then know the truth. But by the last of this week, we expect half a dozen papers elsewhere, edited largely by the shears, to come back at us, with this story about Houser and Shugers having a deadly row. It may console these papers to know that about everything they copy from that ragged sheet is as much without foundation, as the above named item is. The trouble seems to be that some one will get the editor's (?) ear when he is drunk, and on sobering off partly, a day or so later, he can't get the story right, and so invents a new one.

"Old Chums" Dec. 9.

Wilson's bargain table for misses' high cut shoes $1.40.

The L. L. C. will meet with Mrs. Tillie McCord this week.

Dr. S. B. Johnson, dentist, will be in his office at Waterloo on Thursday of each week.

J. H. Krontz, of Wilmington, was here Saturday. He teaches this winter in Butler township.

The new rooms east of the postoffice are tasty and very convenient. They are nearing completion.

A good holiday remembrance to the COURIER, would be a new subscriber, one of your neighbors for instance.

The nickel social of the Presbyterian church will be entertained by Mrs. G. C. Ralston on Friday afternoon of this week. All are cordially invited.

The Foster Furniture Co., of Fort Wayne sell lamps of all kinds, baby carriages and decorated crockery toilet sets at one-third less than usual price.

Come early. Remember our holiday stock opens at its best, so call at once and make your selections while our line is full and complete. Robbins & McCord. 51

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

The reading room will be formally opened next Monday evening by an entertainment. The adjoining room will be used for this purpose. There will be music and addresses and various literary exercises.

The best $25 bedroom set you have ever seen is now being offered by the Foster Furniture Co., at Fort Wayne. Goods shipped to Auburn with freight charges prepaid, provided your bill amounts to $25 or more.

Frank Borst and Frank Dills are doing the work in the auditor's office. Both are extra good men, and familiar with all the work, and will prove valuable to Mr. Coffinberry in the management of this important office.

A cosy little Thanksgiving party assembled at Mr. Dills' residence last Thursday including among its numbers Judge and Mrs. McClellan and ye editor's family. All spent a few hours most pleasantly, as all do who meet there.

Scores of musical novelties at the Opera House Dec. 9, where the famous "Old Chums" will be given here for the first time. The company has just completed a star tour through the Dominion of Canada, where they have won golden opinions.

Bob Burdette, the funny man will lecture at Angola next Monday evening, Dec. 8, on his great subject the "Rise and Fall of the Mustache." We presume some of our people will want to go up and enjoy this evening of "fun and philosophy."

Nearly everyone of our democratic exchanges comes out with a vigorous endorsement of the course Hon. Freeman Kelley is taking in regard to meeting the people and, consulting with them. All are agreed that this is the proper course for a representative of the people, to take. And so it is.

Several of our subscribers, who have never got careless before, have allowed their subscription to get way back. We hope such will make an effort to pay up, or a part at least. Those living here can see us any day or evening, and we hope they will attend to it. Those at a distance can send by a friend, or by mail, or anyway.

Geo. H. Hoffman, so well known to our people, is now lieutenant governor of South Dakota, having been elected at the recent election. He was a member of the first senate, which met there a year ago. Truly old DeKalb gets a representation on the front seats always, or nearly always. We congratulate Mr. H., on his advancement, and hope he will hold the South Dakota Senate in check with a more impartial rule than that of Speaker Reed.

The Purdue boys were beaten in the game of foot ball at Indianapolis last week, by the club of Butler University. Early in the game, Josiah Teeters whom they considered their best player, was hurt, and the Purdue boys lost ground from that time on. The dailies spoke of him as the "Giant of the Purdue Club." Another DeKalb boy to the front. That evening the triumphant Butler men, hired a four horse coach and started out to show themselves, but on turning a corner, they broke down the big rig, and several were seriously hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. McClellan started back to Washington on Saturday evening train over the B. & O. They had passed the few weeks between sessions here at their home and among their neighbors very pleasantly. Not only had they greeted old friends but had made many new ones. They go back after this brief season of rest carrying with them, and leaving with our people here, pleasant memories of their brief stay at home. To the Judge, the new session will be particularly pleasant. He goes back with a three-fold increased majority from the people he has so faithfully served, and must feel that this means approval. He also goes to meet and congratulate his fellow democrats in congress on the recent great victory in which the people all over the Union had shown their approval, by giving greater majorities to them, and adding to the next House many new members. Then, too, he will meet the republican members of the present House, with a knowledge that the tables have been turned on them and that the democrats of the House will soon have the power to heap coals of fire on their heads, by showing a magnanimity to a minority to which Reed and his followers have been strangers.

Mrs. Will Rakestraw has a lady relative visiting her.

The meetings at the Baptist church were well attended and full of interest.

A slight snow fell Sunday evening, about half an inch but by noon Monday, had about disappeared.

Get your mill feed, oats, corn and flour at Ford & Maxwell's store across the street from Ed Baker's.

Mrs. J. W. Shaffer, and a sister of Mr. Shaffer, are over at Pierceton this week visiting the relatives at that place.

The "Two Old Chums" must not be mixed up with the "Two Old Pals." It is a differerent company and different play altogether.

Ford & Maxwell south side of West Eighth street. Keep all fresh stock of flour, mill feed, oats, corn etc. Call on them for these things.

Wm. Sheffer, the harness maker, has moved into his new room next to the post office. It is a fine one, just such as he needs for his business.

C. P. Hammon, of Franklin, was here yesterday. As secretary for the Patrons of Industry of this county, he was looking up some statistics for them.

There will be preaching at the Presbyterian church by Rev. George Wade Healy of Chicago. Let all take notice, and we hope to see a full attendance.

Mr. Coffinberry is in the office here, part of the time now while the commissioners are in session. His successor at Garrett, has not yet been appointed.

After the heavy rains ceased, the weather became settled, and the roads got into good shape solid and smooth, much better than is usual for the last weeks of November.

A letter from J. W. Tarney, containing his subscription adds. "I can't get along without the COURIER. It is doing good work knocking out the high tariff and the McKinley bill."

Fashionable goods, neat fits, perfect fitting suits, made on honor and promptly, at G. H. Yesbera's, Auburn's popular merchant tailor. Call and see his splendid goods and nice work.

It will pay you to take advantage of the very reasonable prices we are asking for the neatest, handsome and most desirable line of Christmas gifts ever shown in Auburn. Robbins & McCord.

Henry S. Bartholomew, president of the Elkhart county Alliance, was here this week, attending the farmers' meeting. He is a young man of unusual promise, and a prominent farmer of his section.

The editor and wife spent Sunday in Columbia City with the relatives there. It will be of interest to those who are scattered over the country to know that all are well, and prospering at Whitley's county seat.

A dispatch from Washington to the Indianapolis Sentinel, dated Sunday evening, says: Judge C. A. O. McClellan of the Twelfth district and his wife reached here to-night. He is greatly pleased with the political outlook and says democracy has come to stay.

Sylvester Imhoff, a well known Waterloo young man, who has been at Columbia City in the ice business about eight years, will move to Auburn as soon as he can secure a house. He was up here last week, and again this week, looking the town over, but found desirable dwellings very scarce.

A load of young people from Angola were here on Thanksgiving day, Miss Susie Soule, Miss Lula Gale, Mr. Hollie Williams and Mr. Fred. Williamson. They enjoyed a fine dinner at the Hotel Locke in Waterloo, and a nice visit with their young friends in Auburn.

Our lively Smithfield friend Wesley Jackman was here Monday and made our office a visit. He is an active worker in the Alliance and believes that much good will be done by their organization. He believes in reform in many places, including a fixed basis for the salary of officers.

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday afternoon with Miss Keeran. Program, Outline History of England, Mrs. Moody; Our English, Miss Ramsey; The Intellectual Developement of the English People, Mrs. Dills; An English Scholar of the Middle Ages, Miss Keeran; Select Reading, Miss Keeran.

Hon. A. N. Martin of the Wabash district, was in Ft. Wayne last week, and in an interview with a reporter of the "Press" among other things had this to say of the member from this district: "In regard to McClellan, member of congress from this district, he was a clear, intelligent, able man, never losing his balance, always in the best of condition, true to his friends, and true to his district. He is a hard man to beat."

D. H. Patty, a prominent nurseryman in Geneva, New York has written us enquiring where he can get a few good, reliable men to solicit orders. He wishes men to canvass and take orders for Trees, Shrubs, and Vines for fall delivery and promises steady employment to good salesmen. If any of our readers desire a good position we would advise them to write to Mr. Patty for particulars. Address with reference, D. H. PATTY, Nurseryman, Geneva, New York.

F. P. Engle, who moved here a few months ago, and occupied his residence on South Jackson, has moved back to Albion, where he has been assigned all of Noble county, for the Cent'l Life Insurance Company. Mr. Engle has had experience in this work and being a bright, intelligent man, with a thorough business turn, he will prove a valuable man for that popular company. The Central has done a great deal of business in this county, and to our personal knowledge has paid its losses promptly. So we can commend to the people of Noble county not only the Central, but its agent Mr. Engle, as worthy of confidence.

John Anthony, of Stametstown, lost a valuable horse last Saturday. The cause seems to have been inflammation of the bowels.

Come to headquarters where your money will go the fathest and where you are sure to find just what you want for Christmas. Robbins & McCord.

The ladies of the W. R. C. will entertain a nickel social at the residence of Mrs. G. W. Gordon, Tuesday, Dec. 9, 1890, from 2 till 5 p. m. All are invited. Also ladies who are not members of the corps.

Waldo Hill, the lightning rod man, who has been in court so often skipped his bail bond at Ft. Wayne last week, and now the officers are looking him up again. Waldo bids fair to rival our own darling Hazzard in thrilling experiences about the court house.

George Shugers and Annie Eckhart were married on Thanksgiving, Nov 27, at the residence of Charles Eckhart. They are of our most popular and wide awake young people, and we predict for them many years of happiness, and add our best wishes to that end.

The Press says that Treasurer Sawvell has employed Charles Miser to assist him. This is not so. Mr. Miser may be a very worthy young man, but he has not been employed. As the COURIER stated, D. Z. Hoffman, an experienced and efficient man, will help when needed.

It is pretty certain that the Wabash road will be built from Montpelier. At the St. Louis meeting last week, they gave Mr. Dills no encouragement for the Auburn route, and he came away fully believing that Montpelier gets it. So did the Butler Kendallville, and Ligonier folks.

At the Farmers' Institute here, the attendance is not very full, but the work done is very valuable and interesting. We could only be there a short time. The talk was then on sheep raising, opened by Amos Walsworth. We shall try and speak of the meeting more fully next week, as it is too late for this.

The Ft. Wayne News don't take much stock in the Pennington air ship business. It says Pennington was a crank who could invent some things like his road machine, but he had no practical business ability, and intimates that some people there would like to see him back in Ft. Wayne.

In view of the fact that they have but one price, that they carry the largest and most stylish stock, that, they handle only the best made goods, and that they guarantee every article sold, would it not be the part of wisdom for you to purchase all your Furniture and Carpets of the Foster Furniture and Carpet Co., at Fort Wayne.

W. H. Dills returned from St. Louis last Thursday, having with A. J. Baxter and C. S. Stoy, of Butler, Mr. Keller and Mr. Markey, Kendallville, and Mr. Gerber, of Ligonier, who were also in that city in the interest of the Butler and Kendallville line, met the president, vice-president and chief engineer of the Wabash, and had quite a lengthy interview in regard to their proposed extension from Chicago east to a point on the Detroit division. As we are informed those officers gave but little encouragement to the friends of either the Butler or Auburn routes. However, they seemed pleased to meet these representatives, treated them courteously and listened to all that was said. And while they claimed that their people had not looked with favor on either of the routes, they said the actual route had not been so definitely settled that it could not be changed, and that they would further investigate the advantages offered by the Butler and Auburn routes. They also said that the financial condition of the country was such at present, that they could not go into the money markets and sell their bonds to get money, with which to construct their proposed extension for several months, yet it was thought they would take active steps next spring in all probability. Certain data in regard to the Auburn route was desired, and since his return, Mr. Dills has been quite busy forwarding the necessary statements, which he thinks will be favorably considered.

REDSKINS' RUCTION.

General Miles on the Indian Situation.

Gen. Miles in an interview regards the Indian situation as very grave, and says that the seriousness and danger of the situation have not been exaggerated. He says that the disaffection is more widespread than it has been for many years, and the tribes are in thorough sympathy. The plot, he says, is more comprehensive than anything ever inspired by the prophet, Tecumseh, or even Pontiac. When asked if the campaign preparations were completed, he said: "Not quite, but everything will be in readiness in a few days. All that is possible is being done to encourage the loyal, and reduce the number and influence of the hostiles, and in this way an outbreak may be averted. Gen. Miles estimates the number of affected Indians at about 30,000, which means about 4,000 fighting men, and says there are 6,000 more in the Indian Territory who will have to be watched in case active operations take place. They are well armed, every buck having a Winchester and knowing how to use it, and an outbreak would cost the lives of a great many men and destruction of hundreds of homes in the Northwest."

Presidential Pardons.

Andrew McDonald, sentenced in the Western District of Michigan, September 24, 1890, to four months' imprisonment and $300 fine for timber depredation, George Collins, sentenced in the Southern District of New York, January 31, 1890, to thirteen months' imprisonment for a scheme to defraud, and W. F. Smith, sentenced in the District of Minnesota to one year's imprisonment for taking mail from a postoffice without authority, have been pardoned by the President. The sentence of Charles Amyot to eighteen months' imprisonment and $500 fine for smuggling in the Northern District of California was commuted to fifteen months' imprisonment and the fine was remitted. The sentence of Henry J. Thorup to six months' imprisonment for unlawful cohabitation, imposed by the District Court in District of Utah under the Edmunds bill, was commuted to three months.

Next Apportionment.

It is believed at Washington that the Census Committee will agree upon an apportionment bill which will settle the number of representatives at 350 or one or two members less, at 348. The changes would be gains: Arkansas 1, California 1, Colorado 1, Illinois 1, Massachusetts 1, Michigan 1, Minnesota 2, Missouri 1, Nebraska 3, New Jersey 1, Oregon 1, Pennsylvania 2, Texas 2, Washington 1, Kansas 1.

Losses: Indiana 1, Kentucky 1, South Carolina 1, Virginia 1. According to this table the gains and losses are distributed as follows: The classification being based on those in vogue before the late elections. The Republicans would gain 15, the Democrats 5. The Democrats would lose 4. This would be a net gain to the Republicans of 14 counting the States as before.

Hutch Played Seven Up.

B. P. Hutchinson, the well-known and wealthy Chicago Board of Trade man, has been made defendant in a suit for $10,000 brought by Samuel H. Bonnes, a broker, as plaintiff. The suit is the outgrowth of a friendly game of "seven up," in which Hutchinson, Bonnes and one Lowenstine engaged several days ago. When the game broke up Hutchinson found himself several thousand dollars behind, represented by I. O. U's. given to his fortunate opponents. He was asked to replace these slips of paper by a check on a bank, but he most emphatically refused to do so on that occasion, as well as later on. Hence the suit.

Murdered Their Own Child.

Mont. Norris and Minnie Mabbitt are in jail at Indianapolis, charged with the murder of Minnie's three-weeks old child. The girl has confessed that they took the child to the outskirts of the city and drowned it. The Mabbitts live in Flora, Ind. Four years ago, Lulla Mabbitt, their sister, was murdered by her betrayer, Amos J. Green, who was taken from jail and lynched by a mob.

Boiler Explosion.

The boiler of the large saw mill on Mescopeck mountain, near Berwick, Pa., owned by Mr. Adams, of this place, exploded. The mill was completely wrecked Fred and Ira Groover, sons of Stephen Groover, and two other men were killed.

Collingwood, Ohio, Nearly Wiped Out by Fire.

The business part of Collingwood, a suburb of Cleveland, was wiped out by fire. The postoffice and Odd Fellows' Hall were among the buildings destroyed. Loss, $50,000; origin, unknown.

Ended His Sufferings.

Martin Mergel, a well-known and respected young man of Fort Wayne, committed suicide by shooting. He had been suffering a long time with consumption.

The New York "World" Not Sold.

Joseph Pulitzer denies that he has sold and George W. Childs and Mr. Drexel deny that they have purchased the World. The story of the sale is absolutely false.

Shot by the Sheriff.

A dispatch from Oak Ridge, La., reports a serious shooting affray there. Two men, named Whitney and Shanks, got into a difficulty with Bart Gardner, and after they were separated the constable, with a posse, undertook to arrest them. Upon their refusal to surrender a general fusilade took place, and it is reported that both Whitney and Shanks were killed, together with two other men that joined them.

Big Immigration.

In November 3,803 immigrants were landed in Baltimore, an increase of 1,540 over November, 1889.

Horse Flesh for Food.

Chicago special: Officer Devine, meat inspector of the health office, reported the existence of a horse rendering establishment, two blocks west of Western Avenue, on the north side of the canal, and kept by a man named Henry Brackman. In a vault in the premises were found four barrels of corned or pickled horseflesh. In Brackman's house near by two hind quarters were found, nicely dressed and hung up, and on the table were found portions of horseflesh cooked and ready to be served. Brackman says that the animals are sold for food for hogs, but the care used in dressing the meat, and the fact that Brackman's family use it, gives strong coloring to the supposition that Brackman is carrying on an active trade in horseflesh with the lower class of restaurants. All the meat found was condemned and kerosened, and Brackman summoned to appear for examination.

WICKED WHITE.

The Bold Barrister Who Ran a Bogus Divorce Mill and How He Fleeced People.

A special from Hartford, Conn., says: Robert M. White, the lawyer, of New York, who ran a bogus divorce mill at 145 Broadway and fled to avoid arrest, recently succeeded in swindling three Hartford women, one man, and probably others yet to hear from. His victims also include New Haven people. About a year ago a woman in Nebraska who supposed that she had been divorced by a decree at Newington, Conn., found, when she was about to marry another man, there was cause to fear that she had been duped by this same lawyer and was not divorced. She wrote a letter addressed to the "Clerk of the Superior Court of Newington, Newington County, Conn." She learned in time that she had been defrauded. In one case, which recently came to light, White secured from a woman a total of $38. She saw an advertisement in a New York paper of divorces granted without publicity and wrote to secure his services. The result was she paid him $5 advance and later $33 for alleged decree of divorce which came to her C. O. D. through the United States Express. It was dated at Hebron, a small village in Northern Indiana not far from Chicago. The great red seal bears the words, "Supreme Court," and it's signed W. W. Ball, Judge. The purchaser of this queer document showed it to a policeman the other day who informed her that it was bogus. She rushed off to a female friend who had a decree in progress through White's divorce mill. The woman had paid one or two installments and immediately left for New York to recover her money. It is understood that one Hartford client of White, believing the divorce granted was all right, has married again.

PARNELL MUST RETIRE

From the Leadership of the Irish Party is the Verdict of the Catholic Hierarchy of Ireland.

London Special: Intense excitement was created in the political circles generally, but more particularly in the ranks of the Irish National Party, when the announcement was made that the Roman Catholic hierarchy, of Ireland, had reached the unanimous conclusion that the position was such as to render absolutely necessary the retirement from the leadership of Mr. Parnell. The announcement of the conclusion was accompanied by the statement that, while there is no desire to coerce the Parlimentary Representatives of the Irish party, the decision of the hierarchy would be publicly announced, if at the proposed Parnelite meeting, any attempt was made to whitewash Mr. Parnell. It was also intimated that should the manifesto to the Irish people, fail to deny and disprove the grave charges that stand against that gentleman, as a consequence of the verdict in the recent divorce suit, action would be taken without waiting for, or regarding the results of the meeting.

Mr. Parnell's manifesto, which has just made its appearance, is a document of great length. In it the Irish leader boldly defies his enemies and appeals to the people of Ireland to sustain him in no half-hearted way in the great emergency which confronts them and him.

SIX DROWNED.

The Survivors Pass the Night on a Cake of Ice.

While a boat load of twelve men, employed at Miller, Signorr & Co.'s logging camp near Rice Lake, Minn., were returning home across Devil's Lake after their day's work, the boat was overturned through the men shifting positions in it, and all were precipitated into the water, four being immediately drowned. Eight climbed upon a cake of ice, and after a life and death struggle among them one was lost and the other seven left on the ice. They passed all night upon the tossing cakes of ice. Their cries reached their comrades on the shore and at daybreak a boat was procured and all rescued except John Crotto, who, unable to longer hold on, released his grip as the rescuing party came in sight. The victims are: Frank Fournier, John Crotto, Arthur Page, Wm. Knight, Chas. Stykes, and A. D. Clark.

A Frightful Position.

Mr. Caldwell, wife and two children, of Deer Creek Township, Cass County, Ind., were in Logansport, and walked out to the asylum. Upon returning they started to cross the Vandalia bridge, and when about half across were surprised at the approach behind them of the Wabash passenger. Mr. Caldwell took the two children in his arms and stepped aside off the track, but Mrs. Caldwell apparently lost her head and started to run up the track ahead of the train, thinking to cross the bridge ere the train reached her. The engineer, seeing her frightful position, reversed his engine, but could not stop in time, and the lady was struck and carried on the pilot to the end of the bridge, where she was thrown off onto the ground. It was found that her left thigh was broken and her head seriously injured. The doctors are fearful that the lady's skull is fractured. If so, her case is hopeless. She was conveyed to her home in Deer Creek Township.

Driven Ashore and Dashed to Pieces.

Additional advices have been received of the disaster to the fishing fleet off Ofoten, on the Norwegian coast. Out of one hundred and eighty smacks, all of which were compelled to cut away their rigging, seventy were driven ashore and battered to pieces on the rocks. Many smaller boats were also wrecked. It is feared that hundreds of lives were lost. The bodies of victims are constantly being washed ashore. The coast is intensely bleak, and is sparsely settled, and the survivors are suffering greatly from exposure and starvation. Communication with the interior is cut off, the roads being blockaded with snow. A steamer has left Christiana to assist the wrecked fishermen.

Mr. Parnell to Wed Mrs. O'Shea.

Mr. Parnell, it is said, has already appointed the wedding day, about six months hence, for himself and Mrs. O'Shea. Those who have met the pair say they are passionately devoted to each other and that Mrs. O'Shea's one ambition for years has been to be come Mrs. Parnell; that while she deplores the political effect of the exposure, she is more than compensated by the prospect of union to the man of her choice. Mrs. O'Shea is about four years older than Parnell. It is said that she had evidence amply sufficient to have defeated the suit for divorce, by proving, not her own innocence, but her husband's guilt; but that she desired nothing to stand in the way of gaining Parnell for a husband.

Mourned as Dead.

James Stockton met his wife at Memphis, recently, for the first time since the Johnstown flood. They had mourned each other as dead; that they had been bereaved by the awful disaster. Stockton had gone to California, and Mrs. Stockton was in Massachusetts. They were discovered to each other by a mutual friend in Memphis, and a most joyful meeting took place at the first station on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad on the incoming train. They had only been married a few days and will go to their new home in California to complete their rudely interrupted honeymoon.

A Whole Car Load of Passengers Down With the Small-Pox.

Considerable excitement was created at Denver, by the receipt of a telegram from Cheyenne, announcing the departure of a train for Denver, containing a car load of small-pox patients. It is learned that when the Union Pacific express left Rawlins the conductor discovered two severe cases of small-pox on board. Shortly afterward others complained and before night thirteen were taken sick. The car was immediately locked and sent by special train to Denver where the patients are now quarantined.

Have Bought the "World."

It has been reported and the report verified that the New York World has been sold to a syndicate of Philadelphians for $4,000,000. The purchasers are in reality George W. Childs, editor and owner of the Public Ledger, and A. J. Drexel, the millionaire banker of the Quaker city. The purchase price includes the magnificent fourteen story building just completed, and into which the World moved last Sunday. The building itself is valued at $1,000,000, leaving a valuation of $3,000,000 for the good will and plant of the newspaper with its evening edition.

Four Killed, Three Wounded.

The boiler of John Hackers & Co.'s steam saw-mill at Scotland, Worth County, Ga., exploded, killing three men and injuring four others. The killed are: Augustus Stinson, of Angelica, Wis.; Thomas Sammons, Adolphus McMillan. The wounded are: John H. McPhail, of Atlanta; Andrew Cox, William Tompkins, James Daniels (colored). The boiler was blown a distance of seventy-five yards. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

Free Mail Delivery.

The Postmaster General has ordered the establishment of the free delivery system at the following postoffices on the 1st of January, 1891: Astoria, Ore.; Lincoln, Ill.; Kenton, Ohio; Towanda, Pa.; Milford, Mass.; Athens, Ga.; Moberly, Mich.; Alpena, Mich.; Carbondale, Pa.; Columbia, Pa.; Mahanoy City, Pa.; Pottstown, Pa.; Rochester, Minn.; Gainesville, Texas; Canandaigua, N. Y.; Bowling Green, Ky., and Washington Court House, Ohio.

Five Men Drowned at Evansville.

While seven men were crossing the river in a skiff at Evansville, their boat was struck by a high wind and overturned. The struggles of the unfortunate men were brief, and in a few seconds five of them disappeared, the other two clinging to the skiff's bottom. Two boats put out to the rescue and each rescued one of the men at the last moment. The five men drowned were colored.

Farmer Versus Merchant.

The Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association held a meeting in Martinsville, Ind., and appointed a committee to canvas for stock to establish a store in that city to be run according to their plans. The merchants would not be subject to their dictation, and are working against the committee. They declare they will fight the farmers until they will be glad to come to terms.

Mangled by a Train.

Anthony Versoor, aged 65 years, a laborer at the Grand Rapids and Indiana shops, at Grand Rapids, walked upon the tracks on the way to work, and he was struck by a passenger train. He was hurled into the air and instantly killed, his head and chest being crushed. He left a widow and two married daughters.

Powderly Goes to Florida.

Grand Master Workman Powderly left for Florida to attend the Farmers' Alliance Convention. He hinted that a new party will not result from the Florida convention, and thereafter the Alliance members and knights will vote, as well as work, for their principles.

Struck by a Whale.

The whaling bark Ocean has arrived at San Francisco. The Captain furnishes the following particulars of the loss of six sailors. They had mortally wounded a whale and approached too close in their boat. The whale struck the boat and the men were thrown out, and drowned or killed.

Powder Explosion.

Three kegs of powder were left in the house of James Thomas, a miner at Winifred, W. Va., over night. His son, aged twelve, ignited the explosive, the house was blown to pieces, and the boy killed. Several people were wounded by flying fragments.

Killed By the Cars.

Trainmen from Fort Wayne found lying near the Nickel Plate at Hartzburg, Ohio, the frightfully mangled remains of an unknown man. It is thought that the dead man was struck by one of the fast freight trains.

The Miners Quit Work.

The miners at Pine Forest colliery, near Pottsville, Pa., quit work on demand for advance in wages. They were paid $1 per car for coal mined, but they claim that its impossible to make fair wages at that price.

THE HOOSIER STATE.

SUMMARY OF IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS THE PAST WEEK.

The Corn Crop of Southern Indiana—Diphtheria at Xenia—Patents for Indiana Inventors—Suicides—Accidents—Criminal Record—Deaths.

Old Mystery Explained by the Revelation of a Murder.

In September, 1863, John Isenhart, a thrifty farmer living south of Portland, started from home, telling his wife that he was going to Dr. Watson's to pay a bill he owed him. On his way it was known that he stopped at the house of John Hindman, a man of unsavory reputation. Isenhart never reached Watson's, and his disappearance was a great mystery. Searching parties were organized and the best detectives were employed, but the efforts of all were futile, and it remained a mystery until recently. Soon after Isenhart's disappearance Hindman enlisted and returned at the close of the war. Before his death, in 1871, he confessed to his son-in-law, James Lanning, that he killed Isenhart and buried him under his stable. Lanning carried the secret as long as he could, but lately disclosed to John Hearn where the body could be found. Hearn, with others, went to the spot indicated by Lanning, dug up the body and brought it to Portland. The skull was badly shattered, showing the effects of the fatal blow dealt by Hindman. This has created considerable excitement, as it was believed by most of the people that Isenhart had simply deserted his family and was still alive.

—Thieves went to the stock pen of Henry Stone, who resides at Taylorsville, and drove away five fat hogs.

—At Huron, James Terrell and John Feltner quarreled over politics, and the former was stabbed by the latter and killed.

—The bondsmen of James Fitzpatrick, the defaulting Treasurer of Terre Haute, have agreed to pay up his shortage of $14,500.

—Will Hopkins, while hunting near Summitville, was accidentally shot in the face by George Morris and blinded in both eyes.

—Reports of a rather vague character continue to come in concerning the existence of small-pox in Dubois County, near Huntingburg.

—Seven mail pouches have been stolen during the past seven weeks between Richmond and Winchester on the G. R. & I. Railway.

—The large barn of Nolan Thomas, at Spencer, was consumed by fire, together with its contents. It was the work of an incendiary.

—Louis Darnell, a yard brakeman at Richmond, was struck while coupling cars, and his neck was broken, causing instant death.

—Snodgrass & Murphy, Crawfordsville tailors, have failed, and Joe West has been appointed assignee. Assets, $2,500; liabilities, $3,200.

—Herman Tripp, operator at Lima, while scuffling with a companion, fell across a rail. Paralysis of the stomach ensued, resulting in death.

—The general store of H. Bowman, at Putnamville, was burglarized. Five hundred dollars' worth of clothing and other merchandise was stolen.

—Nettie, aged 8, the daughter of W. W. Davis, of Seymour, was dangerously burned from feet to hips by her clothing igniting from a pile of burning leaves.

—The corn crop of Southern Indiana is harvested in excellent condition, and the yield exceeds all expectations. The average runs from twenty-five bushels on uplands to sixty per acre on the best bottom lands, and the quality is prime.

—A year ago, at Brazil, Tom Williams shot dead one Thrasher, a brother-in-law. By a justice of the peace he was acquitted on the grounds of self-defence. The grand jury recently indicted him for murder, and he was re-arrested and placed in jail.

—After twenty years' confinement in the prison at Jeffersonville, James S. Storey returns to Johnston County, his old home, gray-haired and bent with age. On reaching the spot where his happy boyhood days were spent he fell upon his knees and wept bitterly. Failing to find any of his old acquaintances he expressed a desire to die. Storey is 64 years of age, and was at one time worth $50,000. Gambling ruined him. He planned the robbery of a bank, was caught in the act, and with a knife killed one of his pursuers, for which he was sent to State Prison in 1870.

—The residence of John Kish, at Spraytown, was burned with contents, fire originating from a defective flue. Loss, $1,200; insurance, $450.

—Mrs. Charles Wykoff, at Mt. Ætna, gave birth to a pound and a quarter infant. After two weeks the child weighs a pound and a half, and seems quite healthy.

—Elijah Mallott, a dairyman, of Petersburg, in a fit of jealousy, shot his wife, inflicting only a flesh wound. He then committed suicide by shooting himself through the breast.

—The Wabash Board of Trade is discussing the advisability of bringing suit for breach of contract against the Pittsburgh capitalists who did not establish the Indiana steel-works there.

—The La Gro Cement Company, with a capital of $5,000, has been organized. It is the purpose of the corporation to develop the limestone and cement industry in the vicinity of that village.

—Diphtheria, in a very malignant form, is raging in Shoals and Ironton. Helen, youngest daughter of N. H. Motsinger, cashier of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank, died of the dread disease. There are other serious cases.

—At Xenia diphtheria rages to such an alarming extent that the public schools are closed, church services suspended, and public gatherings prohibited for ten days. Stringent sanitary methods are also being employed.

—Marion Robertson, a well-known farmer, was fatally shot near Bloomington, by the premature discharge of a gun, while hunting. One hand was shot off, and the load lodged in his face, one of his eyes falling out. He will die.

—Messrs. Thompson & Sharp brought in a gas well for the Greenfield Iron and Nail Company in the north part of their addition. Of all the wells that have been drilled in Hancock County this is said to be the best. It is a wonderful gusher.

—Henry O'Neil, living about two miles north of Canaan, was found dead in his field, having fallen out of his wagon. The old gentleman was crippled, having lost one foot in a threshing-machine gearing some thirty odd years ago. He was 70 years of age.

—Reports from winter wheat throughout the State are encouraging. The early sown wheat looks well, and that sown more recently is in medium condition. The acreage this year is considerably increased over last year. Its average condition is estimated at 93 per cent.

—Waldo E. Hills, who is under indictment at Fort Wayne for alleged criminal practices in defrauding farmers on lightning rod contracts, and whose third trial for this offence was called recently, has fled, and his bond has been declared forfeited by the court. On his former trial Hills was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

—Morris F. Edwards, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Knightstown, died suddenly at his home. He was 84 years old, and had for many years been one of the most prominent members of the First M. E. Church and one of the most influential citizens. He has held many positions of honor and trust.

—In the suit of Nicholas Merl against the Citizen's Street Railway Company, of Indianapolis, tried in the Hendricks Circuit Court on a charge of venue from Marion County, the jury returned a verdict for $4,000 for Merl. This is the case where Merl's legs were crushed by being caught between the platform of the transfer car and the platform of a passing open car.

—Dr. Williamson, practicing physician at Lebanon for the past thirty-five years, and 80 years of age, was run over by a buggy while returning home from church. Three of his ribs were broken and he was hurt internally. It is thought the accident will prove fatal. A warrant was issued for the arest of John Cooney, who was driving the buggy.

—Prompted by reported information to the effect that the State law of 1881, imposing a fine of from $10 to $100 for each offense in killing quail and pheasant for markets outside the State, is being violated, State Fish Commissioner Dennis has cited the law to the express companies, who are carrying such game in large quantities to Chicago and Cincinnati, and warned them to desist.

—Another factory has been added to the long list of manufactories for Anderson—a new keg factory that will employ fifty men and turn out two thousand nail-kegs per day. This is the tenth factory now in course of construction in that city, including two wire-nail factories, a nut and bolt factory, a carriage hardware factory, a cathedral-glass factory, a window-glass factory, a brick and tile machine factory, a pulp and paper factory, a box factory and a keg factory.

—The large breeding barn of Joseph Kleiper, near Cambridge, was consumed by fire entailing a loss of about $700 on the building, with only a small insurance in a New York company. One valuable stallion and eight brood mares likewise perished. Sundown, the stallion, was owned by John T. Manlove, of Milton, and had a great trotting record. He won a race at the fall meeting in which there were three competitors, and was undoubtedly the finest two-year-old in the State. He was valued at $1,000. The total loss is $4,000.

—H. R. Tinsley, of Crawfordsville, has been busily engaged for some time in collecting old-fashioned farming implements, until now he has a large number of these bygone articles. His latest addition to the collection is a flail which was used once for threshing grain.

—The business men and farmers about Martinsville have subscribed the requisite amount of stock for the purpose of starting a creamery plant there in the early spring. Work will be commenced on the erection of it in a few days.

—Patents have been issued to Indiana inventors as follows: Upton E. Brumbaugh, Marion, lumber drier; Charles W. Cotton, Indianapolis, assignor to American Wheel Company, Chicago, method of preparing spokes; James Dushane, South Bend, curry comb; Wesley T. Finney, Bentonville, stove; George C. Muessel, South Bend, suspending device for pails; William E. Murbarger, Indianapolis, pipe wrench; Riley D. Snyder, Avon, cultivator attachment for double-shovel plows; David D. Weisel, Fort Wayne, washing machine; George J. A. Zimmer, Elkhart, signal lantern.

HOPE OF THE ALLIANCE

FARMERS AMBITIOUS TO CUT A WIDER SWATH IN 1892.

Annual Meeting of the Organization at Ocala, Fla.—Prospect of a Ticket for the Next Presidential Campaign—A Possible Combination of the Farmers with the Workingmen.

[Washington dispatch.]

The annual meeting of the National Farmers' Alliance will be held at Ocala, Fla., beginning Tuesday, Dec. 2. In many respects it will be the most important industrial meeting held in this country in many years, and the action taken there will either clear the political atmosphere wonderfully or complicate matters so that the wisest political guessers will be put to their wits' ends to divine the course of affairs in the next Presidential election. There is a strong possibility that the Farmers' Alliance will bloom out as a full-fledged third party with a full ticket in the field in 1892. This matter will be settled practically at the Ocala convention.

At its recent meeting at Denver, Col., the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor appointed General Master Workman Powderly, A. W. Wright of Canada, and Ralph Beaumont of New York to attend the Alliance Convention as fraternal delegates. These three are clear, forcible speakers and earnest men, and it is altogether likely that the partial combination effected between these two great industrial organizations will be made closer in the matter of political action at all events. The Knights of Labor bear a proposition to the Alliance to join with that order in calling, at as early a date as possible, a convention of all labor and reform organizations to decide the question of independent political action. They are strongly of the opinion that the Alliance will take this action. Such a convention would take in the Patrons of Husbandry, the Grange, the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, and the New England Farmers' Organization, all of which are thoroughly in sympathy with the Alliance, but have not as yet joined it. Then the Knights of Labor, the Federation of Railroad Employes, the American Federation of Labor, and the big trades unions would be invited to attend the convention. The actual voting strength of these organizations will reach well up toward three millions, and it can readily be seen if such a convention is called and should decide to take independent action, it would cause some queer overturnings in 1892, and it is among the probabilities.

In speaking of the Ocala convention C. W. Maceine, Chairman of the Executive Committee and editor of the National Economist, the organ of the Alliance, said: "The meeting is a most important one from the Farmers' Alliance standpoint, a political standpoint, and an economic standpoint. Being the national meeting of the order, it will probably take the next step in the development of this great new force, and since there is every indication that sectionalism, so far as it depends upon prejudice between the farmers of the South and Northwest, will be forever buried, the political significance cannot be overestimated. It is impossible for us to obtain exact data as to the victories in the recent elections; many men have been elected as partisans on whom we can depend on almost all questions to represent the farmers. It is probably now a conservative estimate to say we will have forty men in the Fifty-second Congress who can be depended on to represent the farmers' interest on all occasions.

"With a thorough understanding from all sections, enlightened and educating, and sectionalism replaced by co-operation and unity, the economic possibilities for the good of this great order are almost immeasurable."

The Farmers' Alliance was started in Texas in 1876, but it was not until eleven years later that the order became national and began to develop strength. It absorbed the old Agricultural Wheel, in 1889, at St. Louis. At that convention the Knights of Labor were represented and after a long discussion and many conferences the "St. Louis platform" was adopted. Among other things it includes practically the Knights of Labor planks on land, currency, and transpotortion, which read as follows:

The land, including the natural sources of wealth, is the heritage of all the people, and should not be subject to speculative traffic. Occupancy should be the only title to the possession of land. The taxes upon land should be levied upon its full value for use, exclusive of improvements, and should be sufficient to take for the community all unearned increments.

The establishment of a national monetary system, in which a circulating medium in necessary quantity shall issue direct to the people without the intervention of banks; that all the national issues shall be full legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, and that the Government shall not guarantee or recognize any private banks, or create any banking corporations; that interest-bearing bonds, bills of credit, or notes shall never be issued by the Government; but that when need arises the emergency shall be met by issue of legal tender, non-interest bearing money.

That the Government shall obtain possession by purchase, under the right of eminent domain, of all telegraph, telephone, and railroads; and that hereafter no charter or license be issued to any corporation for construction or operation of any means of transporting intelligence, passengers, or freight.

The meeting at Ocala will consist of about 250 delegates, representing thirty-two States. The session will last from a week to ten days. After the adjournment arrangements have been made for a free excursion all over the State of Florida, stopping at all the principal points and giving the delegates a general good time for a week or so.

M'VICKER'S NEW THEATER.

A Beautiful Play House—The Building to Be Impervious to Fire.

[Chicago special.]

McVicker's Theater, when the restorations are completed, will be visited with enthusiasm by the people of Chicago, who, in spite of new structures, always keep the warmest corner of their hearts for this bit of old Chicago, which is to the West what Drury Lane is to the Englishman. The latter has been several times burned down and rebuilt, and so, indeed, has McVicker's; but this time it will be perfectly fireproof—as much so as the Auditorium, which marks the highest notch achieved by architects in the construction of fireproof theaters. And the old theater will be made exceedingly beautiful. In the new proscenium the upper boxes disappear, and there will only be one row. Experience has demonstrated to Mr. McVicker that it is impossible to let the upper ones, and their place will be filled with decoration. On each side there will be a relief by Gelert four and one-half feet in height and eighteen feet in length of a historic character—one of a tragic cast, the other full of joyousness. One will be the massacre of Fort Dearborn, which took place in 1812. The other relief will commemorate the joyous march of LaSalle through Northern Illinois with his soldiers, Indians, and French artisans, and the effect will be processional and decorative, like the relief of the panathenaic procession in the Parthenon. The theater upon Sunday is occupied by the congregation of Dr. Thomas, and they have asked and obtained Mr. McVicker's permission to introduce an organ. It will cost $6,000, and will be hid away on the left-hand side of the proscenium above the LaSalle relief.

A Telegraph to the Brain

From the stomach is the great sympathetic nerve in the epigastrium. Let digestion become seriously disordered, and that disorder is sure to find a reflection in symptoms which react disadvantageously upon the organ of thought. Insomnia, nervousness, causeless depression and anxiety are all manifestations of dyspepsia. The best means of remedying and restoring tranquillity to brain and stomach, and of regulating, it may be added, bilious secretion, is to take a wineglassful of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters before meals during the day and before retiring. This course begun, reform in the direction of complete bodily well-being has begun with it. Constipation, sick headaches, neuralgia, rheumatism, and malarial complaints are among the troubles in which the Bitters is speedily and thoroughly beneficial. Don't delay, but take the sure course at once.

An American Clara Vere De Vere.

Miss Van Wirt—No, Lord Northbury, I could never marry. You are not my equal.

Lord Northbury—Not your equal! Why, the blood of the Plantagenets courses in my veins! When your great grandfather was a petty Dutch trader, mine was sitting in the House of Lords.

Miss Van Wirt—Yes, but when your great grandfather was sitting in the House of Lords, mine was buying up town lots on Broadway.—Life.

Before the use of Prickly Ash Bitters became general throughout the South and West, it was a fearful dose of "Blue Mass," and daily doses of quinine, that was forced down the throats of suffers from all malarial troubles. In place of such obnoxious, harrowing curatives, Prickly Ash Bitters, with its mild, soothing action, now holds supreme sway, and after one trial, its use when necessary, is forever established. You who have sick-headaches, sour stomachs, diseased liver or kidneys, can do no better than to give it a trial.

Grammar Not Necessary.

"That young Miss Newdle to whom you was paying so much attention last evening, Leon," said his mother, "talks very ungrammatically."

"Thunder!" exclaimed the young man. "She don't need to know anything about grammar, mother. She owns a gas well."

Not a Local Disease

Because catarrh affects your head, it is not therefore a local disease. If it did not exist in your blood it could not manifest itself in your nose. The blood now in your brain is, before you finish reading this article, back in your heart again, and soon distributed to your liver, stomach, kidneys, and so on. Whatever impurities the blood does not carry away, cause what we call diseases. Therefore when you have catarrh of the head a snuff or other inhalent can at most give only temporary relief. The only way to effect a cure is to attack the disease in the blood by taking a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which eliminates all impurities and thus permanently cures catarrh. The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh is vouched for by many people it has cured.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. IT PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. Send 2c stamp for copy of "THE HORSE TRAINER," published by us.

A Q-RIOUS SPELL.

BY W. H. S. ATKINSON.

A MAN with a very red tique,
And legs that were somewhat oblique,
Tried to bleach out his nose
And to straighten his toes
By a hundred mile walk every wique.

But he struck a big keg with a lique,
Which speedily made him to rique
With the odor of gin
That is quickly sucked in
Until quite unable to spique.

When Noah was sailing his arque
He never walked out after darque;
He knew if he did
The world would be rid
Of the builder of that noble barque.

But once, just by way of a larque,
He hauled in a mighty big sharque;
To prove this is true
The remains you can view
On the lake shore, just down by Hyde Parque.

A PESSIMIST'S SONG.

BY ROBERT YULEE TOOMBS.

What is worth living for, anyway?
Inventory your sweet by-and-by,
Think over to-day and yesterday—
What can the world give to satisfy?

Money and wine, and woman and song—
There is the lot; they are all fools' toys.
We prate of right and we prate of wrong,
And ignorance craves till knowledge cloys.

Money and women while sought are dear,
Once tasted, bright wine leaves pain behind,
The sweetest love-song wearies the ear—
All life is cruel, and death is kind.

Dr. Elfenstein's Mission

A Remarkable Romance.

BY EMILY THORNTON.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

"How that garment came there in that condition, or how that dagger left the case in his dressing bureau, ever remained a mystery to Fitzroy Glendenning.

"All he could conclude, after the deepest study, was that some unknown enemy had struck the fatal blow, and after stealing these articles from his private rooms, had left the dagger purposely upon the floor, and returned the torn and bloody gown to the closet, in order to fasten suspicion upon him, and thus shield themselves.

"It did shield them effectually, while the poor, innocent youth was arrested and committed to prison on the charge of murder.

"To make a long story short, in due time the trial took place, and Sir Reginald Glendenning, who had succeeded to the title, testified to the bitter feeling that had existed between the brothers. He also identified the dagger and dressing-gown as belonging to the prisoner.

"Antoine Duval testified as fully to the threatening language used to the deceased, on the day previous to the murder by his brother.

"The trial was quite lengthy, but resulted in his acquittal and discharge from custody.

"But although freed by law, the popular opinion remained unchanged, and, unable to endure the cold, averted looks of his former friends, he left his home and embarked for America under an assumed name.

"Arriving in New York, the strain of grief that he had undergone so told upon his nervous system that he was laid upon a bed of severe illness.

"Then it was that your father sought him out and nursed him so tenderly. After his recovery, he resolved to devote himself to business, and thus forget his troubles and misfortunes.

"Things began to mend with him after this and business prospered, and before six years passed away speculation had so enriched him that he found himself the possessor of millions.

"Retiring then to private life, he bought this place in Yonkers, in order to enjoy himself in a quiet way. But ill-health visited him; a stroke of paralysis rendered one side comparatively helpless, while the asthma, which he had been subject to for many years, increased to an alarming extent.

"During all this time one wild wish has been his, and that was to solve the mystery of his brother's fate, and so clear his own good name of the unjust suspicions that still cling to it.

"His object was, before this, to have returned to his native place, in some disguise, and so work unknown toward the accomplishment of this desired end.

"But his return was effectually prevented by his ill-health and helplessness.

"Lately this wish has become uncontrollable. He prays that he may not die with this stain still clinging to his name. He has therefore decided to ask you to undertake the case for him."

"But," here interrupted the amazed listener, "there must be some mistake. I am no lawyer, simply a physician, and as such, what can I do?"

"Everything. We think far more than a lawyer," replied Mr. Gray. "Of course you would have to sell your practice in New York and settle in England. There, as a growing physician, you would gain the confidence of the people. You would be admitted to places where no one else would, and could study the characters of rich and poor.

"Sir Richard Glendenning married, two years after the disappearance of his brother, the same lady who was to have been his bride, Miss Constance, and they now occupy Glendenning Hall. You will probably be called to attend their family, and so can see the room where poor Sir Arthur met his sad fate, and can study the location of the place.

"For all this trouble Mr. Rappelye, as we will still call him, will pay you handsomely. Five thousand per annum shall be yours as long as he lives, and at his death you will, if successful, be munificently rewarded, as his will, still unsigned, can testify.

"Are you willing to serve him as he wishes? Will you undertake the task of clearing his good name of the foul aspersions cast upon it?"

There was a long pause, during which the pale face of the invalid seemed to grow a shade paler under his eager gaze.

At length the silence was broken by Dr. Elfenstein, who said, in a calm, steady tone:

"I will undertake it."

"Thank you," murmured the sick man, as he reached forth his hand to clasp that of his visitor. "May God bless your efforts!"

"Amen!" was the low response. "I am sure He will. A great wrong has evidently been done, and I bind myself by a most solemn vow to endeavor to right that wrong and restore an honest name to an honest man. I solemnly dedicate myself to your cause to act for you and let nothing stand in my lawful way in order to unravel this mystery and discover the fate of your unhappy brother."

"For this, your solemn pledge," slowly returned the invalid, "I as solemnly promise to place in your hands, through my banker, the yearly sum of five thousand dollars, and I will also provide for your future, should my death occur before your task is completed. This will of mine is already dictated, and only awaits my signature. Mr. Gray, I will now summon Mrs. Stebbins and one of my servants to act as witnesses while I write my name to my last will and testament."

Mrs. Stebbins and Harriet Bevier then placed their names opposite as witnesses to the solemn transaction, and again withdrew, after Mr. Rappelye had desired them to bid the coachman prepare to carry Dr. Elfenstein back to the depot, as he had declined passing the night with them.

"When shall you be ready to leave for England?" asked Mr. Rappelye, as he held his hand at parting.

"In about one week's time I think I can settle my own affairs and arrange a home for my mother during my absence. I shall take the first steamer I can, and will come again to receive further instructions before I leave, if you wish it."

"I do; till then, my dear friend, au revoir."

Thus ended an interview which was destined to be the cause of bringing to light events of the most startling character, the development of which would place our hero amid scenes and circumstances so terrible and tragic in their nature that could they have been foretold might have caused many moments of hesitation.

CHAPTER IV.

OUTWARD BOUND.

Dr. Elfenstein did not see his mother on his return, on account of the lateness of the hour, but at the breakfast table he met her.

"My son, good morning," she said, pleasantly, on his entrance; "so you have returned in safety!"

"I have; and in a pecuniary point of view, the visit brought a great change for the better."

"Indeed! that is good news."

"From this day I am to receive five thousand dollars annually, as I have entered into an engagement to that effect."

"My dear Earle, you do surprise me!"

"I fear, however, my next remark you will not like so well."

Mrs. Elfenstein's bright looks faded on the instant.

"This engagement obliges me to sell my practice, and sail in about one week to settle in a country village in England."

"Oh, Earle, you surprise me!"

"Mother, dear, you shall have your choice now: whether to accompany me at once, or allow me to board you at your brother's in this city for a few months, until I can survey the ground, and fully establish myself. In case you remain, I can at any time come for you, after I see whether it will be a permanent home. Perhaps I shall not care to remain after a few months."

There was a long pause, broken at length by the mother.

"Earle, I dread the ocean, and I shall dread a foreign home. Perhaps I had best remain, as you say. It is your opinion that I had better remain?"

"If you think you can endure the separation. I shall dislike it as much as you."

"I know that, dear."

"You like Uncle John's family?"

"Oh, yes."

"And would be happy there?"

"As happy as I can be, away from my son."

"It may not be a long separation."

"I will hope so."

By the close of the week, Mrs. Elfenstein was comfortably established in a room furnished with her old familiar things, while the son succeeded in disposing of the rest, as well as his practice, and had engaged a passage on the Oceanica.

A short visit was then paid to Mr. Rappelye, who gave him full directions how to proceed, and many minute details of the place and inhabitants.

Promising to write weekly, keeping him informed of every movement, the young man bade him farewell, and in a few hours later was upon the outward-bound steamer.

Standing there alone, surrounded by strangers, it is not a matter of surprise that a feeling of weariness and almost desolation crept over him.

With a desperate effort, the young man at length succeeded in dissipating this gloom. He knew full well that it would not answer to faint on the very threshold of his new duties.

He knew, also, that, to accomplish his work, he must be courageous and brave, so he turned away from his post of observation on deck, and sought the more lively saloon.

Taking a book from one of the tables, he affected to read.

Presently his eyes rested upon a middle-aged lady, who seemed in feeble health, as she leaned back languidly in an easy chair, while her pale face and attenuated figure spoke of prolonged sufferings, but a patient spirit.

She was evidently waiting for the appearance of some person, as her dark eyes continually wandered towards the door.

Dr. Elfenstein looked at her with increasing interest.

Silently he recalled face after face of his friends and patrons, in vain; he could not place the likeness that had so suddenly attracted him, and his failing to do so caused him both annoyance and chagrin.

Suddenly a brighter look floated into the lady's eyes.

Following the range of her vision, he was surprised at beholding the most perfect picture of youthful beauty he had ever yet beheld.

It was all embodied in the person of a young girl of about twenty summers, who smilingly drew near.

Small, with a figure exquisitely molded, and movements of perfect grace, a pure, white skin, with the rosy tint of health just tinging each soft cheek, eyes of a languid hazel, large, dreamy, yet full of intelligence and gentleness, a sweet mouth whose tender red lips disclosed, when speaking or laughing, teeth even and pearly white, with, as the crowning beauty of her whole appearance, a profusion of golden hair, that uncommon golden shade that is seldom seen, yet never disregarded, on account of its very rareness.

She spoke, and the melodious accents of her voice filled Earle with delight.

He had always placed great stress upon the tones of the human voice being a reflection in a great degree of the nature of its possessor.

"Aunt Gertrude, are you weary? I stayed out longer than I intended, but I could not bear to lose sight of the faintest speck of the land we have left behind us. It has all disappeared now, and 'the sea, the sea, the deep blue sea,' at this moment is on every side, rising and sinking in all its beauty. Shall I lead you to your state-room, auntie? Perhaps it would be as well for you to lie down before you become sea sick and faint."

"I feel rather dizzy, now, my love, and will take your advice."

Rising slowly, the feeble woman leaned on the strong young arm of her niece, and so passed to a state-room quite near the one engaged by himself, and the young physician smiled contentedly, that they were to be close neighbors during the voyage.

CHAPTER V.

THE NEW ACQUAINTANCE.

Several days passed in rather an uneventful way, brightened occasionally by a glimpse of the young girl, whose name he found to be Ethel Nevergail, as she flitted out and in the state-room of her aunt, who seemed ill and restless. Dr. Elfenstein had not sought an introduction, as he knew the admiration he involuntarily felt, while she remained unknown, might ripen into a warmer feeling upon a closer friendship.

Providence, however, had planned differently, and had decided that these two should be, at least, friendly.

One rough and stormy day was drawing to a close, when leaving the damp atmosphere of the deck, where he had passed a couple of hours watching the leaden sky and the storm-lashed waves, together with sea-gulls that skimmed over their surface, Dr. Elfenstein, in passing to his state-room, was startled by a low cry of dismay coming from the room of Mrs. Nevergail, followed immediately by the pale, frightened face of her niece, who, on seeing him so near, exclaimed:

"Oh, sir, something dreadful is the matter with my aunt. Do you think there is a physician on board?"

"I am one myself. My name is Elfenstein, of New York. Shall I see her?"

"If you will be so kind."

Stepping inside, our young friend advanced immediately to the berth, where he found Mrs. Nevergail in a fainting condition, caused by extreme exhaustion.

With the greatest sympathy, the Doctor instantly comprehended the situation, and turning quickly to his own state-room, reappeared with his small medicine wallet, and at once applied proper restoratives, which fortunately had the desired effect, and soon the young girl's fears were calmed, and she had the pleasure of again seeing her aunt comfortable for the time.

"Your aunt is better now, and I think immediate danger has passed. But I will not deceive you; her case is beyond human skill to cure."

"I know it, Doctor, and she also is well aware of her condition. My uncle died in New York a few months ago, and in taking care of him she contracted the cold that has ended in consumption. Our family physician, Dr. Munsey—perhaps you know him as you also are from New York—thought she might live to reach the only relatives we have on earth, residing in Liverpool and vicinity. She was eager to return to her native land, in order that I might not be left entirely alone after she is taken away. Do you think, Doctor, that she will survive until our passage is made?"

"I trust so. Good nursing often accomplishes more than medicines. We will do all we can, and perhaps the good Lord will favor us with his blessing."

"I pray that he may. It would be terrible to have her die at sea, and I, all alone with her, not a single friend near to aid me."

"Allow me to correct you, Miss Nevergail, for you see I know your name. You have one, surely, if you will allow me to be such to you. Anything I can do, either as physician or friend, rest assured shall be done."

"Thank you, I shall accept your proffered advice and friendship gratefully. The thought that I have one kind friend on board this steamer, in this emergency, is the greatest comfort."

"Our state-rooms are fortunately near each other, so any time, by night or day, that I can be of service, do not hesitate to inform me," said the Doctor, as he left the narrow quarters. "I will stop in again, in one hour, to see how she appears on waking."

One afternoon as Earle was standing upon deck looking out upon the vast ocean, he became conscious that a light step had approached and halted quite near.

It was Miss Nevergail.

While hesitating to consider whether his presence would be acceptable to her, an exclamation of terror startled him, and glancing toward the spot where she stood, he saw that she was striving to steady herself, being dizzy from a sudden lurch of the steamer.

Springing to her side, he instantly offered his arm, saying, as she gratefully accepted it:

"Allow me to assist you to a more quiet place, where motion will not be so perceptible."

"Thank you," returned the young girl, "I suppose I ought not to venture upon deck alone, unused as I am to the sea, but I am so completely fascinated by all this restless scene. Aunt is sleeping."

"I never look upon a scene like this," said Earle, thoughtfully, "without feeling my own littleness, when compared to the all-ruling hand that holds the billows in its grasp, and rules the winds and storms. But it seems quite calm again. Will you not join me in a promenade? The fresh sea-breeze will do you good after your confinement to the sick-room of your invalid aunt."

Placing her hand once more upon his arm, the two turned and quietly paced the deck, while an earnest and interesting conversation ensued, which occupied them for another half hour.

Dr. Elfenstein found his young companion an intelligent and brilliant conversationalist. Where she was not an awkward pause could ensue, and the fascination of her cultivated manners imperceptibly wove a feeling of intense admiration around his heart, of which he was ignorant, until too late to avert what, had he realized the mischief it would bring to future feelings, he would have made it a duty at once to suppress.

Kansas Philosophy.

The people who hate us talk too much, and those who like us say too little.

Merit is the only virtue which draws a steady salary.

The fire of anger often costs as much as that of hard coal.

Neglect is a mild term for what is really the worst form of abuse.

If people could cover up their sins by lying, we would seldom meet the truth.

There is no crime in being rich; the sin of wealth lies in the selfish enjoyment of it.

A woman mourns over her vanished youth; a man, over his vanished opportunities.

How polite we are to the first man to ask a question, and how we hate the tenth man who asks it!

The stone-cutters are the really great literary men. There never was an uninteresting epitaph.

The more wealth a man has the more difficult for him to find out what people really think about him.

When a man talks a great deal, they call it criticism; when a woman talks a great deal, they call it gossip.

Somehow it is so much easier to admire the great man who is older than yourself than the great man who is younger. Occasionally you find a girl so modest that she would prefer telling a fib to having anything to do with the naked truth.

Your sensible, far-seeing young man picks out his wife by the callous spots on the inside of her hand, and not by the dimples on the back of it.

There are only two kinds of married couples; in one kind the husband worries about the wife, and in the other the wife worries about the husband.—Atchison Globe.

A WOMAN does not stretch from the darkness of ignorance into the full bloom and splendor of knowledge and power simply by letting herself alone.—Anna Dickinson.

DOWN THE FLUME.

A THRILLING AND REMARKABLE VOYAGE IN THE SIERRAS.

A Perilous Ride at Breakneck Speed in a Trail Boat Down Fifty-two Miles of Fluming—A Trestlework Log Chute.

After a slow and wearisome climb, and as it began to grow dusk, our team, tired and dusty, drove into Camp Sequoia. The flume extends from the high snow-line in the Sierras to the plains, fifty-two miles distant. It is built of inch and a quarter planks, and at the start, where the grade is steep, it is forty-three inches across the top. This width is increased, however, when the decrease in the grade necessitates a larger volume of water to float the lumber, and at the lower end reaches an extreme width of sixty-four inches. At each increase in the size of the flume more water must be added to the stream.

The first head of water comes from Lake Sequoia, and the supply is augmented by small streams at four different places between the mill and King's river. To preserve a fairly regular grade in constructing this flume enormously high trestles were found necessary to carry the flumes across canons, chasms and around sharp spurs of mountains. The first twenty-seven miles built took over 5,000,000 feet of lumber to construct, and most of this lumber had to be packed on the shoulders of men. It has taken about 9,000,000 feet of lumber, all told, to complete the flumes.

But to return to the head of the flume, around which our little party of four was clustered, our spirits dropping as rapidly as the mercury during a cold snap, and our hearts seeking the seclusion of our boots. Coming down a flume when you are at the bottom and look up is a very different proposition to going down a flume when you are at the top and look down. Stories of former trips that resulted most disastrously flashed through our minds. If it had not been for the crowd of onlookers that stood around ready to cheer if we started, or jeer if we didn't, we would have backed out, one and all. There was no help for it, and with a last despairing look at the beautiful bright world around us that we were leaving, perhaps forever, we solemnly climbed into the flume-boat and shook hands sadly with those that were not going.

The boat that was to carry us down the flume resembles nothing so much as a hog trough with one end missing. The flume being built V-shape and at a right angle, the boat is constructed likewise, but at what should be the bow end of an ordinary boat there is no end at all, it being purposely left open in order to provide means for the water that backs up into the boat to escape. On examination we found our boat to be sixteen feet long, with a fourteen-inch plank running the entire length of the boat, thus making a false bottom, to raise us from reach of the water. On this plank rested four small wooden stools, one for each of the party.

After taking seats, with many misgivings, and balancing ourselves, the order to cast off was given, the spikes holding the frail craft to the flume side were pulled out and our craft shot on with the current on its journey to the plains. The sensation was exactly as if the bottom had dropped out of the universe and we had dropped with it.

"Watch out!" yelled the man in front, throwing himself back on the man behind him.

It was just in time. The sudden shock threw us all on our backs, and the boat "zipped" under a projecting beam that would have decapitated the whole outfit. Cautiously regaining an upright position, we took a look at the scenery around us. As far ahead as one could see stretched the flume, looking like a thin, spidery thread, stretched down the mountain-side. On either side gloomy rocks and forest trees flashed past in an indistinguishable blur when the flume lay near the ground, but when it rose on trestles to cross some canon or ravine we seemed suspended like Mohammed's coffin, "'twixt heaven and earth."

In the meantime our speed had been increasing. Not a member of the party spoke a word, but in dumb amazement held a firm grip to the seat. Our boat had proceeded but half a mile when immediately before us could be seen what we subsequently learned to be one of the steepest inclines of the whole course of the flume—a drop of 250 yards, with a grade of 1,200 feet to the mile. It was but a few moments when our boat was at the head of the incline. Pieces of timber could be seen on the mountain side below us, these pieces having been hurled out of the flume during their course. The sight was not very assuring to us, but there was no such thing as stopping or turning back at this stage of the journey. Holding our respective breaths and offering mental prayers for our own safety, we consigned ourselves to our fate. The boat stopped for an instant at the head of the chute, pitched over the course and shot out into what seemed to us mere space.

A dim perception of fleeing forests, dashing wildly past a wall of rocks for a few seconds, the noisy wash of the waters behind us, after all of which we found ourselves at the bottom of the incline trying to regain our breath. It was short, and lucky, too. Human nerves could hardly have stood the strain much longer. Going on at a slightly reduced rate of speed, we were treated to a constant change of mountain scenery, now closely hugging the perpendicular wall of a rocky gorge, again being swept around the sharp points of a mountain on our way across wide canons, up as high as 130 feet, with only the knowledge of frail trestlework between us and—what?

No grander views of the lower Sierras could be experienced than that which we had as we swept on through space. The alternating views of deep gorges, high cliffs, timber-clad mountain heights, combined with the novel means of transportation, robbed the journey of all weariness.

Finally we reached Kings River, and our course now lay parallel with the stream and at about the same grade. Our boat proceeded steadily, but with none of the occasional rapidity we had experienced in the higher mountains left behind. After having "flumed" about twenty-seven miles we came to the suspension bridge across King's River. But even fifty-two miles of flume come to an end at last, and, the speed becoming tame and slow in comparison with the early part of the trip, with the aid of several men at work "herding" on the flume our frail craft was safely brought to a standstill, and we climbed out on the trestle and stretched our cramped legs. A few moments later, with the aid of a thirty-foot ladder, we reached terra firma, and our strange cruise ended.—[San Francisco Examiner.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of Its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1840.

The year 1840 is remarkable for the great enthusiasm of the whig party in its advocacy of Harrison, of Indiana, for president. "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." Log cabins and hard cider were the slogan of the people, and the consequent victory after the democratic party had been in power for forty years filled the whigs with exultation, but in the far off woods of DeKalb county the desire of home, food and health was the ruling emotion and no statement of which party gained the day in the various elections of this early time appears on record.

One feature of the settlement of this region was the independent character of the arrivals. Year after year they came not in companies to found colonies but individuals made their way hither to spy out the land, select and make their entries and then return for families for a permanent sojourn.

In one sense there was illustrated Darwin's "survival of the fittest," for those easy of discouragement soon returned, the plucky but weakly fell a prey to disease, and the strong took and held their ground.

It is usual in telling of the war to depict in glowing terms the devotion of soldiers to their colors and cause. How they fought, endured and triumphed, forms the themes of all oratory, while the anxiety, suspense, isolation, loneliness and final certainty of violent death of loved ones, harrowing the feelings and seating a sorrow not to be removed, has little recognition, so in pioneer days the old settler is the center figure about whom converged all of interest. We follow him on wearisome journeys, sympathize with him in his losses and rejoice at his final success, while his wife separated from her relatives by many leagues of forest, often left alone by night as well as by day with only her little children, helping in the clearing, seeding and harvesting, taking charge when fever had brought down her husband, and bravely keeping on till physicially exhausted and borne to a final rest, while she is almost ignored. It is not yet too late for some of our pioneer mothers to tell their story of the early day and to let their somewhat degenerate granddaughters know how they lived, toiled and in what they found their recreations. They had no sewing machine, nor organ, no fancy footgear, nor skating rink, no swift train bore them to a neighboring village, nor accommodating bus to an out-town social. An old lady informs me that when she visited her neighbors, she took one of her two children on her back, carried the other in her arms and so made her way through the woods to the desired clearing, met a hearty greeting and was accompanied part way home by her gratified neighbor.

There is now living in the north end of Auburn a family who came here January 17, 1840, and were familiar with the trials of that now olden time. J. O. P. Sherlock came here in the fall of '39, stopped with Mr. Ingman for a while and engaged a lot from Park. He returned to Columbus, Ohio for his family. He came back via Ft. Wayne coming north, he found the snow deep along the blazed trail and reaching the cabin of Robert Work, left there his team and household goods. Mrs. Hannah Sherlock was mounted on horseback with two children, Charles aged seven, and William four years, and rode to Auburn preceded by Mr. Sherlock on foot. She was very tired when the party finally reached the cabin of John F. Coburn, who was out chopping a log in front of the door. She called to him, "How far is it to Auburn?" and Coburn replied: "You are in Auburn now." "Well, I'm mighty glad," she said but there was nothing to distinguish the locality as a town site, from any of the miles of woods through which they had traveled.

Up the trace they went to Ingman's and were made welcome by her sister to quarters in their home. She was soon called upon by some of the women in the place, viz., Mrs. Park, Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Frink. She found that the Methodist conference was being held here and was rejoiced at the prospect of company while the meeting lasted. Mr. Sherlock and family passed the winter with Ingman and in the spring, moved into a little log house then standing on the lot now occupied by Alfred Cass, and lived there till 42 when they moved into a house built by Sherlock on lot now owned by John Baxter. For a time, Sherlock kept tavern. He was a cabinet maker, pursued his trade and made the rough coffin in which the first to die were placed for burial in the old cemetery. The condition of the gave yard at that time away in the woods may be inferred from the fact that it was with difficulty that Mr. Coburn found the place of his wife's burial, some time afterwards.

Mrs. Sherlock was tailor for the settlers, made up clothing and essayed millinery in doing up the bonnets of the women folks.

The house was sold to Aaron Hague, who had been elected auditor, was torn down and the dwelling of Thomas Baldock was put up by Sheriff John Miller, in its place.

The only other women in Auburn in the early part of 1840 were Mrs. Jacobs, Mrs. Alford, Mrs. Ingman, Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Coburn, and this short list was destined to be speedily reduced by death. There is no telling what caused this mortality, but it seems that the place was for years unhealthy and this fact explains its slow and doubtful growth. It almost seems as if those pioneers sacrificed themselves unknowingly to prepare the way for those who were to come afterwards.

Ferguson's Dream No. 2.

BIENNIAL: The soil of the earth is not the same in all places. Neither are men all talented the same. Some have a much greater talent for some certain branch of industry than others have. I am naturally talented to dream strange and peculiar dreams. On the night of the 3rd of November 1890, I dreamed that I was lifted bodily from the earth by a terrible hurricane, and was carried away into a strange and most beautiful country. In the midst of this beautiful country, was a very large river, having very high and perpendicular banks. On this placid sheet of water I saw many steamers, of all descriptions; its banks were crowded by a most peculiar, yet a peaceable race of people, of all sizes and ages.

Among the throng was a man with a more pleasant and shining countenance than any of the others, and he appeared to have a general control over the people. When he came near to me he began to smile for he knew me—we had met before. Behold, it was none other than St. Peter! He appeared to be very talkative, and in a friendly disposition. I asked him the name of this river. Sir, he replied, "This is Salt River." Up the river, near its head, there was a very large hole dug into one of the banks. And therein was placed an enormously big horn, with its small end projecting forward.

As the steamers pulled up to the shore, the people gathered around them. They seemed downcast and forlorn. St. Peter commanded them to get into the boats as speedily as possible. I asked him what peculiar people they were, and why he ordered them to get into the boats? Sir, he replied, "This is the remnant of the republican party. To-morrow I will send them up the Salt River. They will go into the big hole, where they will come into the little end of the horn"

Then far away in the distance, in this bewtuiful land, there appeared a city of magnificent splendor and beauty. Its streets were thronged with a vast army of men that appeared not downcast and forlorn, but on the contrary, they seemed joyful, and each of them was carrying a new broom.

Upon a tree in the city was nailed a board, with the inscription, "Ftirat Wol," upon it. I asked Peter, who those people were, and why they felt so gay and happy, and why does each one carry a broom? "Sir," says Peter, "This is the democratic party. They feel happy because to-morrow they will be victorious at the polls. The brooms denote that they will make a clean sweep north, east, south and west." "Oh, yes, I see! But sir, what does the inscription on that board denote? I can't get any sense out of that." "Oh, you old gawky! Read it backwards, then you will readily see what it means."

"Good by, Peter!"

"Good morning, sir!"

Ship Building.

One reason we do not build ships as we once did may be found in the following, which we find in an exchange:

"John Roach, the once famous Philadelphia ship builder, said if he could have free iron and steel ores he could build steel ships as cheap as they can be built in Great Britain or anywhere in the world. Very little structural steel is made in the Atlantic or Gulf States because it requires different ores from those found there. By mixing them with certain Lake Superior ores steel can readily be made from them, but the cost of transporting the ore from the Superior regions to the seaboard is so great that cheap steel can not be produced from them. Ores that contain practically no phosphorus are cheap and abundant in Spain and in Cuba and they could be brought to this country very cheap, often being used for ballast. They are exactly adapted to mix with our ores for making steel, but the tariff practically prohibits its importation. Of course, this state of affairs prevents the making of steel cheap in the states mentioned, and that prevents our ship builders from successfully competing with foreign builders. There is a long tail to this kite, as will plainly be seen. The scheme to protect a few owners of ore mines results in the ruination of our once flourishing ship building industry. This throws tens of thousands of ship builders out of work; it wrecks the foreign shipping interests of the country; takes the American flag from the seas, and makes the American sailor a thing of the past. By closing these avenues for labor the markets for many agricultural and manufactured products are closed, and the disastrous consequences are felt all along the line like a row of falling bricks. And what is it all for? Simply to carry out the narrow, selfish and mistaken policy of protecting a few owners of iron ore mines, who are afraid of foreign competition in marketing ores freely given them by nature. Could it be possible to adopt a more stupid policy, or to strike a more vicious blow at ship building and general commerce?"

Coughing

IS Nature's effort to expel foreign substances from the bronchial passages. Frequently, this causes inflammation and the need of an anodyne. No other expectorant or anodyne is equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It assists Nature in ejecting the mucus, allays irritation, induces repose, and is the most popular of all cough cures.

"Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of colds, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there is none, within the range of my experience, so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For years I was subject to colds, followed by terrible coughs. About four years ago, when so afflicted, I was advised to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and to lay all other remedies aside. I did so, and within a week was well of my cold and cough. Since then I have always kept this preparation in the house, and feel comparatively secure." —Mrs. L. L. Brown, Denmark, Miss.

"A few years ago I took a severe cold which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continual use of the Pectoral, a permanent cure was effected."—Horace Fairbrother, Rockingham, Vt.

ALAS!

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency; altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. A sure, safe, speedy and easy cure can be found in Simmons Liver Regulator—Nature's own remedy. No mercury or deleterious drugs, not unpleasant to the taste, and always reliable—just such a remedy as you can pin your faith to without a shadow of disappointment. Read the testimonial, don't take our word for it:

"I have been subject to severe spells of Congestion of the Liver, and have been in the habit of taking from 15 to 20 grains of calomel, which generally laid me up for three or four days. Lately I have been taking Simmons Liver Regulator which gave me relief, without any interruption to business." J. HUGG, Middleport, Ohio.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

Dan Leas has sold his driving horse.

Mrs. Philip Morell is visiting in Ft. Wayne.

Miss Trudie Willis has gone to Chicago to visit relatives.

Grade examinations are being held in our schools this week.

Tuesday morning W. F. Kessler, of Auburn was in Waterloo.

A niece of Mr. Bigler died last week at her home near Angola.

Mrs Peter Fisher has a lady friend visiting her from Kendallville.

Bertie McBride, of Elkhart is in town spending a few days with friends.

Ab. and Charles Kelley are at Auburn this week attending to ditch matters.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rose are rejoicing over the arrival of a son at their home.

Mrs. Morell went to Ft. Wayne Thanksgiving, with Mrs Nill, of Toledo.

Dr. Bevier has put a slate roof on his house. The slate came from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Abby is making extensive repairs on his residence at the south end of Wayne street.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Bonzer entertained a progressive euchre party on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Reuben Ettinger and daughter Zoe, of Angola are spending a few days with Mrs. B F Kennedy.

J. Orwig and wife, from Pleasant Lake, were in Waterloo spending Thanksgiving day with friends.

The Christian Endeavor Society gave a supper on last Friday evening at the home of Dr. J. N. Chamberlain.

John Kocns and wife had a family gathering for Thanksgiving, which numbered enough to fill a long table.

Mrs. A H Leas, of Ann Arbor, came to Waterloo last Saturday to remain a few days. Aggie Leas is in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Leas gave a dinner party on Thanksgiving day, to which quite a number of guests were invited.

Old Mr. Gale, of Angola, died a few days ago. He has been ill for some time, finally dying from blood poisoning.

Misses Lilly and Abby Matson started for the South Tuesday. The former takes a position as teacher in a colored school in Georgia.

Ida Blair had several enjoyable sleigh-rides while in Minnesota on her recent trip. Winter must have begun at least a month earlier there.

J. T. Carpenter and family of Pleasant Lake stopped in Waterloo on their way home from Defiance to spend Thanksgiving with friends here.

W. S. Young has been visiting his wife's parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Francis and their son Will and wife. Mrs. Young has been here some time.

Dell Locke gave a fine dinner Thanksgiving day, and all the fortunate ones are praising it as well as his management of the Locke Hotel in general.

One of three horses that Mr. Ferguson has been keeping for a man from Canada was sold last Saturday for one dollar a pound, and weighed eighteen hundred pounds. So he received $1,800.

Those who heard Elder Keller's sermon Thanksgiving day speak of it as an able effort, and appropriate to the day and times. The text was taken from Psalm 147-20,—"He hath not dealt so with any nation".

Mr. Chadwick, of Pleasant Lake, has fitted up the store rooms rented of S. P. Strow, very nicely and put in a stock of rubber goods. He will move his family into Mrs. Bigler's house, on the west side of South Wayne street.

Mr. S. J. Locke has received a telegram from his daughter, Mrs. Hattie Knowlton, stating that her children are sick with diphtheria—one in a critical condition. Later news came that the second child, a little boy, had died. They reside at Youngstown, Ohio.

Gen. Blair, wife and daughter, entertained company to a very elaborate dinner on Thanksgiving day. That there was great variety prepared and served in a perfect manner, your correspondent is happy to be able to testify to from personal knowledge. After feasting sumptuously, the hours flew all too speedily until time to part.

Dr. T. J. Carpenter and family spent Sunday last in Pleasant Lake visiting friends. They narrowly escaped a serious accident on their return home Their horse was a young one, and going to the Lake was gentle enough, but coming back the son Alpha drove, while Dr. C. held the young child Suddenly the horse started to run, pulling the lines out of Alpha's hands. The daughter sprang out, the doctor gave the child to his wife, partly helped and partly threw Alpha out, then sprang over into the front seat, succeeded in getting hold of the lines. Dr. Bevier and wife happened by, and having room, brought Mrs Carpenter, Alpha and the baby with them. Dr. C. led the horse, with Nellie in the carriage. Upon reaching Waterloo and depositing those who were with him, Dr. B. either returned or sent back his conveyance for Dr Carpenter and daughter. No injury to any but slight sprains, and the alarm.

WHAT IS SAPOLIO?

It is a solid handsome cake of scouring soap which has no equal for all cleaning purposes except in the laundry. To use it is to value it...

What will SAPOLIO do? Why it will clean paint, make oil-cloths bright, and give the floors, tables and shelves a new appearance. It will take the grease off the dishes and off the pots and pans. You can scour the knives and forks with it, and make the tin things shine brightly. The wash-basin, the bath-tub, even the greasy kitchen sink will be as clean as a new pin if you use SAPOLIO. One cake will prove all we say. Be a clever housekeeper and try it.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. THERE IS BUT ONE SAPOLIO.

The next House of Representatives will contain 244 democrats and only eighty-eight republicans. This is a democratic majority of 156—the largest any party ever had since the foundation of the Government. In the face of this crushing condemnation from the country, the Bourbon Republican press has nerve to urge Congress at the present session to go right on and pass the Force bill as if nothing had happened. If what is left of the republican party wishes to commit suicide, it had better heed such advice.

"A Merry Christmas"

Is the cheery greeting shining from every page of that ideal monthly, Demorest's Family Magazine, the December number of which—a genuine holiday number—is just at hand. What one will not know about preparing for Christmas, about trimming the tree and suitable gifts and good cheer and how to heartily enjoy the merry Christmastide, after reading this charming Magazine, is not worth knowing. "Lighting the Way for Santa Clause" is the very appropriate introductory water-color, the rich humor of which will be highly appreciated by the little ones and "children of a larger growth" as well; and the page engraving that follows, "Raphael Painting the Virgin and Child," is from a noted painting, and will be appreciated for its historic value as well as its beauty. Besides these, there are at least two hundred and fifty other handsome illustrations, for this representative Family Magazine is noted for the quantity and good quality of its pictures. "In the Streets of Paris" is a profusely illustrated article, in reading which one is in fancy transported to that charming city; and if one prefers to visit near home, the description and exquisite pictures of the Washington residence of Senator Sawyer of Wisconsin, afford a revelation of beauty. There are splendid stories and poems, and every department is brimful of just what you want to know in its special line. 'Sanitarian' treats of that sad affliction "Obesity," and the common sense treatment recommended is bound to be efficacious; and "Our Girls" will be delighted with the comedietta in their special department. But our advice is, subscribe for this splendid Magazine, and you can have a rare treat each month. It is only $2 a year, and is published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York.

Harper's Magazine.

ILLUSTRATED.

The important series of papers on South America, by Theodore Child, will be continued in HARPER'S MAGAZINE during the greater part of the year 1891. The articles on Southern California, by Charles Dudley Warner, will also be continued. Among other noteworthy attractions will be a novel by Charles Egbert Craddock; a collection of original drawings by W. M. Thackeray, now published for the first time, a novel written and illustrated by George du Maurier; a novelette by William Dean Howells; and a series of papers on London by Walter Besant.

In the number and variety of illustrated papers and other articles on subjects of timely interest, as well as in the unrivaled character of its short stories, poems, etc., HARPER'S MAGAZINE will continue that standard of excellence for which it has so long been distinguished.

The Greatest Strike.

Among the great strikes that of Dr. Miles in discovering his New Heart Cure has proven itself to be one of the most important. The demand for it has become astonishing. Already the treatment of heart disease is being revolutionized, and many unexpected cures effected. It soon relieves short breath, fluttering, pains in side, arm, shoulder, weak and hungry spells, oppression, swelling of ankles, smothering and dropsy. Dr. Miles' book on Heart and Nervous Diseases free. The unequaled New Heart Cure is sold and guaranteed by F. E. Davenport, also his Restorative Nervine for headache, fits, sprees, hot flashes, nervous chills, opium habit, etc 1

Two skilled machinists have obtained quite a reputation by converting coins, large buttons and similar objects into boxes.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial Bottles Free at Robbins & McCord's Drugstore. 6

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the Liver and Kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50c. at Robbins & McCord's Drugstore. 6

Somebody has coined the word "motorneer," to designate the person who manages the motor on an electric car.

A Prominent Farmer.

Mr. Nicholas Wagoner, of Monroe, Ind., gives us the following statement in regard to Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. He says: I have used a great many different kinds of medicines for bronchitis, a disease I have had for the last ten years, and found nothing that would relieve me until I commenced to use Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. I took ten 50c bottles of this medicine and was entirely cured, and can recommend it to any person that is suffering from this disease.

Washington Letter.

Washington, D. C. Dec. 5, 1890.

Senator Gorman, who proved himself such an able, capable leader during the last session of congress, was by general consent recognized as commander-in-chief of the democratic senatorial army as soon as it became evident that Mr. Harrison and the radical republican leaders had succeeded in whipping the weak-kneed republican senators into voting to take up the force bill, and this spontaneous choice was officially ratified by the democratic caucus which met Wednesday evening. The policy of the democrats in the fight over this infamous partisan measure, which is likely to become one of the most famous in congressional annals, is to reserve their strength until the republicans begin the attempt to change the rules of the Senate, which is neccessary prelude to the passage of the bill. Unless revolutionary tactices are adopted this change cannot be accomplished, because it must otherwise be accomplished under those very rules. When the attempt is made, as it is certain to be, the democratic watchword will be eternal vigilance and war to the death, and the people of the country may rest assured that nothing will be left undone to defeat the intentions of the desperate and despairing republican leaders.

By a curious coincidence Mr. Blaine chanced to be a visitor to the diplomatic gallery of the Senate, in company with the Brazillian naval officers who have been visiting us, just at the time when the Force bill was being read, and it must have required all his self possession to prevent the contempt he feels for that measure from showing itself in his countenance.

Mr. Harrison has caused it to be semi-officially hinted that he would veto a free silver coinage bill should congress pass one, but that fact has not prevented a dozen or more senators and representatives, at least half of them republicans, from introducing bills providing for free coinage, and Senator Teller has stated that he has positive assurances that such a bill will pass the Senate, and that he believes it will also go through the House. Mr. Harrison seems to learn nothing by experience. He made a similar bluff at the last session in regard to the River and Harbor bill, which he afterwards signed notwithstanding it carried one of the largest appropriations ever carried by a similar measure. He made no suggestion in his political harrangue to the republiban party, called by courtesy his annual message to congress, for the financial relief of the people, and he compelled his secretary of the treasury to cut out of his annual report a recommendation for the issue of an inconvertible 1½ or 2 per cent bond, which might have afforded some relief by increasing the volume of our currency; therefore he should not be surprised if the senators and representatives fresh from personal contact with the people and conversant with their needs should attempt to supply them.

One bill was introduced in the Senate by a republican—Senator Cullom—which most of the democrats would gladly vote for, if they could get a chance. It provides for one cent letter postage, which Mr. Harrison, in his anxiety to talk partisan politics, forgot to even mention in his message.

Quite a number of bills have been introduced in the House and Senate to repeal certain sections of the McKinley tariff act, one of the most notable of which is that introduced by Representative McCreary, of Kentucky to put what he very aptly calls the seven blessings of mankind, tin plate, cotton ties, agricultural implements and edged tools, binder twine, blankets, worsted for men and women's clothing and salt, upon the free list. If boss Reed and his henchmen would allow this bill to get before the House it would go through the House "quicker than a streak of greased lightning," as the saying is, but you may be sure that they will not do it. It would hurt some of the wealthy men for whose "protection" the republican party exists.

The pension appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1891, has been reported to the House. It appropriates $135,099,785, and those well informed say that it is less by from thirty to seventy millions of dollars than will be required to pay the pensions during the year. Look out for music when this bil is discussed in the House. Some peculiar republican pension methods are to be shown up by the democrats.

The House, after one day spent in fillibustering and one in discussion, passed the international copyright bill by a vote of 139 to 95.

Persuasion, threats, and bribery, on the part of the administration, by the promise of future patronage, has so far failed to get together a quorum of republicans in the House. Without that republican quorum no partisan legislation will be allowed to go through the House.

Wanted, 1000 Ladies!

To call on their druggist, F. E. Davenport, and ask for Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, the best medicine to take for coughs, colds and consumption. Guaranteed to cure or money refunded. This medicine is considered by those that have used it to be the most pleasant to the taste, and more effective than any other cough remedy in the market. One single bottle often curing the most severe cases of so called consumption that were really nothing more than a neglected cough, with pains in the throat and lungs. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

RECORD OF THE WEEK.

KUHNS, THE INDIANA DESPERADO WILL GET WELL.

His Physicians Say His Iron Nerve Will Carry Him Through—Thirteen Lives Lost in a Snow Storm—The Deadly Cyclone in Georgia—Gas Giving Out—A Child Carried Two Miles by an Eagle—Grant's Remains.

HE WILL GET WELL.

Kuhns, the Desperado, Fighting a Great Battle for Life.

Mervin Kuhns, who murdered Campaus, at Fostoria, Ohio, and in whose capture Policeman John Kennelly, of the Fort Wayne force was seriously wounded, is improving. He continues to attract attention and even admiration at the wonderful fight he is making. His nerve has not once deserted him. It seems scarcely possible, as has so often been said, that he can recover, yet he declares that he will get well, and his physician also has more hope for him, as the hours go by. He does not complain, but is a real monument of stoicism. With half a dozen air holes in his body he feels 100 per cent. better than Mease, who nurses his sore knee like a child. Officer Kennelly is getting well fast.

Nye Sues Riley.

New York special: Bill Nye, the humorist, is plaintiff in a lawsuit against the poet James Whitcomb Riley, his chum for years in the work of making Americans laugh. Nye and Riley have been a money-making combine for years, but Nye charges that while his own humor was always dry Mr. Riley's was too frequently wet. In Louisville, he says, early in the year Mr. Riley poured out to Bacchus libations which should have honored the shrine of Europe, and that the result was that when the hour arrived at which the combination should appear to amuse the public, Mr. Riley presented a very willowy form to the audience. Hence Mr. Nye's action. The action, which is for the recovery of $20,000 from Mr. Riley, will be tried at Indianapolis.

Deadly Cyclone.

Near Monroe, Walton County, Ga., a cyclone cleared a space several miles long, and about 100 yards wide, blowing down houses and killing several people. Jack Henderson and his wife were buried beneath the ruins of their home. Henderson was killed, but his wife was not badly hurt. Their baby was carried 300 yards and was so badly injured that it died shortly after being found. A family of negroes, named Jackson, were buried in the ruins of their cabin, and two of them were killed. Another house, containing negroes, was blown down, but all the occupants escaped unhurt.

A White Man Kills an Indian With a Billiard Cue.

A Durango special says: Saturday night Thomas Franklin quarreled with two Indians in a saloon at Armago, N. M. He struck both Indians over the head with a billiard cue, killing one and severely injuring the other. Apaches came to Armago, intent upon having Franklin's scalp, but he was secreted by the sheriff. Great excitement prevails, as the Indians declare they want justice. The towns people, however, have armed themselves and if the Indians should attempt to take Franklin out of town there will be trouble.

Gas Giving Out.

A large amount of money has been spent in building natural gas lines to Columbus, Dayton, Springfield, Troy, Sidney, Piqua and other manufacturing centers in Central Ohio. The owners of factories in all these cities have just been notified that the natural gas companies can no longer supply them with gas, and will only fulfill private contracts. It is feared that the supply will be inadequate even for private consumers.

A Child Carried Through the Air By An Eagle.

The 4-year-old son of Charles Waller, a prominent citizen of Italy, Texas, was playing in the yard of his father's home, when a large eagle descended and bore him away in its talons. Mr. Waller pursued the bird on horseback and rescued the child in a deep ravine two miles away where the eagle had alighted. The child was unhurt.

Kansas' Senator.

The Kansas Farmers' Alliance State Committee has instructed the county Alliances to take a vote on their choice for United States Senator, such vote in the aggregate is to guide the new Legislature in the election of a Senator. This canvas is to be made and reported at headquarters not later than January 1.

Young Hunter Gets His Brother's Bullet.

Oscar Shriver, the 18-year-old son of Hiram Shriver, a wealthy farmer living north of Massillon, Ohio, was out hunting with his brother. The rifle which Oscar carried was accidentally discharged, the ball entered his head and he was killed almost instantly.

Scheme to Buy All American Type Foundries.

A dispatch from Kansas City declares a company of England and American capitalists with $20,000,000 had been formed for the purpose of buying up the type foundries of this country, and was already in negotiation with foundries.

Kentucky Tobacco Growers.

The Kentucky tobacco growers, in session at Louisville, formed a corporation with $1,000,000 capital, and will start a warehouse in opposition to the trust.

Grant's Remains.

Congress, by a vote of 153 to 62, refused to pass the resolution for the removal of Gen. Grant's body to Arlington Cemetery.

Thirteen Lives Lost in a Snow Storm.

A special from St. Johns, Newfoundland, says the Norweigian bark Barjhelde was wrecked at Coddrey, during a heavy snow storm. Thirteen lives were lost, only two of the crew being saved. The storm continues unabated.

Against Child Labor.

The Hungarian International Socialistic party assembled in its first congress and issued a manifesto, which among other things demands the abolition of the army of child labor. It makes a demand for free education and the right of the people to carry arms.

Salaries Must Come Down.

The rumor that there is to be a wholesale butchery of salaries next year among the base ball players is substantially well founded. The action of players in withdrawing from the National League and American Association ranks and forming a Players League with an entire set of new backers resulted in over half a million dollars being actually squandered during the past season. This loss has got to be made up in some way and it comes from good authority that the Players' League capitalists who have joined forces with the National agreement magnates, have jointly come to the conclusion that the players can best afford to stand this tremendous loss. When the proper time comes a meeting will be held and a regular scale of prices agreed upon which will place the average salary at about $1,000.

PARNELL MUST GO.

A Majority of Irish Members Withdrawn from the Conference.

A London special, dated the 8th inst., says: The Irish Nationalist Conference, with Mr. Parnell in the chair, met in its room at the hour of noon and resumed its deliberations. A letter was read from Mr. Gladstone, in which he refused to give an assurance to the Irish Party as long as Mr. Parnell was the leader. After a heated discussion, Mr. Sexton arose and, speaking with calm deliberation, but in a tone indicative of suppressed emotion, delivered to Mr. Parnell the ultimatum of the majority of the Irish representation in Parliament. The ultimatum was to the effect that in the event of an affirmative decision of Mr. Parnell as to the resignation of the chairmanship being delayed after 6 o'clock this afternoon, the majority would at once withdraw from the present Conference, and proceed to convene a separate meeting of the majority. "This meeting," said Mr. Sexton, slowly and deliberately, facing his colleagues, "will depose Charles Stewart Parnell from his place as leader of the National Party of Ireland:"

Mr. John O'Conner moved the passage of a resolution which declared Mr. Gladstone's letter in reply to the overtures of the special committee of conference to be unsatisfactory and asserting that Ireland requires positive and unequivocal assurance from the Liberal leader, on behalf of his party, regarding the vital questions of Irish control of constabulary and land problems. Mr. Abraham then took the floor and moved as an amendment to Mr. O'Connor's motion a resolution that Mr. Parnell should at once vacate the chairmanship of the Irish National party. Mr. Parnell stolidly refused to put the question to Mr. Abraham's resolution whereupon Justin McCarthy and forty-four other members of the conference arose from their seats and slowly filed out of the room.

KUHNS CAPTURED.

He Makes a Desperate Resistence and Shoots a Policeman.

Marvin Kuhns, the desperado, who murdred Campus at Fostoria Ohio, was captured by Sheriff Viberg of Fort Wayne, at a farm house, fifteen miles north of that city. He was seen at Fort Wayne by several parties who knew him, and the Sheriff was notified. That officer summoned his Deputies and gave pursuit. Deputy Sheriff Wilkinson and Police Officer John Kennelly started, taking the Churubusco road, while the other two officers were scouring through the other part of the country. At Churubusco they learned that he had just arrived there by a train, and was then on his way to his father's house. They started at once in hot pursuit, and overtook him just out of town, and commanded him to surrender. He turned quickly and fired, shooting Kennelly. A number of shots were fired, and Kuhns escaped to a farm house, where he was afterwards captured by Sheriff Viberg. It was found that he had five bullets in his body, which will probably end his life. Officer Kennelly had three bad wounds and he will die. A lad named Mencie, a companion of Kuhns, was wounded in the leg. Kuhns is in jail at Fort Wayne.

Kennelly was a bright and popular officer, and has the reputation of being the bravest man on the Fort Wayne police force. He was 28 years old and unmarried.

Kuhns' parents are very respectable people, and have for years owned and worked on a farm eight miles north of the scene of the affair.

BOLD BANDITS.

Cuba Still at the Mercy of Garcia.

Havana Special: In spite of Gen. Polarico's stringent measures to suppress brigandage, the banditti continue to swarm in the open country. Five have been executed at Malarizar during the past month, and six others are under sentence of death. But these men were little known and did not belong to the gang of Manual Garcia, who still holds the field, bidding defiance to soldiers, civil guards, volunteers, and guerillas sent after them. The Governor General has offered a reward of $10,000 for the capture of Manual Garcia, and $5,000 for each of his followers. So far no arrests have been made of that band. As a challenge to the Captain General, while the latter was presiding over a tournament and bull fight, Manuel Garcia, with four of his boldest men, kidnapped a rich farmer near Bartabano, and passing through a cordon of soldiers, with whom they exchanged shots, escaped into the forest with their prisoner, for whom they now claim a ransom of $10,000. Garcia threatens to fire upon and derail the freight and passenger trains of the Havana Consolidated Railway Company, in revenge for their refusal to pay $25,000, the amount of the blackmail he levied upon the road several weeks ago. The public anxiously await the action of the Captain General to vindicate his authority and punish the marauders.

BRAZILIAN BRUTALITY.

A Petty Officer Cuts Down a Sailor Because He Complains of the Cold.

New York special: Adolpho Alves Maseira, a petty officer in the Brazilian navy, cut down with a blow from a cutlass a seaman on board the man-of-war Aquidaban, now lying in the North River. The affair occurred in the presence of six lieutenants of the flag ship, who, to all appearances, entirely approved of the action taken. Maseira was ordered to take a detail of men and the steam cutter for the day. All the men of the detail were directed to wear cutlasses. Maseira alone was unarmed. On the first call for the steam cutter to proceed to the dock Maseira appeared on deck and looked about for the guard. The men struggled up the companionway shivering and shaking with cold, and Maseira shouted out to them to hurry along. One poor fellow muttered something about the cold. Quick as a flash Maseira jumped forward, snatching the man's cutlass from its scabbard, and aimed a terrific blow at his head. The sailor, in attempting to dodge the blow received the full force of the blow on the side of the face and jaw. He reeled and staggered, clutched wildly at the air, and as another blow was delivered on the top of his head, he sank with a groan senseless to the deck. He was then turned over to the surgeon's care.

THE SWITCHMAN ASLEEP!

Is Suddenly Awakened, Turned the Wrong Lever and a Fatal Accident Occurs.

Camden (N. J.) special: The signal man at the switch tower at the junction of the West Jersey and Atlantic City Railroad turned a switch leading into a blind siding used for derailing trains and to avoid collisions at this junction. The train was the Salem freight, and the engine plunged across the track, turned on its side and nearly buried itself in the soft sand, the cars behind piling on top of the engine and completely blocking the four tracks of both the roads. At the time of the accident the conductor was standing in the cab of the engine with the engineer and fireman. The latter two jumped and landed safely, but the conductor, Samuel Leap, sprang from the opposite side, and as he did so, the car following the engine forged past the tender and toppled over on him. He was dragged along the track and ground to pieces. His head was found in one place and parts of his body in another. It is supposed the switchman was asleep and, being suddenly awakened by the whistle of the engine, turned the wrong lever.

FIGHTING DEATH.

Kuhns, the Outlaw and Desperado, Bravely Struggling with the King of Terrors.

Marvin Kuhns, the Rube Burrows of Indiana, and in the desperate struggle at the time of his arrest, Officer Kennelly, of Fort Wayne, was so dangerously wounded, lies in the Allen County, Indiana, jail with seven bullet wounds in his body. He declares he will not die, and exhibits remarkable nerve and grit. With three bullets in his lungs, he calmly sets and smokes his cigar and cheerfully converses with his attendants and physicians. Fort Wayne is swarming with officers from all parts of the country anxious to secure him on many charges. John Kennelly, the brave policeman, still lives with a possibility of his recovery.

Panic in an Englewood Hotel.

The Timmerman Opera House, in Englewood, a suburb of Chicago, was destroyed by fire. Fortunately no performance was given that night, but, as it was, there were many narrow escapes from death. In the building, occupying the second and third floors, is a large and fashionable hotel that was filled with guests. When the flames burst out in the theater a panic ensued in the hotel, and, as many of the guests had retired for the night, they came tumbling down the stairs in a wild scramble to reach the street. Some were overcome by the dense clouds of smoke that rolled in volumes through the hallways, but fortunately all were rescued and borne to the open air by the firemen. A rough estimate of the loss places it at between $75,000 and $100,000. It is supposed the fire was caused by the furnace.

The Farmers.

At the session of the National Farmers' Alliance, held at Ocala, Fla., Polk was re-elected President by acclamation. B. F. Kover, of Kansas, was unanimonsly elected Vice-President, and J. H. Turner, of Georgia, was elected Secretary.

The growth of the order is shown by the fact that in the first year 1,000 new charters have been issued for sub-alliances, of which 132 were for Indiana, 152 for Colorado, 252 for West Virginia, 106 for Michigan, 95 for Virginia, 86 for Illinois, 83 for South Carolina, 61 for Ohio, 59 for Pennsylvania, 30 for New Jersey, 5 for Minnesota, 5 for Iowa, 1 for Oregon and 1 for Oklahoma. State charters have been granted to Indiana, Illinois, Colorado, Michigan, West Virginia, Oklahoma, and North Dakota.

Death of Surgeon Baxter.

Surgeon General Baxter, of the army, who was stricken with paralysis, died at his residence in Washington. Dr. Baxter was born in Vermont in 1837. He practiced law when a young man, and later became a physician, and in June, 1861, he entered the army as surgeon of the Thirteenth Massachusetts volunteers, and the next year became Brigade Surgeon. After the war, Surgeon Baxter was appointed Assistant Medical Purveyor, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and in 1872, President Grant promoted him to the chief purveyorship of the army, and he held the position until August 19 last, when President Harrison appointed him Surgeon General.

Committee on Pensions.

General Goulding announces the appointment, in accordance with the instructions of the last National Encampment of the G. A. R., held at Boston, by the commander-in-chief of the following comrades as Committee on Pensions: Richard W. Blue, Kansas; Warner Miller, Herkimer, N. Y.; Alvin P. Hovey, Mount Vernon, Ind.; Selden Conner, Portland, Me.; L. T. Dickson, Danville, Ill.; Commercial Hall, Decatur, Ill.; Walter Q. Gresham, Chicago; Jos. O'Neal, Lebanon, Ohio; Geo. A. Mardeni, Lowell, Mass. Due announcement will be made in future general orders.

A Big Corn-Husking.

A big corn-husking match in which all western Iowa was interested, took place at Avoca. Al Johnson and Will McConnell, who for two years have claimed the championship of Iowa, were the contestants. A field of corn averaging forty bushels to the acre was chosen, and each champion worked ten hours. A big crowd of friends watched the race and cheered their respective favorites. The result was that each contestant husked and cribbed about 140 bushels. The prize was $100 a side, and was awarded to Johnson, his corn being freer of husks.

Victory for Women.

The question: "Shall women be admitted into the General Conference as lay delegates?" has been submitted to the congregations of all the Methodist churches in the United States, and the Philadelphia Methodist says that enough of the returns have been received to show that the women have carried the day, and, so far as the popular will goes, they are entitled to seats in the General Conference as lay delegates.

Boiler Explosion.

A boiler of a Lehigh Valley locomotive exploded at Dale, two stations from Attica, N. Y. The engineer, Thos. Mahoney, and the fireman, J. Leary, both of Buffalo, were killed. Their bodies have been taken to Dale. The locomotive was attached to the east-bound freight. The train was about to stop for water when the explosion occurred. The boiler was lifted from its trucks and carried backwards eighty feet. The tender and trucks did not leave the rails.

Trouble Brewing at Buffalo Gap.

Gen. Miles received detailed reports from all parts in the northwest Indian country. No trouble is apprehended anywhere along the border at present except at Buffalo Gap, S. D., where it is reported from unofficial sources that a band of Indians attempted to intercept three cowboys. The citizens of that town ask for a supply of ammunition. Gen. Miles leaves for the scene of threatened hostilities.

Attorney General's Report.

The annual report of the Attorney General was submitted to Congress. It gives a summary of the work done in the Supreme Court and the Court of Claims during the year. In the latter court the number of cases disposed of was 149. Amount claimed in them $2,799,997.97. Decided for defendants, twenty cases, claiming $953,907.24. For claimants 129 cases, claiming $1,846,090.72. Amount recovered, $255,198.21.

In a Living Tomb.

Philip McLennan, a miner in the Alberta coal pit at Lethbridge, N. W. T., has been imprisoned twenty-four hours in the mine through a cave-in. A small hole has been drilled through fourteen feet of coal, and the man is yet alive. Miners are working desperately to save their comrade's life. They can work but a few minutes at a time owing to the gas.

Collection of Coins.

An Indian stone jar containing many rare coins was dug up on the farm of Mahlon Funk, near Bangor, Mich. The coins are of various sizes, from large copper pennies and English pieces to United States half dollars, bearing dates of 1787 to 1836. It is said to be a rare collection and is supposed to have been buried for half a century.

Destitution in Oklahoma.

Great destitution prevails in Oklahoma, where hundreds of families are without necessary food or clothing. W. S. Giles, who went to that territory during the rush, passed through Topeka, Kan., en route to Indiana to solicit food and money for the destitute settlers. He says thousands of persons are on the verge of starvation.

Murder of a Young Girl.

The peculiar features attached to the alleged suicide of Emma P. Fitzenmeyer, a pretty young girl found dead in her bed-room at Chester, Pa., with her throat cut, after returning from a dance, have led the Coroner to investigate. The post-mortem shows that the wounds were not self-inflicted, and it is believed she was murdered.

Ten Thousand Short.

The Methodist Conference of North Georgia, which is in session at Washington, Ga., has discovered a shortage of $10,000 in the account of Hon. J. S. Stewart, Treasurer of the Missionary Fund. The Treasurer has been displaced from his position. He claims that the apparent deficit is due to bad book-keeping, and is paying up the shortage.

Declined to Raise the Wages.

At a meeting of all the large coal operators of Alabama a resolution was adopted, positively declining to advance the wages of the miners and refusing to confer with the executive committee of the United Mine Workers of America. The miners are determined to continue the strike.

Injured on a Revolving Saw.

J. B. Lipes, one of the proprietors of the Bartlett & Cummins sawmill, at Huntington, Ind., rested his arm on a table, not knowing that a very rapidly revolving saw was there. He leaned his arm on the saw and the entire left forearm was terribly lacerated.

Pension Agents.

Secretary Noble has been having numerous consultations of late with the members of the House Committee on Pensions with the view of effecting some needed reform with reference to the practice of claim agents in the pension office.

A Poor Old Soldier.

At Crothersville, Ind., William C. Bradford, an old Union soldier, set fire to his house and burned himself to death. He was 90 years old and had been for several years partially demented. His wife barely escaped from the flames.

Ruined and Died in Despair.

Clara McNeil, an 18-year-old girl who lived with Commissioner-elect Rutledge, near Taylorsville, Ohio, committed suicide by jumping into the Muskingum River. She was enciente and despondent.

Terrible Accident.

A blast furnace blew up at Joliet, Ill., burying fifteen men beneath the falling masonry and metal. Eight bodies have been taken out so far. This is the third fatal accident that has occurred at this furnace.

Starved Her Step-Daughter to Death.

A sensational trial has just ended at Trieste in a sentence of sixteen years' imprisonment pronounced upon the Countess Carlotta Badini, who has been convicted of the murder of her step-daughter by starvation and violence.

Will Labor No Longer.

Swan Gustafon, a Swede 29 years old, who was working as laborer at Cherokee, Ia., on a railroad as a laborer, has just fallen heir to $5,000,000 by the death of a relative in Pennsylvania. He has left for Philadelphia to claim his fortune.

Treacherous Tramps at Goshen.

Tramps raided the general store of A. T. Wiler, in Goshen, Ind., and set fire to the store, which, with the stock, was burned. The tramps were found in a school-house a short time after the fire, and six of them were arrested.

Railroad Accident.

The Chicago and Alton passenger train, bound for Kansas City, was wrecked at Jacksonville. Redsmith Merchant, of Pekin, Ill., and James Riffe, of Fountain Place, Ill., were instantly killed. Six were more or less injured.

Tascott Again Arrested.

A dispatch from Glenwood, Col., says that two Chicago detectives have arrested Clarence Seiler, a ranchman, living near Meeker, charging him with being Tascott, the murderer of Millionaire Snell, of Chicago.

Did Koch's Lymph Kill Him?

A Berlin dispatch says that Robert Lowenstein died at Frankfort, after being inoculated with Koch's lymph. His death struggles, it is said, was terrible in their fury and evident suffering.

Mrs. Snell's Renewal.

Mrs. Snell, the widow of Amos J. Snell, has renewed her offer to pay $50,000 for the arrest of William B Tascott and his detention until identified, the reward to hold good one year.

Both Legs Off.

Brakeman Fetters, of the Wabash road, fell under a train at Lafayette, Ind, and had both legs cut off, one below and the other above the knee. The unfortunate brakeman may not survive.

Fire at Montpelier.

The business portion of Montpelier, Ind., was destroyed by fire.

FEEBLE-MINDED HOME.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF SUPT. JOHN G. BLAKE.

Interesting Facts and Figures Relating to the State Institution Located at Fort Wayne—Splendid Financial Showing—Substantial Improvements Made.

The twelfth annual report of the Superintendent and Board of Trustees of the Indiana School for Feeble-Minded Youth, located at Fort Wayne, has been filed with Gov. Hovey.

The total receipts from the State Treasury for the fiscal year, ending Oct. 31, 1890, were $78,238. Of this amount, $3,000 belonged to last year's expenses, being a deficit appropriation of two years ago and not drawn until the beginning of the present fiscal year.

For the first time, the fiscal year finds the home in its own quarters. Nov. 1, 1889, there were 262 children on the rolls. Since the number admitted has been 74, returned from vacation, 3, making a total of 339. During the year, 9 boys and 6 girls were discharged. Seven afflicted ones have died, 2 are absent visiting friends. On October 31, the number in the institute was 315, and at the end of the present year the number is 317. Of that number, 79 are epileptics, 15 paralytics, 9 idiotic and of the remaining, more than one-half evince low symptom of imbecility and partial idiocy, while the remaining few constitute the better grade, known as the feeble-minded.

The health of the inmates of the institute has been during the year very good, much better than would be expected with the classes to which they belong. Once the influenza appeared and spread until more than half the inmates were afflicted, but no death was directly due to the epidemic.

The report of the industries is very creditable. In the shoe shop, 290 pairs girls' and 343 pairs boys' shoes were made, a total of 633, and the total number repaired were 2,314. If the repairs had been made outside the institution, the cost would have been $1,388.40, while the actual cost is $809.90, a saving of $578.50. The making of the shoes would have amounted to $1,205.50. The real cost, as it is, amounts to $886.20, being a balance of $322.30, and this added to sewing on repair work makes the total amount saved, $1,900.80.

In the mattress and upholstery department were made 258 husk mattresses at $2.45 each, 91 cotton mattresses at $2.45 each, 120 feather pillows at $1.26 each. One hundred and twenty husk mattresses, renovated at $1 each; 10 pair pillow shams, at 75 cents a pair.

In the tailor shop were made 364 pants, 271 coats, 157 shirts, 54 suits of underwear, 13 white coats, 358 dresses, 162 aprons, 298 drawers, 142 skirts, 94 underwaists, 654 night gowns, 445 towels, 266 sheets, 20 vests, 187 pillow-cases, 49 table cloths, 213 mattresses, 24 corset covers, 54 bedspreads, 190 night shirts, 534 napkins, 185 pairs knitted stockings, 29 pairs socks, 49 comforts, 14 sundries, a total of 4,564 articles made for the institute.

Eight hundred thousand pieces were laundried during the year.

The results in the farming and gardening departments far exceeded the expectations of the superintendent and trustees, and next year they expect to have all the "truck" necessary for the home. Twelve thousand native forest trees have been planted, the ground graded, hills leveled, driveways and walks made, etc. The permanent improvements made are numerous; besides sleeping rooms, storage rooms, and outside scullery, a commodious pump and hose-reel house and 6,152 feet of fencing has been constructed.

Superintendent Blake strongly urges the necessity of the erection of two school-houses, of not less than eight rooms each.

"The reason for the large expenditure during the past year, has been the failure to obtain water, necessitating the sinking of two large wells, each 300 feet deep, building new pump house, purchase of a large fire pump, extending the water lines for fire protection, has aggregated over $6,000. Erecting over 6,000 feet of fencing, $2,300; construction of rooms, etc., $1,800, ditching and tiling grounds, $1,600; expense of moving, $3,000; with other incidents, amounts to nearly $19,000. This, taken from the total receipts, shows total expenditures for maintenance during the year have been less than $60,000, which is $30,000 less than the per capita appropriation of $15 per month." The purchase of more land is urged by the Trustees and Superintendent.

Our Lost.

There's a tender spot in the heart of almost every living person sacred to the memory of some loved one who has gone on before. It may have been father or mother, sister or brother, husband, wife or child, but the spot is there, and in the first bitter hours of our bereavement how very, very tender and sore it is. The slightest touch upon that spot, by word or thought, will cause inexpressible pain, and we think, as we feel the gnawing anguish at our hearts, the bitter burning pain will never cease, and perhaps long and pray for death ourselves to end our sorrow and misery and reunite us with the loved one. But time passes on. The necessities of living occupy our thoughts, and gradually, at each recurring time the thought of our loss strikes us, the blow is less severe, the pain less sharp. We never cease to mourn, we never forget our dead, but we can think of them in a tender, loving, even hopeful light. We remember every good and lovable quality, and if they possessed others, we never think of them, and gradually we bring ourselves to think and believe they were perfect, and we cease mourning so bitterly, and only a sad, loving, tender recollection remains.—Farm and Fireside.

A Most Inopportune Event.

Fair Young Patient—Tell me, doctor, shall I soon get well?

Doctor—Alas, my poor girl, you have a sad case of congestion of the larynx and I fear we must soon lose you.

F. Y. P.—But I shall live till spring, shall I not?

Doctor—I fear you may not survive the week.

F. Y. P.—Oh, doctor, doctor! to think that I paid twenty-eight dollars for that new winter bonnet and have only worn it once!

Children That Never Dress.

Fully three-fourths of the babies of the world go naked until they get to be five or six years old. The Canadian Indians keep their babies naked up to a certain point, and as for the little Coreans, they wear nothing but a short shirt until they are as old as our schoolboys. Little Egyptians of both sexes trot around without any clothes on, and the poorer sections of the Chinese children are often without clothes. There are quite large boys and girls naked in Havana, Cuba, and in Southern California, or rather on the California Peninsula.

THE NATIONAL SOLONS.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Law-Makers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country—Various Measures Proposed, Discussed, and Acted Upon.

At the expiration of the hour devoted to the calendar in the Senate, on the 2d, Mr. Hoar moved to proceed to the consideration of the House bill "to amend and supplement the election laws of the United States and to provide for the more efficient enforcement of such laws." Mr. Gorman demanded the yeas and nays on that motion. The yeas and nays were taken and the vote (a strictly party one) resulted: Yeas, 41; nays, 30. So the election bill was taken up, and the reading went on monotonously and to empty chairs up to 2 o'clock, when, under the rules of the Senate, the "unfinished business" from the last session came up, being the House bill providing for the adjustment of accounts of laborers, workmen, and mechanics arising under the eight-hour law. Mr. Hoar moved to proceed with the consideration of the election law, and Mr. Gorman rose to argue against that motion. The motion finally carried, and the consideration of the election bill was continued. In the House, Mr. Harmer, of Pennsylvania, presented the petition of citizens of Philadelphia in favor of an amendment to the McKinley bill allowing a rebate on unbroken packages of smoking tobacco and snuff. Referred. In the morning hour Mr. Simonds, from the Committee on Patents, called up for consideration the copyright bill. Mr. Payson (Ill.) raised the question of consideration. The House decided—yeas, 132; nays, 74—to consider the bill. No vote on the measure was reached.

In the Senate, Mr. Hawley, from the Committee on Military Affairs, on the 3d reported and asked to have put upon its passage a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to issue arms and ammunition to the States of North and South Dakota. Mr. Manderson moved to amend it by including the State of Nebraska, and referred to the threatened uprising of the Sioux Indians on their reservation there. Mr. Voorhees said that if the proposition were one to issue a hundred thousand rations of food to the starving Indians it would be more consistent with Christian civilization. Maj. Gen. Miles, he said, had stated in public interviews that the Indians were driven to revolt by starvation; and it was in his judgment a crime on the part of the Government to stand silently by and do nothing except furnish arms to the whites. In the House the copyright bill was passed, the vote being 139 to 95—44 majority for the bill. The affirmative vote was given by 105 Republicans and 34 Democrats, and the negative by 69 Democrats and 26 Republicans. A large proportion of its support came from the Eastern and Middle States, while the bulk of the opposition was from the West and South. The bill is substantially the same as that which passed the Senate in the Fiftieth Congress and failed to be acted upon in the House.

The election bill was taken up in the Senate on the 4th and Mr. Pugh spoke in opposition to it. He said the country could not fail to understand the true character and nature of the proposed legislation. It was never intended to be put in operation in Republican districts. Under its operation there would not be a single district in the United States from which Democrats were elected to Congress that would not be subject to supervision by partisan Republicans. The whole conception of the bill was a transparent and audacious scheme, having no other end or purpose than the capture of Democratic districts. In the House the bill for the punishment of every guardian, conservator, curator, committee, tutor, or other judiciary agent for the embezzlement of the pensions of a ward was passed. On motion of Mr. Morrow, of California, the House went into committee of the whole on the pension appropriation bill. Mr. Morrow said that the bill appropriated for the payment of pensions the sum of $133,173,000. It was estimated that this sum of money would be distributed among 654,715 pensioners. This was the largest number of beneficiaries ever provided for in any single item in the statutes of the United States. It was estimated that the gross cost to the United States of these pensions for the year 1892 would average $203 each. He believed there would be no deficiency next year—that there would prove to be a slight excess of appropriation.

The election bill was taken up in the Senate on the 5th, and Mr. Gray spoke against it. The bill, he said, was menacing to the peace, happiness, and freedom of the several States. Notwithstanding the sneer uttered by the President of the United States as to the objections of those who opposed the bill, there were many who believed the measure one that threatened the integrity of American institutions, State and national. Senator Stanford introduced a bill to provide the Government with means sufficient to supply the national want of a sound circulating medium, and asked that it lie on the table, stating that he would hereafter submit some remarks on it. The bill is the same as that introduced by him last May. It authorizes the issue of $100,000,000 in Treasury notes to be loaned at 2 per cent. upon application by citizens owning unincumbered agricultural lands, the loans not to exceed one-half the assessed value of the land nor to extend for more than twenty years. In the House the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to issue one thousand stand of arms to each of the States of North and South Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska was passed. The politicians had a lively fight over the annual pension appropriation bill. The Democrats charged that the total appropriation proposed was many millions short of the amount that will be required during the next fiscal year to pay claims that will be granted under the pension legislation of this Congress, and that the object was to throw on the next Congress the necessity of providing for a heavy deficiency. The bill, which appropriates something over $135,000,000, was finally passed.

In the Senate, on the 6th, Mr. Paddock presented the protest of the Farmers' Alliance in convention at Ocala, Fla., against the passage of the Conger lard bill. Mr. Sherman introduced three bills and one amendment to a bill, all of which were referred to the Finance Committee. The new bills are as follows: To amend the law relating to the refining and parting of bullion, to amend the act authorizing the receipt of gold coin in exchange for gold bars, and a bill authorizing the recoinage of subsidiary coins of the United States. The amendment is one to the Senate bill to reduce the amount of United States bonds required of national banks. The provisions of the amendment are as follows: Section 1 limits the compulsory requirements of deposits of United States bonds with the Treasurer of the United States by national banks to the amount of $5,000 of bonds for each and every national bank, provided that the voluntary withdrawal of bonds for the retirement of national bank notes shall not exceed $3,000,000 in any month. Section 2 provides that upon United States bonds deposited or which may be deposited, bearing interest, any national banking association making the deposit shall be entitled to receive from the Controller of the Currency circulating notes of different denominations, not exceeding in the whole amount the par value of the bonds deposited. Section 3 authorizes the Secretary to issue United States notes equal to retirement of national bank notes below a circulation of $180,000,000. Section 4 authorizes the issue of United States bonds to an amount not to exceed $100,000,000, to be redeemed at the pleasure of the Government and to bear 2 per cent. interest. They are to be sold for lawful money or coin certificates, and the proceeds are to be applied to the redemption or purchase of United States bonds.

Toward the Setting Sun

Myriads of emigrants take their way. Thousands upon thousands of acres covered with the virgin forest still await the ax of the pioneer. "Holding down a claim" on the frontier, it should be remarked, has other drawbacks besides that of disputed possession. Many an enterprising settler who, with indomitable hardihood, has cleared the waste, just as a scanty area is ready for tillage, is stricken by that foe of the frontiersman, malaria. What a boon to that man and his family is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, what wise forethought has he shown if he has obtained an adequate supply. The fairest fields for agricultural and mining enterprises on this continent and abroad are subject to this infliction. Protected by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters it may be defied. It will not do to confide in a robust constitution alone. Malaria prostrates the strong and weak alike. Take the Bitters, too, for rheumatism, dyspepsia, biliousness, kidney trouble.

The Hog and the Snake.

It is told that a rattlesnake lay coiled, with head up and rattles sounding notes of anger, while a hog walked around it with bristles erect. The snake finally struck at the hog, and fixed his fangs in her jaw. She raised her head, and the snake was fastened to her. Instantly she caught the snake's body in her mouth, put her fore feet on his tail, and stripped the skin up. Renewing her foothold on the body of the snake, she took another pull and tore the snake in two, and then complacently set in to eating it.

Before the use of Prickly Ash Bitters became general throughout the South and West, it was a fearful dose of "Blue Mass," and daily doses of quinine, that was forced down the throats of suffers from all malarial troubles. In place of such obnoxious, harrowing curatives, Prickly Ash Bitters, with its mild, soothing action, now holds supreme sway, and after one trial, its use when necessary, is forever established. You who have sick-headaches, sour stomachs, diseased liver or kidneys, can do no better than to give it a trial.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. A PEN PHOTOGRAPH.

BY EMILIE CLARE.

Well, be it so: for once, indeed, to see as I am seen,
To laugh and jest, to frown or sigh, and gossip, too, I ween.
The picture does not flatter much, my tresses turning gray,
The circling years have registered just three score years to-day.
My faithful glasses ever near assist my faded eye
To trace the lines where dimples shone in happy days gone by.
I may not sigh for cheek of rose, for still my face is fair,
And Time has left my teeth of pearl and cheeks a ruby pair.
The silent thief has left me, too, a thankful heart and gay
For worldly blessing, as I go down life's dusty way.

I sometimes think my weight goes on, and yet I am contented,
And quite ignore the anti-fat some genius has invented;
Nor envy in my inmost soul the skeleton or shad
That Worth or Butteric resurrect with cunning puff and pad.
It does not seem I'm growing old, though little children three
Are very fond of grandmama, and cling about my knee,
Just as I used to cling to one some fifty years ago—
The sweetest face I ever saw, framed in a cap of snow.

It seems, indeed, but yesterday she called me to her side
And whispered, "Blessings on you, Trot," the very night she died.
"You look as old as I," she said; "your hair like mine is white;
Now, kiss me, darling, once again, and then we'll say good-night."
A last good-night, and I shall hear her gentle voice no more,
Till called from earth with all its care to see the other shore;
Though well I know her kindly eyes look on my lowly lot,
And all those happy sinless days can never be forgot.

There's something else I'd love to learn—in heaven 'twill be explained—
The mystery that draped her life, her tender bosom pained,
The lonely years of widowhood, the tragic tale of woe
That robbed her of her joy and pride a hundred years ago.
For none grow old and feeble there, but youth and joys return,
And all the friends we've loved below for whom our bosoms yearn;
As nothing sweet or dear in life can ever be forgot,
Then Grandma Goode will be rejoiced to meet with Grandma Trot.

Dr. Elfenstein's Mission

A Remarkable Romance.

BY EMILY THORNTON.

CHAPTER V—Continued.

Turning at last in their walk, she said: "I think I must leave you now, Dr. Elfenstein, and again look after the interests of my poor aunt. In doing so, allow me to thank you for a pleasant hour."

"Not at all; it is I who have been under obligations fof your delightful companionship. Whenever you feel timid outside, I would be pleased to attend you."

"Thank you, I presume I shall be glad often to avail myself of your kind offer."

With a bright parting smile she then passed from his sight.

A few daps after the promenade on deck, Dr. Elfenstein was again summoned by Miss Nevergail to attend her aunt, who was very ill, owing to the violence of a storm.

Portioning out a sedative, the young physician turned to give it to his companion, and in handing it their fingers met, and at the touch his heart leaped so forcibly into a delightful thrill that it caused an instant feeling of questioning as to its cause.

"Why," he asked himself, "should this state of things exist?" Why was he not able to meet this beautiful girl calmly, as he had heretofore met other beautiful women?

Then he resolved to beware of this folly that was gaining such an influence over him, and to remember the solemn work he had to do, the course of life he had lain down as his, which, if followed, would debar him of all female society, except in a professional way, and then once more he determined, if he could not control his feelings, to avoid her presence and by so doing return to duty and the fulfillment of his vow.

Their passage across the Atlantic was an unusually propitious one. It was with relief to both the physician and anxious niece that they saw the termination of the voyage, for, in spite of their united efforts, Mrs. Nevergail's strength was rapidly departing.

Dr. Elfenstein had an unusually tender and sympathizing heart. He could not see so young a girl in such trouble and not, in everything possible, lend a helping hand.

Forgetting resolutions almost as soon as formed, he cared for her as a brother, and the eloquent look of gratitude that flashed upon him as, after seeing them both safely in the Liverpool home of their cousin, Mr. Rogers, Ethel placed her hand in his, at parting, and faltered out her thanks, as he bade her farewell, never expecting to see her more, was a reward not soon to be forgotten.

After leaving his fellow voyagers, our hero lost no time in pursuing his own journey.

Before a week had rolled by his way was made perfectly plain, and a pleasant home was provided.

He found by inquiring of Levi Perkins, the landlord of the hotel where he stopped, that the place had just been excited, and almost stunned, by the sudden illness of Dr. Jennings, the only physician for miles around.

He had been rendered helpless three days before by a paralytic stroke, and, as all feared, would never again be able to attend to his professional duties.

Instantly, on hearing this news, the young man had visited the house of the old gentleman, and showing his letters of recommendation, and his written credentials, he had offered to attend to the sick in his place, which offer was accepted, and in a few days the stranger had all the calls for medical advice that he could attend, and the result was that he bought the practice of the old and worn-out man, and became his accepted successor.

Dr. Jennings lived only two days after Elfenstein's arrival, for a third severe shock laid him at rest from his earthly labors forever.

He died lamented by all, having, in truth, been to the inhabitants of the place for years and years a "beloved physician."

The funeral was a large one, and after the day, with its many excitements, had passed, Dr. Elfenstein again visited the house where the dead had so recently lain, and asking to see the daughter, Mrs. Stewart, he offered to rent the cottage, furnished for a year, provided Mrs. Clum would remain in it, as formerly, in the capacity of housekeeper.

This offer relieved Mrs. Stewart of what had been an anxiety, and as Mrs. Clum was delighted to still retain her home, all due arrangements were immediately made, papers drawn up and signed, and one week from the day of his arrival we find "Earle Elfenstein, M. D.," upon a sign beside the door of the prettiest cottage in the place, and that young disciple of Galen busy night and day attending to the large practice so suddenly thrown upon his hands.

CHAPTER VI.

SIR REGINALD GLENDENNING.

Sir Reginald Glendenning was out of humor one sunny morning in May.

The daily mail had been handed him, as usual, just as he had commenced his breakfast, and one letter that he had then received had discomposed and made him surly and cross, which a fearful oath made evident to all.

"Jimmy, you young rascal, don't stand gazing there, but attend to your duties. Lady Constance, just stop gazing in that reproachful way at me, and eat your breakfast! I know what I am saying, though your looks seem to doubt it."

This was by no means an unusual mood for her husband to be in, and Lady Constance Glendenning, whenever she saw the peculiar expression float over his face that it now wore (for it was an ugly look that for years she had been accustomed to meet), knew well that it was best to make no remark, but quietly leave him to himself by vacating the room as quickly as possible.

Therefore she, as well as her only brother's orphan son and daughter, who had been left in their charge, finished their breakfast in silence, and, with as much dispatch as decency would permit, then strolled to their own amusements, leaving the lord and master of the establishment to glower at the unwelcome sheet he still held in his hand, undisturbed by their presence.

"Perdition!" he muttered. "What deuced luck is this? After my not going to the funeral of my sister and thus, by my absence, showing that I had not overlooked her plebeian marriage, to think that these people have forwarded such a letter as this to me is absurd! I do not care if it was written by her before her death. They might have known I did not wish it. Take charge of her husband's niece, forsooth! The girl be hanged! She may go to the alms house for all me! I will not have a thing to do with her.

"Suppose my brother-in-law did die, and his wife also, and suppose the girl is left alone, that is no sign that I should be trammeled with her presence and guardianship. No! I will never notice the stuff written there by word or deed!"

So saying, Sir Reginald turned to his library, tossed the offensive letter into a drawer of his bookcase, locked it, and, putting the key in his pocket, rang the bell furiously for a waiter, ordering him to have the groom bring to the door a young horse named Tempest at once, as he intended to ride.

The baronet stalked to the piazza, where he stood impatiently slashing a lovely trained clematis with his whip, until Michael appeared, leading a fiery young horse by the bridle.

"Adn't your lordship better take Jerry this morning? This beast is very wild and skittish like, and I fear ye may 'ave trouble to 'old 'im."

"Bring him hither. If he feels wild so do I, and our moods will suit," was the sullen reply.

Springing upon the back of the handsome creature, Sir Reginald Glendenning dashed away, just as his nephew, Robert, a young man about twenty years of age, appeared upon the deserted piazza.

He was in personal appearance very tall, with a magnificent figure, dark complexion, handsome features, and large, speaking black eyes, while his whole air portrayed the pride that he had so richly inherited from his own immediate family.

"Belle!" he exclaimed, as his sister, a beautiful brunette, followed him. "See our worthy relative dashing down the carriage way at that break-neck speed. Zounds! if I were to ride in that savage way, he would rate me soundly for it for the next three days. I wonder what news that letter could have contained to infuriate him as it did. Do you know, he is always terribly provoked when he rides like that."

"I do not, neither does Aunt Constance. I should like to read it though, would not you?"

"Yes; I wonder where he put it?"

"In the drawer of his book-case, where he keeps letters not answered. I wish I could unlock it, but the key has gone down the carriage way in the old gent's pocket," replied the unfilial girl.

"Well, since you express a wish to see it, perhaps I can aid you. See! this key looks as though it might fit any lock," returned the young man, readily enough falling into the suggestive mood of his sister.

Laughing at the impulsive mood of her brother, the young girl turned quickly with him, and both glided with stealthy steps toward the library and their uncle's desk.

The key fitted; a fact Robert well knew, as it was not the first time it had been tried by the unprincipled nephew, and the following letter, written in a hand evidently feeble from sickness, was eagerly read, then as quickly returned to its hiding place, and the drawer relocked, as they had found it.

On the envelope was written, "To be sent to Sir Reginald Glendenning, Bart., after my death."

Sir Reginald Glendenning:

MY DEAR BROTHER—You will doubtless be surprised to receive this letter from one who has been so many years separated from her family, in consequence of having married, secretly, the man of her choice. Allow me merely to say that when you read this, the sister that you once loved will have passed away, and, therefore, she trusts that all hard feelings that her marriage may have occasioned (a marriage that was a happy one until the bond was severed by the death of the devoted husband) will be buried forever. Brother, I write to you now in order to crave a favor at your hands. My only child died in infancy, and just twenty and a half years ago, I, with the consent of my husband, took charge of a little girl of gentle blood and some pleasant future prospects, and gave her the love of a true mother. On her twenty-first birthday she will be at liberty to open certain documents laid aside for her, and then will come into possession of her own property, for some little awaits her majority. Until then after my death, she will be friendless and alone. Now, I ask if you will care for her until that date (October 5) is reached? Can she not in some way be of service to you, and thus compensate for her board and trouble? Do this for me, my dear brother; be kind to and care for my dear Ethel, and my dying gratitude will be yours. Your affectionate sister, GERTRUDE.

"Of all impudent proposals, that is the climax!" ejaculated Belle, indignantly. "Take her into his own family, indeed! I will bet the minx don't come here, if I can help it. She is no earthly relation to him."

"Your opinion will not be asked, sister mine," returned her companion in evil deeds; "and you must remember that you are supposed to know nothing of the contents of that letter. But do not be alarmed. Our relative looked too much like a thundercloud to be cajoled into receiving her here."

"Yes; that is true, so we need not be anxious," was the girl's reply, as she hastened from the library.

Need we stop now, after relating such a scene, to describe the wholly heartless characters of these relations of Lady Constance Glendenning?

Indulged from infancy by their own parents as much as by the Lady Constance, whose whole affections had centered upon them, in consequence of the cold manner of her moody, passionate husband toward herself, it is not to be wondered at that they developed with each year selfish and unamiable dispositions under her foolishly fond sway, until at last they demanded as a right the indulgence of every whim or caprice, even at the expense of honor or the welfare of those around them.

As for Lady Constance, her naturally amiable disposition had grown hardened. Life with her violent-tempered husband had proved anything but pleasant, and as she finally saw his ugly features of character being imitated by these children under her charge, she became morbidly indifferent and cold to such a degree that her nearest relatives could scarcely recognize in the proud Lady Constance Glendenning the once light-hearted and gay young cousin, whose society was so much sought in former years by the three brothers before their father's death, when life had been so different for each.

Ah! little had those brothers dreamed in those gay, glad, youthful days, of the hard and cruel future that lay before two, at least, of their number!

This morning Lady Constance felt unusually dispirited.

Her apathetic heart had been moved the night before by a singularly vivid dream, in which she had met once more her never forgotten early lover, and the face of Sir Arthur had appeared in that midnight hour with all the realness of life, while she seemed to hear him wail in despair:

"Oh, Constance, Constance!"

Starting from this dreary sleep, she tossed restlessly until morning, and then, after rising, found that the impression made upon her mind had not in the least vanished.

Upon being so roughly addressed at the breakfast hour she had with difficulty restrained her tears, and when once more alone, in the retirement of her own apartment, she sank upon her knees, and weeping bitterly, moaned:

"Oh, Arthur, why was I so unfaithful to thy precious memory? Why did I forget thee so soon, my own, my own? Wretched, guilty woman that I have been, to wed for a title and inheritance so unfeeling and heartless a man as I, alas! have done! Oh, God! forgive this, my sin, and grant me peace with thyself after my weary life is ended!"

Long and bitterly she thus wrestled with her own heart, never stirring from her lowly posture, until she was suddenly aroused by a horrified scream from lips she knew to be Belle's, while a strange call in tones of anguish for "Aunt Constance" caused her to rise and open the door, where she, too, was startled to see the whole household assembled in the halls, and then the first knowledge of some awful calamity fell upon her heart.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

To Escape from Tornadoes.

When trying to escape from a tornado never run to the northeast, east, or southeast. Never take refuge in a forest or a grove of trees, or near any object that may be overturned by the wind. A frame building is better than one built of brick or stone. The former is more elastic and holds together longer; the latter goes down in the first crash, and the debris is whirled into a heap in the center of the foundation. In a frame structure the cellar is the safest place, but in a brick or stone building it is the most perilous. In the former case the debris is carried away from the foundation, while in the latter instance the cellar is filled with it.

The tornado cave offers absolute security to life and limb, and no means of security can replace it for that purpose. As regards protection to property, no building can be made sufficiently large, strong, high, or low to resist the force of the tornado's vortex. There is no changing the path of the tornado by the employment of explosives or by any artificial barrier. To contemplate the dispersion of the cloud by the use of any electrical contrivance is also idle. All buildings should be constructed as would be done without the knowledge of the tornado, and then protected by legitimate insurance. Protection must be accomplished by organized capital, the safety of one being assured by the legitimate and successful co-operation of many.

The writer strongly advocated this method of protection during his tornado investigations in the West in 1879, and now several million dollars' worth of property is thus insured every year. —Forum.

"It's a Shop, Sir!"

I had an experience all my own in Lock & Co.'s hat store, in St. James street. The aged proprietor displays ancient helmets and caps in his window, which is kept scrupulously dusty. Noting this I said, "This must be a very old store, indeed?"

"Store?" said the man. "It's no store at all; it's a shop, sir. I call a store a place for the sale of a miscellaneous lot of goods, but this is a shop, sir. You ought to be more careful in your use of terms."

If that was rudeness—and I do not know how great he considered his provocation—it was the only rudeness I experienced from any shopkeeper. But I learned from that incident not to say store. And before I left London I had swelled my index expurgatorius to the extent that I seldom used the following words: Guess, yes, sir, glass (for tumbler), railroad, horse car, cents, fix, store, or pad of paper. "Block of paper," they said, when I at last got them to understand that I wanted a pad. "Guess" and "fix" are pure Americanisms, and are to be used or not as you want to attract curious attention or to avoid it. But the most difficult thing for many Americans in England was to avoid saying "sir" to a stranger who addressed them or to an old gentleman. "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," over there are the verbal insignia of a servant.—Julian Ralph, in Harper's Weekly.

Were Not Full.

A negro woman borrowed a dozen eggs from a neighbor, and instead of returning a dozen, brought back only eleven.

"How's dis?" the lender asked.

"'How's whut, lady?"

"W'y you borrid er dozen aigs frum me, but dar ain't but erleben yere. How does you 'count fur dat?"

"I 'counts fur it might easy. Dem aigs I got frum you wa'n't right full."

"Wa'n't right full! Whut you means by dat?"

"I means dat da wa'n't full—dat de hens whut laid 'em wa'n't right honest. Deze aigs dat I have fotched you is full up ter de brim; an' yo' kaint 'spect me ter fetch you er dozen full aigs fur er dozen dat wa'n't right full. Oh, I's squar', I is."—Arkansaw Traveler.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

A Race.

A little tear and a little smile
Set out to run a race,
We watched them closely all the while,
Their course was baby's face.

The little tear he got the start;
We really feared he'd win,
He ran so fast, and made a dart
Straight for her dimpled chin.

But somehow—it was very queer,
We watched them all the while—
The little shining, fretful tear
Got beaten by the smile.

The Reason.

"You don't dot your i's," remarked the teacher to Freddy Hojack, as she looked over his writing lesson.

"Nome," replied Freddy, "I'm not a lotter; I'm a son."

A Boys' Military Company.

Of course there is a great difference between the way rich boys and poor boys form military companies. All a boy with plenty of money has to do is to buy his suit, while the poor boy has to make the best shift he can.

But the best-dressed companies are not always the best drilled, for poor boys, as a rule, are willing to serve in the ranks, and they do not all want to be Captain. The real boy—not the Lord Fauntleroy kind—is satisfied with the uniform and the rank he can get, provided that he can be a member of a company.

The World's boy reporter has just established a military club. He collected from friends and relatives of members of the proposed company enough money to buy the uniforms, but the work had only begun when the money was collected. Somebody must be found to drill the boys.

Uniforms for twelve of us cost about $25, and the captain of a German rifle company proposed, when the case was laid before him, to teach us, provided that we would do our best.

He may have been pretty tired of us before he got through, for the whole company used to go around to his house every other night until we knew the manual of arms and company maneuvers. But he never showed that he didn't like the job, and all the boys think he is the stuff.

The Treatment of Boys.

Not long ago, at a concert where there were no reserved seats, two neatly dressed, bright-faced little boys, perhaps ten and twelve years old, arrived early and took possession of two of the best seats in the house. It was perfectly proper that they should do this, for they had come early on purpose to get good places. They had scarcely seated themselves when an usher came forward with some fashionably dressed ladies, and looking crossly at the boys, beckoned them to come to him. They obeyed, and were shown to other seats not nearly so good as their original ones, which they accepted unmurmuringly while the ladies were given the places from which the 'unoffending boys had been ejected.

Presently, as the house filled up, the same usher again made the boys give up their seats to some more ladies, and move to still poorer ones. The boys did not look as though they liked this treatment, but they "moved on" again like little gentlemen, as they were. The blood of at least one spectator of this injustice boiled with indignation. If these boys had been asked to move again, there would have been at least one earnest protest entered, which might or might not have shamed the bully usher. It would have been uttered at the second infringement upon their rights if it had not been for the popular prejudice against "making a scene."

A boy of twelve recently said to his mother: "When we are on the ice, mamma, if the men want us to move they come along and say, as cross as they can, 'Move along, you young rascals! Nobody allowed on that part!' But if it is a lady they speak to, it is all bow and smile, and 'Madam, excuse me, but on this portion of the ice no one is allowed to go just at present; I am sorry to disturb you.' Now, we are behaving every bit as well as the ladies. They are real mean to talk so to us, but they always do. I s'pose it's cos we ain't anything but boys."

Doubtless the boys are somewhat to blame for this state of affairs. They are "trying" many times, it must be confessed. But who wouldn't be "trying" when, being innocent, he is treated like a criminal? We usually rise, says a great writer, to the opinion which is held of us. If you make a boy feel as though he were an object of scorn and suspicion, he will doubtless respond accordingly.

If you treat him, on the other hand, as you ought to, as an individual with rights to be respected, with good intentions to be honored, and with a loving little soul to be found underneath that careless mask of freckles and mud-spots and slang, ten to one you will find him a companionable, affectionate little fellow, who will be as wax under your hand. Give the boy a chance. They are now the foot-ball of society; they ought to be its friend and comrade, and they would be if society would only treat them as the poor boys themselves express it, "half-way decent."—Kate Upson Clark, in Christian Union.

A TEACUP IN DANGER.

An Amusing Trick with All Materials for It Convenient.

All that is needed for doing this trick, which looks rather difficult at first sight, is a cork, a fork, and—a little dexterity. Place the cork through the handle of the cup so that it sticks tightly, then stick the fork into the cork, two prongs on each side of the handle. As the handle of the fork falls below the cup the center of gravity of the whole thing must also be looked for there. Place the cup on the point of a knife and you will soon find it, but it requires a steady hand, otherwise the teacup will fall off. The same experiment can be made by placing two knives crossways through the handle of the cup.

THE AUBURN COURIER,

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY....DECEMBER 11, 1890.

AGED couple married at Parkersburg, W. Va. Dec. 4 Groom's age 90, and bride's. 81.

BOGUS son of Senator Carlisle got caught in City of Mexico last week and jailed for swindling.

NEW YORK CITY celebrated Evacuation day, Nov. 25, in grand style, as usual. This was the 107th.

SEVERE earthquake shocks in Mexico Dec. 1. People scared for several minutes, but no great damage.

REPUBLICANS got the smallest vote in Nebraska. They had 68,878; independents had 70,187; democrats 71,331.

KALAKAUA, king of the Sandwich Islands reached San Francisco last Thursday. He comes for treatment of his eyes.

OF THE new senators from Wyoming, Carey drew a six years' term and his colleague, Warren, got the four years' term

FOSTER, ex-governor, of Ohio, would like to succeed John Sherman in the senate. It is not likely John will give up.

PRICE of coal at Pittsburg has been raised, as the natural gas is getting low. This gives coal dealers a new chance, same as McKinley bill.

STUDENTS at the Indianapolis Dental College have adapted the cap and gown, as their school dress. We want to see our young friend M. W. Johnston rigged up in these "Sunday clothes."

SOME of the quarreling United Brethren, at Columbus, Ind., got into a racket over the divisions in their church, and threw eggs,—same as the republicans in Auburn after the election in 1888.

THE New York World has been sold to Childs, of the Public Ledger and Drexel the banker, both of Philadelphia. The price was a million for the great building and three millions for the paper.

CHIEF JUDGE BROWN died last week in Baltimore. He was mayor in 1861 when the mob attacked the Sixth Massachusetts regiment in the streets, commanded by Col. Jones who is now the democratic lieutenant governor of New York.

THE Duke of Veragua is reported very ill at his home in Spain. He is the only living descendant of Christopher Columbus, and late minister of the interior, is very ill, and will probably live only a short time. He is president of the Columbus association.

BINDER machine men have gone into a big trust. Includes the McCormick, Deering, Wood, Plano, Esterly, Buckeye, Minneapolis and all the well known companies. The thresher men, have also combined. They expect to get along with but one agent in a county for all machines.

THE great painting, the "Angelus," was admitted free of duty, when it came here, as it was only for exhibition. Now however, it has been decided that the bondsmen took it out of the custom house without authority and must pay the duty, $16,500, or 15 per cent on the cost, $110,000

THE secretary of the treasury reports there will be a decrease in tariff next year of about fifty millions, chiefly on sugar, which has been partly placed on the free list. But he says the McKinley bill will increase the receipts on other things about eighteen millions. That proves what we have been saying that the McKinley bill increases the average tariff rate.

SENATOR TURPIE'S mother was accidently burned to death Dec. 4. She was 90 years old, and had been left alone a short time, when it seems she fell into the fire. Her clothes were partly burned off, and she was found dead. She lived with her son Robert, near Delphi, Ind Senator David Turpie had made his great speech in the senate against the Force bill, only the day before.

SEVERAL of our republican exchanges are publishing a ready-made article from the bosses, beginning. "The Tariff is a Toll. The Toll is paid by Foreigners who ship stuff into America." We would think they had found out by this time, that their readers are not such fools as to believe such talk. But let us ask: If John Smith, in England, wants to send a ten dollar suit of clothes to America and the duty is say is $8, does he wrap up the $8 and send it along with the clothes?

NATIONAL meeting of the Alliance at Ocala, Fla., said they favor the restoration of silver to all the rights and qualities of legal tender which gold posesses; the issue of government currency direct to the people; the equalization of taxes; prohibition of alien ownership of lands; ownership and control of transportation lines by the government; a limit of public revenues to the economical administration of the government; graduated taxation of incomes and the election of U. S. senators by a direct vote of the people.

STATE farmers' league of Connecticut met at Hartford, Dec. 2. They want state insurance against loss by fire and lightning; choice of U. S. senators by an electoral body in each state similar to those appointed to elect a president; provision by congress (under a constitutional amendment) to enact such laws as may be necessary in order to make it easily possible for any one desiring it to own and occupy sufficient land from which to gain a livelihood by obliging the largest landholders when necessary to this end, to sell enough of their land for that purpose on easy terms and at a price not exceeding its assessed value for taxation.

VOORHEES, believes in newspapers, having seen their good work in Indiana. In a debate in the senate last week, some republican, recalling we suppose, the poor work done by the republican papers, made some remarks against newspapers, when Voorhees retorted: "I thank God for newspaper men, especially in dark places, and to every newspaper man who has thrown a ray of light on this miserable business, I return my heartfelt and profound thanks. Newspaper men may get things wrong some times, but in the main, in the great volume of what they do, they contribute to the cause of justice. This is what I have to say to the senator from Massachusetts in reference to his criticism of newspaper men."

MARVIN KUHNS.

Noble County's Desperado Captured After a Desperate Fight.

Last Saturday, Marvin Kuhns, and a pal, named Mease, appeared in Ft. Wayne. Kuhns is a bad character who has had a number of desperate scrapes in Noble county, lately. Officers have long been after him, and he several times got away by shooting at his pursuers. Lately he has been wanted as the supposed murderer of a man at Fostoria, Ohio. Saturday he was recognized in Ft. Wayne, and officers started out to take him. He and his pal slipped out and went on foot to Arcola, eight miles west of Ft. Wayne. There they stole a rig and went across to Churubusco, near which place Kuhns' parents lived. There they drank at several saloons, Kuhns keeping a revolver in his hand. Then they went out to the edge of town and broke into a house, where only two women happened to be at the time. The women got away and going down town met two officers, who had come up from Ft. Wayne, Deputy Sheriff Wilkinson and Policeman Kennelly. They found out where Kuhns was, and getting the help of a man named Jackson, a brother of Senator A. M. Jackson, they went on and soon met Kuhns and Mease. Kennelly grabbed Kuhns, and the latter drew his revolver to shoot but Wilkinson caught his hand. Mease here fired, shooting Kennelly, who fell Jackson shot Mease, wounding him badly. and Mease took no more part. In the meantime Kuhns and Wilkinson were struggling, Kuhns not being able to shoot Wilkinson, turned and shot Kennelly, as the latter lay on the ground. Kennelly fired back, putting a ball through Kuhns. Wilkinson then got his revolver to Kuhns' back and shot three times making bad wounds. Both fell and in the struggle Kuhns slipped out of his over coat and he and Mease went up the street to a place where they had left their rig and escaped. At this time Sheriff Viberg and a deputy came up. They followed the fugitives and found them at the house of a man named Boggs. Kuhns had told the man he was sick, and had gone to bed. Both are in jail at Ft. Wayne, and all yet live. Wilkinson is considerably bruised up; Kennelly is badly shot in several places, but may recover; Mease's wounds are not serious. Kuhns may live, though five balls are in him. It was a terrible encounter and the officers deserve great praise.

Additional Local.

Frank Baughman, at the Church Furniture had a piece of his thumb sawed off yesterday. He had a similar piece sawed off the other a year ago.

W. L. Mease, as agent for the Underwriters Insurance Company, settled C. P. Houser's loss by fire within 12 days from the time the house came so near burning down. The loss allowed was $40 on the building and $10 on carpet and furniture. This is a prompt settlement.

Chicago Herald: Representative Russell, of Connecticut, is a proud man these days. He is one of the three republicans east of California, who come back to the house with a majority larger than they had two years ago. Brosius, of Pennsylvania, and Cheatham, of North Carolina, are the two others.

Mr Henderson, the new commissioner, starts into the new work in good shape. He has also, the advantage of the experience of Mr Patterson and Mr. Hoffelder. Mr Coffinberry, the new auditor, being already a man of extensive and varied business experience, of course has no difficulty in getting hold of the new work. Besides, he has the experience and skill of Frank Borst and Frank Dills in getting started.

Rev. Mr. Stov, of Butler, who is now holding a protracted meeting in the German Methodist church, on South Jackson street, in behalf of the U B., denomination, delivered a very forcible and pointed discourse at the Church of God, Sunday morning He is an eloquent talker, who presents the convincing, convicting and promissory side of the great question of morality, with distinctness that cannot easily be misunderstood. It is hoped his efforts will be successful.

Last Thursday evening occurred the annual election of officers in Samuel Ford Camp, No. 114, S. of V., located at this place. Capt. Al. A. Rowland was elected to a third term. He has proved himself an efficient officer. E. O Likens will occupy the position of first lieutenant, while James F Hamilton will occupy his former position, that of second lieutenant. G. T. Weeks, Perry Heitz and E. M. Hilkey will serve as Camp council. These young gentlemen are all worthy to sway the scepter of government over this promising band of organized brotherhood. Many of the brothers are amply capable to hold these positions, yet we can not think of a better choice that could have been made. May the order grow and prosper under the influence of this noble staff of officers.

Sam Swart, the "Rambler" has gone to Chicago to secure apparatus for producing panoramic views of what he saw in the west this fall during his extended "ramble" there. He will give entertainments in this part of the country for a time, after which, he expects to emigrate to another clime. His plan of action will be to give a lecture on the "Beauty and grandeur of nature in all her glory," and illustrate his "lingo" by the use of his machine. Mr. Swart has been favorably known to the writer for several years, and it very properly comes to our mind, that when this gentleman comes forward to entertain the people, it will be a great mistake on the part of those who do not come out to hear him. We hope this, his latest venture, will realize his most sanguine expectations.

Rev. I. M. Thomas is now beginning the canvass for a new book entitled "The Story of Man." This work is a production from the pen of J. W. Buel, one of the most popular authors of to-day, and doubtless should be read by every intelligent man, woman and child in the land It treats of the human race from its creation down to the present time, with a profusion of illustrations of an exceptionally artistic character. Encourage Mr. Thomas and at the same time add a valuable book to your library, by subscribing for this great commentary, when he calls upon you. The fact that this gentleman is engaged in its sale is evidence sufficient that the work is one of real merit. As a Christmas present, we believe its standard of beauty and durability will admit of our saying that it will rank among the best gifts you could make to a friend, who would always appreciate it as a worthy memento of your good will and generosity.

The literary and debating society, at the Junction, has been re organized for the winter entertainments, and is running along quite smoothly. The president, Mr Culver, and the vice president, Fred. Carper, are gentlemen who preside over the meetings with a dignity and impartiality that suggests very clearly that they mean to have this society "succeed" in every sense of the term. Heretofore, it seemed a difficult task for the chairman to maintain good order. So far, however, the order has been extraordinarly good, and the meetings beneficial. The discussion Friday was a heated one, and the decision rendered it proper for the Indian to stay yet a little while on American soil without being driven off. It still remains a fact that literary societies are not the worst institutions in existence, as some fanatics would have us believe, and we hope to see the good work go on in the proper style. The question for discussion Friday evening, Dec. 12, is "Resolved that Strikes are justifiable." Let all who can attend.

Lagrange Standard: In the Hobbs marsh region, two or three miles northwest, there are, besides mastodons and other monsters not yet revealed, considerable deposits of limonite, or bog-iron ore, which before war times and later, were mined for several years. The ore was taken to the old forge in that vicinity, and blooms were made that sold at Pittsburg higher than any other ore in the market, on account of its toughness. Large quantities of this iron were shipped at times, and bar iron was manufactured from it at Lima. But the development of the Lake Superior mines made the making of bog-iron unprofitable. Interest is now revived in the matter by the alleged fact that in such localities the probability of finding oil or natural gas is strong, and the undisputed fact that a gentleman from the Ohio oil region has been here investigating the locality and endeavoring to secure leases to a thousand acres or more of land. There is much excitement among the owners of that rather wild territory.

Still Going Democratic.

City elections that are being held late, show that the democratic ball is still rolling on.

Dover, New Hampshire, went democratic Nov 25, and for the first time in its history has a democratic mayor.

December 2, Milwaukee, Wis., elected a new mayor in place of Peck, who is now governor. A democrat got it by two to one.

Vicksburg, Miss., elected its first democratic mayor, Dec. 2.

Louisville, Ky., went democratic Dec. 2, by 2,000 over an independent ticket.

And so it has seemed to be going all along the line.

Twenty-Eighth Visit.

The fact that Dr. Fruth has made 28 professional visits to Auburn is beyond doubt the very best evidence of his superior skill in the treatment of chronic diseases. The doctor is no stranger here and we know personally of many patients who would gladly bear witness to the efficacy of his treatment and the permanency of his cures. We pride ourselves upon being an intelligent community, ever recognizing and liberally rewarding true merit, but quacks and impostors who have ventured in our city, have rarely shown themselves a second time. Dr. Fruth does not parade the names of his patients before the public in print, nor use boughten testimonials to advertise himself, but would be pleased to show the skeptical his record of cases cured, cured when hope of cure had been abandoned. By his extraordinary success in this practice he has made many friends among those whom he has treated at this place. Socially, the doctor is a gentlemen, which combined with courteous address and strict business integrity, places him far above the would be competitors in his profession. The afflicted should not hesitate to consult him at the Swineford House, Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 16, 1890, and an observance of the crowds that throng his parlors for a single day might well be taken as evidence that such a hesitancy does not exist.

Fatal Accident.

On last Sunday night just after midnight Mrs. L. A. Henning of Smithfield, shot and instantly killed herself. The particulars as near as we can learn are as follows: She slept with one small child and Mr. H. with the other, in the same room. The lamp was left burning but turned down low. It is thought she got up and went to the bureau drawer, a small one at the top, for something, wherein was a loaded revolver, and by some means, which will never be known, she discharged the revolver, the ball entering one of the eyes, and killing her instantly. The report awoke Mr. H and children, who were terrified beyond measure at the sad affair. The alarm was given and near neighbors came in, in a very few minutes. The shooting was undoubtedly accidental, as it is said she did not know the revolver was in that drawer. The funeral rites occurred at Barker's church on Wednesday, Rev. Retts officiating. The above is the account given by our Waterloo correspondent, and is probably as nearly correct as will ever be known. It appears she was not feeling well, and a light was left burning in the room, and she got up to get some medicine. The husband heard the report and the revolver fall to the floor. He sprang to her side, but she was lying on the floor and only breathed a few times. Mrs. Henning was a daughter of Daniel Swihart who resides near the Junction, one of the best known families here. Mr. Swihart was in the COURIER office Monday afternoon, and had not heard of it. He could not believe it, when told. But it seemed a dispatch sent to him had gone astray. It is a terrible blow in both families.

Reading Room Opening.

The Auburn Reading Room was formally opened Monday evening. The attendance was large, and they were called to order by the president, Charles Eckhart, and prayer was offered by Rev T. C. Smith. The introductory speech was by Lin Kuhlman, and was in his best style. The chief address was by Mrs. Ehlers, who spoke of the society and its aims and wishes, and the good it was hoped would be accomplished. It was hoped this room would give our young people a pleasant place in which to pass their leisure hours. She spoke feelingly of the good done in this way elsewhere and hoped our effort would be as successful. Her speech was very earnest and impressed her hearers greatly. Miss Samme Ralston recited a witty little piece, and was heartily cheered. J. W. Baxter and Rev. D F. Kain, made speeches, the latter explaining the needs of the society and the manner of help that was desired. Then Mrs. T. P. Scott and Mrs. J A. Barns went through the audience to solicit subscriptions of stock, these being at $5 per share. They added many names to the list. The Arion Quartet and the Auburn Chorus Class, and the quartet composed of T. P. Scott, Ben and John Zimmerman and M. B. Hastings furnished excellent music. The entertainment was a success every way and will do much to secure the success of our reading room.

At the Opera House.

The Opera House will be occupied on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings by the famous magician and humorist Signor Bosco, supported by a company of comedians and vocalists. Bosco is one of the really few modern masters of the art mysterious, and with his excellent supporting company gives an entertainment at once unique, artistic and genteel. His agent has a wonderful collection of press notices showing that they have visited every portion of the continent from Newfoundland to California and from British Columbia to Key West, and every where the papers speak in the highest praise of his performances. Popular prices will prevail, 25, 35 and 15 cents. Reserved seats at usual place.

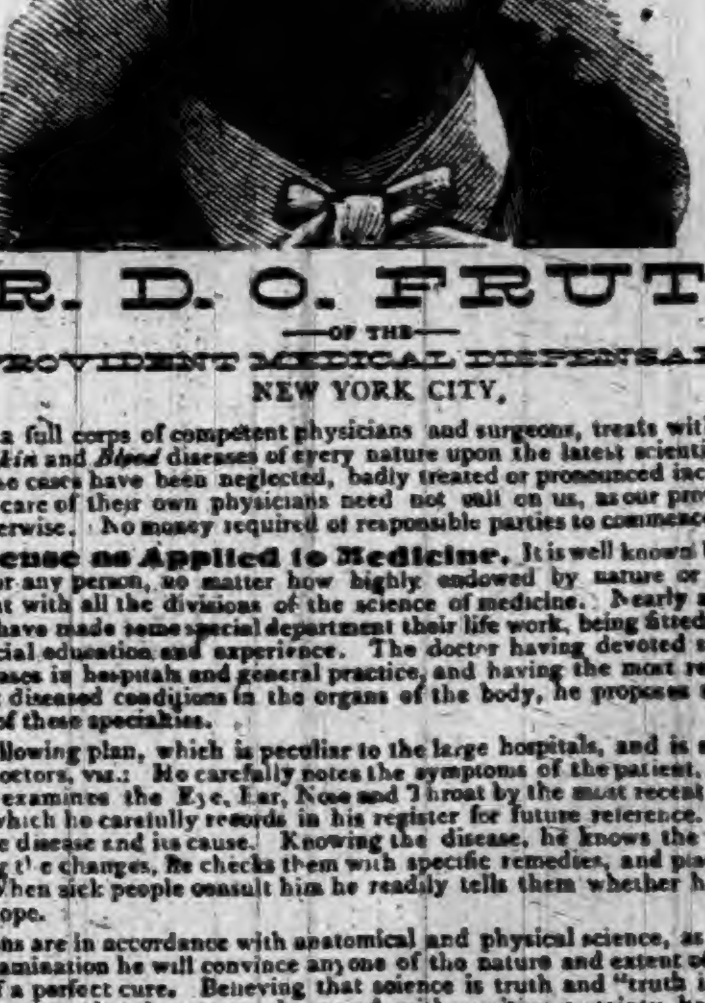
DR. FRUTH,

Of New York, the well known and successful Specialist in Chronic Diseases, and diseases of the Eye and Ear by request of many friends and patients, has decided to visit

AUBURN, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1890.

Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m, to 9 p. m. One day only.

CHRONIC DISEASES, —AND— DISEASES of the EYE and EAR A SPECIALTY



FREE. Consultation and Examination

DR. D. O. FRUTH,

—OF THE—

PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,

NEW YORK CITY,

☞ Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaption or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz.: He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. Let those given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhœa, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphillis, St Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the traces of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and [illegible] positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failure. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free. Western Address, DR. FRUTH, TOLEDO, OHIO.

REFERENCES—We, the undersigned, do cheerfully and conscientiously recommend Dr. Fruth as a gentleman of rare professional ability, ripe in judgment, humane to a fault, considerate in price and enthusiastic in relief of his fellow men, and we therefore urge the afflicted to avail themselves of his superior skill:—Granville M. Weeks, M. D., L. L. D., President Provident Dispensary, N. Y.; T. Meredith Maxwell, A. M., M. D., N. Y., Orrin Pomeroy, M. D., N. Y.; V. M. Davis, M. D., N. Y.; W. E. White, M. Findlay, Ohio, May 6th, 1890.

J. M. Loose Red Clover Co.

I had a very troublesome and painful sore on my face of about one year's standing, and which several physicians pronounced a cancer. I had tried a good many different kinds of salves, plasters and blood purifiers, but none of them seemed to help me very much. I found one of your circulars recommending your Extract of Red Clover, so went to the drug store and bought a bottle and small box of the Solid Extract. I took the medicine according to directions and used the Solid Extract as a salve, putting it on fresh twice a day. About the third day it began to heal, so I continued the use of it for about three weeks, both internally and by outward application and am very happy to state that it has entirely cured me. I cheerfully recommend Loose's Extract of Red Clover as the greatest and best blood purifier on the market, I have tried them all. Your medicine is a God send to suffering humanity. Yours joyfully,

J. H. Kirbler.

Rev. J. W. Stringfellow is holding a a protracted meeting at the Union church, north of Garrett. He expects to open a revival at this place in the near future.

A very good holiday gift for for your distant friends, would be a copy of the COURIER a year. They would get ten times as much of the news from the old home, as they could in any other way.

Talk of advancement in machinery and and the sewing machine cannot be over looked. The White is the highest state of perfection in finish, quiet running, strength, durability and convenience, of all others Sold by G. W. Stahl. 52

Your wasted cheeks may have all the plumpness and bloom of health through your use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This time honored remedy still leads the van. It improves digestion, purifies the blood, and invigorates the system. Give it a trial.

The outside arc lights at the holiday stores are up again and blaze out their bright invitation each evening, to come in and see the beautiful goods inside. They are swung in front of Harter's, Robbins & McCord's and Davenport's, where they have no end of lovely things.

Mitchell Haines will have a sale of personal property at the John A. Dittmar farm a mile and a half south of town on Saturday, Dec. 20. There will be some good, heavy work horses, a lot of hay, corn and fodder, reaper, mower, drills, wagons, harness, etc., Don't forget the date.

While people were going home from services at Union church Saturday evening, some rude boys and young men indulged in a too free and promiscuous use of revolvers to such an extent that people found it difficult to keep their teams in subjection. Men who have no better judgment than to deport themselves thus, ought to be given the full penalty of the law for a disturbance of the peace.

W. S Bangs, a former Richland township boy, has been back home for a week or two. He now resides in Gratiot county, Michigan, the same county where Henry Myers, and the McEnterfer boys are. He says Oliver McIntyre has been supervisor of his township for several years. This office in Michigan is about the same as our township trustee, except that the Michigan supervisors meet and act as county commissioners, also.

The Baptist Quarterly Sunday School convention held in the Baptist church Dec. 2. and 3, was a great success in attendance, spirituality and quality of addresses. The papers by Mrs Julia Sherlock and Miss Cora Spitler of Auburn were highly commended. The papers from other churches of this association were not a whit behind them. There were full and free practical discussions on such topics as "What should the teacher do about the absent pupil?" "What should the pupil do about the absent or tardy teacher?" "The Sunday School as the Christian mother sees it." "The relation of home influences to Sunday school attendance" "The Unpromising Pupil" and other kindred topics. Among those from abroad were Deacons Matson, of Pleasant Lake, and Thomas, of Kendallville, and Rev. J. M. Davies, C H. Blanchard and H. Story. The Woman's Mission Circle gave a very interesting and profitable session on the closing evening, led by Mrs J. M. Davies and Mrs. T. C. Smith, in which the children had very interesting and instructive parts. It was one of the very best Sunday School conventions we ever had the privilege of attending.

Supt. Glazier of the County Home, took a trip up to Michigan last week taking with him the Drake family who have been at the Home, as they belong to that state.

Billy Edgington is just recovering from a severe attack of erysipelas. It covered an entire half of his face, and required heroic treatment. But he is fairly safe now if he is careful.

The noted comedy-drama, Si Plunkard at the Opera House next Tuesday evening Dec. 16. This company with the famous J. C. Lewis as star, is composed of 20 talented artists, and the play is the best Yankee comedy on the road.

The entertainment given by the young people of the Catholic church at the residence of Mrs. Wm. McIntyre, was a decided success. The program was very interesting one, consisting of ten numbers. The music was well rendered; also recitations and essays.

Signor Bosco, the magician and humorist, has highly flattering notices from east, west, north and south. He spent last winter in the West India Islands, with great success. No one has more flattering press notices, or a higher reputation. Opera House, three nights Dec. 11, 12, 13.

The harsh, drastic purgatives, once deemed so indispensable, have given place to milder and more skillfully prepared laxatives; hence the great and growing demand for Ayer's Pills. Physicians everywhere recommend them for costiveness, indigestion, and liver complaints.

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. McIntyre. Program, Outline History of England, Mrs Moody; Our English, Miss Ramsey; How the Saxons Lived, Miss Shilling; The Religious History of England. Mrs. Baldwin; Recitation, Mrs. McIntyre; Music, Mrs. Moss.

Ex Auditor Walter has settled down for good on his farm east of the river. He was up here Monday and Tuesday, closing up some of his business matters. As we said recently, Mr. Walter made an efficient officer. His familiar figure will be missed from our streets, but we hope his future at the old home, may be prosperous.

St. Joe G. A. R will have a course of lectures. December 16, Will Cumback, subject, "The Model Husband;" January 1, C F. Underhill, the character impersonator and elocutionist; Jan. 22, Belva Lockwood, "Is Marriage a Failure? No sir!" Prof. D S. Jordan will be there some time in February to give his lecture on the "Passion Play of Oberammergau."

The Auburn Reading Room and lunch room are now open to the public. Lunch at all hours, east of post office. Plenty of leading papers, daily and weekly, good books, choice magazines. Use of reading room free to all, but only those who are stockholders, or hold the $1 membership tickets can take books to their homes. Let the public call in and try the Reading Room.

D. H. Patty, a prominent nurseryman in Geneva, New York has written us enquiring where he can get a few good, reliable men to solicit orders. He wishes men to canvass and take orders for Trees, Shrubs and Vines for fall delivery and promises steady employment to good salesmen. If any of our readers desire a good position we would advise them to write to Mr. Patty for particulars. Address with reference, D. H. PATTY, Nurseryman, Geneva, New York.

Some scoundrels, filthier than hogs, broke into the basement of the Presbyterian church Monday night. They tore things up and committed various nuisances.

Fashionable goods, neat fits, perfect fitting suits, made on honor and promptly, at G. H. Yesbera's, Auburn's popular merchant tailor. Call and see his splendid goods and nice work.

It will pay you to take advantage of the very reasonable prices we are asking for the neatest, handsome and most desirable line of Christmas gifts ever shown in Auburn. Robbins & McCord.

SPECIAL CHANCE: On Friday, Dec. 19 F. J Yesbera will have an experienced traveling man, at his jewelry store, who will assist anyone to select special jewelry such as is not kept in stock, but which may be wanted for holiday gifts. It will be a rare chance.

Rev Mr. Jones, of Chicago, preached to good houses at the Presbyterian church, both morning and evening. He came in the place of Mr. Healy, who was taken suddenly ill. He is a young man of more than ordinary promise, and his hearers were greatly pleased.

The south bound evening freight on the Jackson road, was ditched at Carrol's Crossing last Thursday evening, so that the north-bound passenger could not get through. Mr. Lockhart and the the others who had been working in the farmers' institute were obliged to go to Waterloo by team.

Mrs. Plum's Sunday School class will give a fine entertainment at the Presbyterian church, Friday evening. There will be singing, recitations and other attractive features given by the little folks. Ten cents admittance, the proceeds to go to the church. Everybody should come and encourage them in the good work.

George Swander brought in two logs on a sled last Thursday, Dec 4, the first of the season, as far as we noticed. On the same day, W. S. Dancer, was in with a sled. A few others were seen on Friday. But the snow was too thin to be good, and a part of it melted on Saturday. Still the weather was rather cold, though pleasant for winter.

Chicago Herald: Under the benign influence of the McKinley bill, which excludes foreign copper, the Anaconda Company's copper mines at Butte, Mont. have shut down "because the copper market is overstocked." This shuts off the wages of the miners, but it keeps up the price of copper. The "wage-earner's tariff" is a great thing for the wage-worker.

A dispatch came last week to Archie McIntyre from A. B. Imus, bringing the sad tidings of the death of their eldest son, Bertie, a bright lad of about six years. Mrs. Imus is a sister to Mr. McIntyre, and both she and her husband, are well known here, especially among the younger people. Their home is in DeSmet, Dakota, and our people will sympathize deeply with them, when they learn of this sad bereavement.

A late copy of the Aberdeen, S. D. Daily News contains an interview with Geo. H. Hoffman, now lieutenant-governor of that state, as to the recent Indian scare in his, Walsworth county. When the people of part of the county stampeded, Mr. Hoffman and others did all they could to allay their fears, and partly succeeded. Then he telegraphed to Gov. Mellette for a supply of arms, and these were promptly sent, and the feeling was more quiet. Still a part of the people staid away a while and a few will spend the winter with their friends in other states.

The Canton, Ohio Daily Repository, of Oct. 23rd, says: "Si Plunkard," with Mr. J. C. Lewis in the title role, pleased a good sized audience last night at Schaefer's opera house. The cast is a good one. The specialties introduced by Mr. Lewis and others brought forth hearty applause. The orchestra rendered several difficult selections in an excellent manner. The performance gave satisfaction. The managers of the Opera House secured the above attraction sometime since, and Auburn will see its first production in this city. Reserved seats at Robbins & McCord's.

So do not fail to give us a call.

I have the nicest line of Silverware this year ever before brought to Auburn, at prices to suit the times. I also have a large line of Spectacles in gold, silver and steel frames, from 25c. to $8.00 per pair. Gold Pens, Pencils, and Toothpicks, I shall sell regardless of cost as I wish to close them out. In the musical Instrument line I have Violins, Guitars, Banjos, Accordians and Harmonicas.

Please remember the date and let everybody come. Remember We are agents for the New Home Sewing Machine, the best in the market. Very Respt.,

The democratic vote in Dearborn county was 555 short in comparison with the 1888 vote, and the republican vote was short exactly the same number of votes. The democratic majority in 1888 and 1890 was just the same—883. This remarkable freak of the ballots is probably without a parallel in the state.

James W. Platter, who has served as commissioner for the past three years retired from the board last week, as noted at the time in the COURIER. Mr. Platter has been a faithful and conscientious member, and has always been found at his post of duty. He leaves the office and retires to private life, with the respect of all who have had dealings with him. Being on the wrong side of the political fence, he went under, of course, at the election with the rest of his party. But we feel pleased to note that no word was said against him during the canvass. The COURIER is always glad to bear witness to the honorable character of a political opponent, and to show its contemporaries that a campaign can be won on its own merits, and not on personalties.

Mrs. T. D. Gross returned from Logansport last week, in very much better health than when she left here. She has been under treatment at the Northern Hospital there, for both physical and mental trouble. She is now going to Dakota, where her sister, Mrs. Robbins lives, and will we suppose make that her home. She seems fully cured and in proof of this, she has the following letter from Dr. Rogers, the medical superintendent of the hospital. It reads:

Logansport, Ind. Nov. 28, 1890.

This is to certify that Mrs. Lodema Gross has been discharged from this Northern Indiana Hospital. She has to such an extent re[illegible]d her mental and physical health that [illegible] did not deem her further detention in [illegible] hospital justifiable. The number of males and females is about equal and their average life is about thirty-three years; one-fourth of the inhabitants die before they reach their fiftieth year. The probable value of all the diamonds in the world, according to a recent estimate, is about $1,000,000,000. The world's diamond trade is carried on by about 8,000 dealers, with a total stock of not far from $350,000,000. The stones are prepared for market by perhaps 4,500 cutters and polishers, principally in Amsterdam, Antwerp, Paris and the Jura.

Four years ago, Miss Lena Woodard, living on Thorn Creek, Wash., sowed the seed from one head of barley. She harvested the crop with a pair of shears and sowed the amount received the next year, again harvesting it with her shears. The third crop her father cut with a grass scythe, getting enough of barley to sow forty acres last spring. which averaged forty bushels to the acre when thrashed, making a total yield of 1,600 bushels from one head of barley in four years.

Florence Blythe, aged sixteen, of San Francisco, who lately came by way of the very toughest kind of litigation into an estate worth nearly $4,000,000, has asked the court for an allowance of $1,000 a month, or, in all, about $103,000, dating from her father's death in April, 1883. The girl pleaded that she needs about $1,000 a month for her maintenance and education. The court finally allowed her a back allowance of $300 a month, or $30,000, and a future allowance of $800.

Few of those who fasten their gloves with the ingenious little snap button in use for a few years past know the history of the contrivance. It was invented by an American, who tried in vain to enlist in his invention the interest of American capitalists. Nobody could see any promise in the tiny bit of mechanism, and the inventor finally betook himself to France. There he found capital, and the invention speedily became popular. Now the inventor and capitalists interested are getting rich out of the contrivance, and even the American agency is proving a mint of money. The fastener, at first applied chiefly to gloves, is now affixed to umbrellas and to a dozen other articles of daily use. Made of silver, it is put upon ornamental pocket-books, portfolios and the like.

If a man eats a pound of beef, mutton or other flesh every day, in a year he will consume 365 pounds, and in sixty years 21,900 pounds of meat. He will eat the same amount of vegetables and quite as much bread, so here are 43,800 pounds more. He will drink every day two quarts of coffee, tea, wine, beer or water, making a total of 10,000 gallons, or about one hundred and seventy-five hogsheads of liquid. This estimate does not include the probability that he will eat forty or fifty lambs, with mint sauce, 2,000 spring chickens, about five hundred pounds of butter and 40,000 or 50,000 eggs, and four hogsheads of sugar. If all this supply were piled up on the scales it would weigh over fifty-five tons, and if stored would fill a cotton warehouse from floor to ceiling.

Everywhere in Palestine one sees evidences of scientific farming. The hills of old Judea were all terraced, and wall after wall of vines rose in steps from the valleys to the summit of the mountains. The remains of these terraces are now to be seen, though the rains of eighteen centuries have almost denuded the limestone rocks of their earth, and the mountains now are only used for grazing. Palestine was formerly a well wooded country, and it will probably become fertile again if trees are planted. It produces the finest fruit in the world, and the oranges of Jaffa are equal to those of the Indian River in Florida. When the million Russians get to Palestine they will probably recultivate the hills, and an increased rainfall will make the country again a "land flowing with milk and honey."

The bold project of a ship railway, in lieu of a ship canal, to connect the waters of Lake Huron with those of Lake Ontario is now being agitated. The distance between those two lakes is sixty-seven miles by the proposed route from Georgian bay to the mouth of the Humber River, west of Toronto, and it has been calculated that a railway, with three tracks of the standard gauge, but with rails weighing from 100 to 110 pounds per yard, could be built for $12,000,000, or about half the cost of a ship canal of the same capacity. The land along the route reaches a height of 664 feet about Lake Huron, so that there would be some heavy grades or else some expensive work necessary. The proposed route would save 428 miles of lake navigation and twenty-eight miles of canal between Chicago and Montreal, and would enable a propeller to reach Montreal from Quebec in less time than it can reach Buffalo. The expected saving, three days, in the time between Chicago and the seaboard is a consideration which would warrant a large expenditure if the project is feasible from an engineering standpoint.

TWENTY-FIVE TO THIRTY.

The Most Interesting Period of a Woman's Life.

TIME was when to be sixteen was the best thing that could happen to a young girl. It was the age of dewy freshness, of innocent impressibility and of all the other delightful but rather verdant virtues which have won the heart of the poet to song and wooed the mind of the sage to something better than his philosophy. But sweet sixteen is in short dresses to-day and still under the rule of her governess. Her affections have not yet departed from her dolls, and she treats the few young men of her acquaintwith the simplicity of a child. It was a good thing once to be 16; it is a good thing now to be 20; to be 25 is better still; but to be 28 is to be blest!

"There is no time in a woman's life when she is so delightful (married or unmarried, but particularly the latter)," said an observing man, "as she is from 25 to 30. She still has the enthusiasm of youth, and much of the tolerant sense of middle life. Her judgment is mature, and her opinions carry weight. The shyness and timidity of her girlhood have passed into a poise of manner and a gracious dignity that places her friends at once at their easy best. She has had experience, and that experience has given her a clear understanding of the world as it really is and of herself without illusions. Therefore her estimates and criticisms of life are sharp and sure, and usually to be trusted, because she has no theories to bolster up and no illusions to perpetuate."

"But there is something to be said on the other side," said a woman of 26 who heard him. "It may look like very smooth sailing from the outside, but one can have little idea how much tact it takes to steer straight in the narrow path of the five years that lie between 25 and 30. In the first place, a woman at that age hardly knows where to place herself. She is neither young nor old. She is what Julian Hawthorne calls 'still young,' and the little adjective adds ten years at a stroke. If a woman who is only 'still young' takes the coy and kittenish role she makes herself immortally ridiculous, and deservedly so. She has sometimes even to fear letting herself be spontaneous and natural, lest some one shall dub her the 'girlish old girl.' To be older than her years makes a prig of her at once, and men and gods will shun her.

"To the very young man she must be grandmotherly without hurting his dear little vanity by superior wisdom and patronage. To the middle-aged man she must respond with a maturity of judgment that matches his own, and yet she must continually suggest the innocence of 16. To the man between the two she may perhaps be nearer her natural self, and yet even with him she has continually to remember that she must never assume the equality of knowledge or experience or judgment which she is sure she really possesses. She is often truer in her judgments and wiser in her conclusions than he is; he must never suspect it. She may be cleverer than he, but she must be clever enough to conceal it. She must follow him always, but, like little Iulus, it must be 'with unequal footsteps,' or his vanity is wounded. From 25 to 30 a woman has the most difficult part of her life to live. She has to dissemble in the present, remember from the past, and borrow from the future. She may be delightful, but she is far from being delighted."

CHEAPENING SUGAR.

WHAT IT WILL TEACH THE PEOPLE.

The English Jam Industry—The Same Industry Hindered in America by the Tariff—Interesting Figures on the Subject.

The McKinley law will teach the public that the tariff is a tax, both where it raises duties and where it lowers or abolishes them. For example, sugar is already falling, although the duties will not be abolished till next April.

The present duty on raw sugar is $2.22 per 100 pounds. Not only has the whole of this tax been added to the price of our sugar, but even more than the whole of it. A comparison between New York and London prices shows this conclusively. A comparison for the months of March and September, 1889, is given in the following table,

Date.	English price per 100 lbs.	American price per 100 lbs.	American price higher.
March 2-5	$4.46	$7.00	$2.54
March 5-11	4.50	7.00	2.50
March 12-15	4.46	7.00	2.54
March 16	4.50	7.125	2.625
March 17-22	4.50	7.25	2.75
March 23-25	4.625	7.5	2.875
March 26-31	4.741	7.75	3.009
September 1-4	5.35	8.25	2.90
September 5-8	5.01	8.25	3.24
September 9-11	4.68	8.25	3.57
September 12-17	4.74	8.25	3.51
September 18-22	4.79	8.25	3.46
September 23-26	4.74	8.00	3.26
Sept. 27 to Oct. 2	4.74	7.75	3.01

After the sugar tariff is abolished next April the difference between London and New York prices will almost wholly disappear, and the American people will have another object lesson in proof of the proposition that the tariff is a tax.

The cheapness of sugar in England has had the effect to make its use much more extensive there than in any other country. England consumes seventy-four pounds a year per person, the United States fifty, France twenty-eight, and Germany twenty. One reason for the larger consumption in England is the fact that vast quantities of sugar are used there every year in making fruit jam, more than 300,000,000 pounds being consumed in this way alone. Much of this was exported to all parts of the world. Thousands of persons in England and Scotland have found employment in small fruit growing and in the manufacture of jam. As the result of her cheap sugar the poor working people of England have largely substituted jam for butter. An English country grocer makes this report:

"We have just ordered eleven tons of jam. Years ago we never used to keep it. When it was high we could not sell it. Now it is an article of food for quite poor people. At the school treats children used to think bread and jam a great pleasure; now they would rather have bread and butter, they are so accustomed to jam."

As sugar grows cheaper with us we may expect the jam-making industry to be greatly enlarged. This will involve a vast extension of small fruit growing, and there will be a great gain both to producer and consumer. But here one difficulty still stands in the way—a tariff difficulty. After jam has been made it must be packed in vessels. These are either glass tumblers or earthenware jars, and these jars are greatly increased in cost by the tariff.

The two following tables will make plain the part the tariff plays in both elements of the cost. The calculation is for one dozen jars of preserved fruit, each jar weighing one pound. The first table displays the difference of cost on sugar, which will, of course, be wiped out largely, perhaps entirely, by the new sugar tariff. Here is the first table:

Kind of fruit.	U. S., cents.	Eng., cents.	More in U. S., cents.
Greengages and damsons	60.45	36.97	23.48
Strawberries	65.10	39.81	25.29
Raspberries and black caps	58.59	35.43	23.16
Peach (marmalade)	60.45	36.97	23.48
Blackberry	60.45	36.97	23.48
Quince	60.45	36.97	23.48
Limes	60.45	36.97	23.48

Red currants	60.45	36.97	23.48
Currant (jelly)	62.00	37.92	24.08

The following table gives the difference in the cost of pots, and the last column the difference for sugar and pots combined:

Kind of fruit.	U. S., cts.	Eng., cts.	More in U. S., cts.	Total extra cost, cts.*
Greengages and damsons	62.5	37.5	25	48.48

*On account of tariff on sugar and packages.

The wholesale selling prices in London by the dozen are: Strawberry jam, $1.30; raspberry and black currant, $1.24; and other kinds ranging as low as 95 cents. There is, therefore, a tariff difference here against the American manufacturer and housewife equal to 40 per cent. and upward of the English wholesale prices.

When the abolition of the sugar tax has removed a part of this difference the people will doubtless see that it would be a good thing to strike off the tax on the jams also, and thus remove the entire difference.

On the latter subject Mr. Reed Gordon, a prominent jam manufacturer of New York, says:

"Give the American potters free chemicals and clay, give the American glass-tumbler manufacturers free chemicals and sand and they will need no protection. In fact the tumbler manufacturers need none now. Give us absolute free trade in sugar, glassware and earthenware so that we may be protected from trusts and combinations; give us absolute free trade in preserved fruits including jams, and we will buy more small fruits from the farmers, pay them better prices, and lower the price of our goods. We can then control the American markets, and build up a large export trade to South America where there is a large demand for jam and other 'sweets.' Not only this, but we would be able to sell our goods in Glasgow, Dundee and London, the chief jam manufacturing centers of the world. We would be able to compete with them in their own markets, instead of being undersold by them in our own markets as is the case to-day."

Our Trade with Canada in Farm Products.

For the year ending June 30 our imports from Canada amounted to $40,522,000, and our exports to that country were $52,219,000.

Trade of that kind ought not to awaken any fears from the protectionists, since they believe that the profit is with us whenever we sell more to a country than we buy from it. According to the notions of the protectionists themselves, there is no reason to interfere with our Canadian trade; yet, under the pretense of protecting our farmers, McKinley shuts out Canadian potatoes, which next spring many of the farmers themselves will be forced to buy for seed, and pay the McKinley duty of 25 cents a bushel.

A few figures will show the folly of McKinley's attempt to shut out the few Canadian farm products which we buy. While we import about 11,000,000 bushels of barley from Canada, we sell the Canadians 8,000,000 bushels of corn, against only 174 bought by us from them; and we sell them 1,800,000 bushels of wheat, against only 120,000 bought from them. The Canadians sell us $1,388 worth of flour; we sell them $3,411,000 worth. We buy a few thousand horses and cattle in Canada, and $91,000 worth of meat products; on the other hand we sell Canada 38,500,000 pounds of bacon, 16,390,000 pounds of pickled pork, 60,000,000 pounds of canned beef, and 12,000,000 pounds of lard.

Is it not a piece of transparent humbug to pretend that our farmers need protection from the farmers of Canada?

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. IX.

The Balance of Trade Theory.

Dear Farmer Brown: I have been neglecting you; but I will now resume my letters, and continue them for some time, for there is still much to say on the tariff question.

I wish in this and a few following letters to speak of the erroneous ideas on which the protectionists rest their system of economic belief. I am not one of those who think that the great mass of protectionists are consciously trying to palm off a humbug upon the people; I believe that most of them are sincere in holding that protection is necessary to the prosperity of the country. It is not possible for vast numbers of people to act together as a party on a basis of conscious hypocrisy. Humanity is not capable of such fraud.

The first error of the protectionist system is what is called the "balance of trade theory."

They mean by this term that our sales in foreign countries must be equal to what we buy there, and that if they are not so great we are trading at a loss.

Mr. Blaine had this balance of trade theory in his mind when he told us last summer that our exports to Brazil were only $9,000,000 worth, while our imports from Brazil were $60,000,000 worth, and he added: "In the republic of Brazil we lost $51,000,000."

A most astounding conclusion for an intelligent man to reach!

What, then, is the error on which this notion rests?

The error is in assuming that the trade of a nation is to be treated as a unit, just as if a nation were a big farm. In running your farm you know very well that you are doing a losing business when you buy more than you sell. In that case you are going in debt. But it by no means follows that a nation is going in debt when its imports exceed its exports. As a matter of fact, the imports of England far exceed its imports every year, the excess of imports over exports for the first ten months of the present year being $340,000,000; but it by no means follows that England is going in debt, or that her money is leaving the country. On the contrary, other countries are heavily in debt to England and are sending it every year a vast stream of wool, cotton, grain, provisions, etc., to pay the mere interest on that indebtedness.

At the other extreme in this matter of exports and imports are the poorest commercial nations on earth, like Spain and Egypt, whose exports are always far greater than their imports. This simply means that Spain and Egypt are heavily in debt to other countries, and are therefore compelled to send out a stream of goods far greater than what it receives, in order to pay the interest and principal of their debt. The ideal which the protectionist sets up for the United States is found in the commerce of such poor countries as Spain and Egypt; and, in fact, our exports are much greater than our imports, the difference going largely to pay interest to British investors and freights to British ship-owners.

The trade between two nations is always to be looked upon as the total of thousands of separate transactions between individual merchants. These are shrewd business men who calculate profits closely. Would an American merchant continue to trade with a foreign merchant if he found such trade unprofitable? Blaine lamented our loss of $51,000,000 in Brazil in one year; and yet our merchants go right on trading with Brazil, not yet having discovered that loss. Are they fools? I trow not. Our largest purchases in Brazil are coffee and crude rubber, which our merchants certainly find it profitable to buy.

The balance of trade theory rests upon a mistaken conception of the nature of money. The balance of trade must be kept in our favor, says the protectionist, meaning thereby that our sales in foreign markets must exceed our purchases, so that money may "flow into the country" to balance the account. But money is not a thing to be desired for its own sake. We cannot wear it or eat it. It is valuable solely because it can be exchanged for things which we do wear and eat. If instead of money we bring back from Europe the very things which we need to wear or eat, is not the same end reached in the long run as if we had taken money entirely in payment for our exports? More than that, if the money will buy more in Europe than it will here, do we not clearly gain by turning the money into goods on the other side and importing the goods? Do we not lose by bringing our money home, where it will buy less than it will abroad?

Furthermore, to increase the amount of money in a country does not necessarily cause a greater measure of prosperity; it may, in fact, produce the contrary result. No country, perhaps, ever had a greater amount of money per capita than France during the French revolution a hundred years ago; yet no great nation ever suffered keener want for food and clothing. In proportion as you increase money above the actual needs of exchange you make money itself cheap; in other words, you make commodities dear—and nothing is gained. Moreover, the great development of the banking system of this country has made the need for money relatively less than it was years ago. Ninety-nine per cent. of the heavier money transactions in the United States is done by means of checks, and the extension of banks into small towns and their multiplication in our cities has brought it to pass that a vast proportion of the smaller transactions are executed in the same way. It is a fact that no civilized country, with the possible exception of England, needs less money per capita to-day than the United States.

The balance of trade theory rests upon the further error that selling is more profitable than buying. Blaine examines our trade with Brazil, finds our sales to be $9,000,000, our purchases $60,000,000, and the difference of $51,000,000, he says, was lost. He assumes that when we sold we gained, and when we bought we lost. But is not that assumption amazingly shallow? When you sell corn at less than it cost you to produce it, there is a loss, is there not? When by a good trade you buy a horse at less than the market price, you consider that you have gained, do you not? Every purchase you consider on its own merits, and so with your sales, and you are certain that you are just as likely to make a gain in buying as in selling.

One more very important fact must be noticed in regard to the balance of trade theory. When the exports and imports are summed up at the end of the year, it must not be forgotten that the exports are stated in American prices and the imports in foreign prices. Our total exports for 1889, including gold and silver coin and bullion, were $839,000,000, and the like total of imports was $774,000,000. To illustrate the point I wish to make, let us take our exports of flour and our imports of tin plate. We exported 5,271,000 barrels of flour to England in 1889, which went into the treasury reports at the American price, an average of $4.85 per barrel, or 2.43 cents per pound; and we imported from England 724,207,000 pounds of tin plates, which went into the treasury reports at the English price, an average of 2.88 cents per pound. Now the point I wish to make is this: the moment our flour touched Liverpool it was worth more than the New York price of 2.43 cents per pound. When the flour was there sold at a profit the money was put, we will suppose, into the plates; but the moment the tin plates reached New York they were worth more than the Liverpool price of 2.88 cents per pound. Last year we exchanged flour for tin plates with the English at the rate of about seven pounds of flour for six pounds of tin plates, but did not want the flour; the English wanted the flour, but did not want the tin plates; accordingly we exchanged the one for the other with profit to ourselves by a process of what Blaine calls "friendly barter." In this way it is of the very nature of foreign trade that the exports of a given commodity should bring in another commodity worth more than the commodity exported. The greater the value of the commodities we get in exchange the more profitable is the trade for us, but the Republicans actually profess alarm when our imports are greater than our exports.

One word in conclusion: Our foreign trade is of the utmost importance to you as a farmer. The more tin-plates, woolen goods and other commodities we buy in England the greater will be the demand for your wheat, flour, corn and pork to send to England in payment. "The foreign market for another bushel of wheat or another barrel of pork" is what you want; and the more we extend that market by taking off the duties on foreign goods the greater will be your prosperity. Yours truly,

Richard Knox.

Giving Away Their Case.

When a man starts out to defend a falsehood he may succeed pretty well for a while; but in some interval, when caution is off her guard, he will betray himself, and let in a flood of light upon the dark fabric of falsehood which he has been so ingeniously weaving. For truth, like murder, will out.

The New York Tribune, the leading high-tariff organ of the country, is very confident that the McKinley tariff law is a good thing for California. Why? Here is its answer:

"For thousands of acres of new orange groves are just beginning to yield crops, and the new tariff means an increase of at least one-quarter in the income of every fruit-grower and farmer on the coast."

Now, the Tribune has long been engaged in the task of showing the people that the tariff does not increase prices. Here, however, it fairly and squarely gives the lie to its own teaching by telling us that the tariff will add one-quarter to the income of the fruit growers. The protection organ is here as frank as a Mr. Rosengarten who went before McKinley's committee to ask for a duty on quinine, and confessed that "if the effect of a high tariff is not to increase the price of the domestic article I do not see any use in the tariff."

Saw Making in Pennsylvania.

Mr. E. Dickinson, of Sheffield, England, was recently in America attending the meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute in New York. After visiting a number of our manufacturing establishments he returned to Sheffield and has given some account of what he saw in America. Among other things he saw a machine in the establishment of Disston & Sons at Tacony, Pa., for cutting and at the same time graduating the teeth of hand saws. The machine is fed by a boy and cuts 1,500 teeth per minute. The Englishman found that the Pennsylvania establishment was much superior in the rapidity and cheapness with which saws are turned out; and he saw packages of finished saws addressed to England.

The queer part of all this is that Disston has high protection against the English, and more than that, he is in a trust for maintaining prices on his saws. We Americans are a queer people!

Iron.

The production of pig-iron has always increased more rapidly than the population, and the ratio is an increasing one. Between 1830 and 1860 the production of iron increased, in this country, twice as fast as the population. Between 1860 and 1890 it increased four times as rapidly. In 1855 we were consuming iron at the rate of 117 pounds per capita, while in 1890 we are consuming it at the rate of 300 pounds per head, the whole of which iron, for the first time in our history, we are producing ourselves. Our production of pig-iron this year is estimated at 9,600,000 tons. England, on the other hand, produces more iron than it consumes. It produces about 500 pounds per head of its population and consumes but half of it, as against 144 pounds per capita in 1855. The production of iron ore in Great Britain has remained nearly stationary for the past ten years, producing a little more in 1882 than in 1889. We are increasing our product year by year. In the year 1900, with our increase of population and the present ratio of increase in the production of iron, we shall be producing it at the rate of 16,400,000 tons per annum

The world's consumption of iron in the year 1889 was 25,000,000 gross tons, of which we produced nearly a third and England a trifle more than we made. The consumption of iron by the world has increased 11,000,000 of tons a year above what it was ten years ago. If the coming ten years require a like annual increase, and that period is likely to require more, it is safe to say that in the year 1900 the world will require 35,000,000 gross tons of iron, of which the United States must furnish one-half and the other iron countries of the world the other half. There will be no difficulty in the United States meeting the world's increasing demand for iron. —Pullman (Ill.) Journal.

Age and Intellect.

The history of literary and scientific men furnishes many an illustrious example of intellectual power undimmed and undiminished by the influences of old age. Plato, Bacon, Milton, Burke, Cuvier, Humboldt, and Gladstone, and Bancroft, Whittier, and Holmes, of America, exhibited and exhibit to the latest the same ability which distinguished their earlier years. It may be doubted, however, whether this kind of exemption from the effects of age is not chiefly confined to men of extraordinary endowments. But cases of mental deterioration are common enough, and are the rule among the inferior grades of intellect.

A rattlesnake was recently killed in Lee County, Ga., which was eleven feet long, had nineteen rattles and a button, and in his stomach a full-grown rabbit. Even a naturalist would not care to confront such a reptile in a narrow path.

Nothing satisfactory can be spiritually obtained in which selfishness has ever so slight a share; and what we will to do, especially if it be any act of spiritual progress, we can always accomplish. —Anon.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure
The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.
It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
Dear Gents:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.
J. A. Harder,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

Crawfordsville, Ind., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

Crawfordsville, Ind., June 22, 1887.
My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the one and only one great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors."

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

—Christian Christiansen, a teamster of Fowler, while hauling gravel, fell under the wheels of his loaded wagon and was so severely injured that he died in an hour after the accident occurred. He was under the influence of liquor, and, after falling, was not able to rise before the wheels crushed his body.

—Wilmer Hall, son of Jesse M. Hall, a well-known farmer about six miles northwest of Richmond, was accidentally shot while out gunning. He had set his gun down by a tree, and when he picked it up a twig caught the trigger, and the entire load of No. 8 shot took effect in the left side and shoulder, severing the main artery. He will die.

—Joe Sibrell, of Tennyson, has sued the Air-line railroad, in the Spencer Circuit Court, for $5,000. Last September Sibrell, with two companions, boarded the train at Lincoln and refused to pay their fare. Near Gentryville they were put off by the trainmen, and Sibrell now claims that he was kicked of the train by an employe and injured for life, one side of his body being paralyzed.

—While 'coon-hunting, Mr. Sam Westfall, of Grandview, killed what is supposed to be a wild-cat. It was a fierce-looking animal and measured four feet and a half from head to tail. This is the second one of these animals killed in Spencer County within the past year, the first one measuring five feet from head to tail, and killed two dogs before killed by the hunters who discovered it in the woods.

—In answer to an inqury by the State Superintendent, Attorney General Smith gave an opinion that children of school age who are inmates of the State Reformatory and benevolent institutions cannot be legally included in the enumeration which furnishes the basis for the apportionment of the school fund. These children are given especial educational opportunities in the institutions which they occupy.

—An unknown man called John Acheson, a store-keeper at Odell's, from his bed at the store and demanded whisky. Acheson said he had no liquor, at which the stranger became angry and with the words "take that" fired, the bullet hitting Acheson in the neck and narrowly missing the jugular. Two hours later, when Acheson recovered consciousness, he found himself in bed, but he had been robbed of $50.

—At Sampson Hill, eighteen miles southwest of Columbus, a yellow metal has been discovered within the past few days in timber gulches owned by an old German named Gore. An analysis is said to have proven the metal to be gold. The tract is difficult of access and has been little frequented. Large quantities of the metal are thought to exist in the vicinity, and people in the surrounding country are greatly excited.

—Quite a sad accident occurred a few miles east of Bloomfield, resulting in the death of Uriah Chaney. He and Joseph Ockerman were sawing logs with a cross-cut saw on a hillside, Chaney standing on the lower side of the log. As soon as the log was sawed asunder it started rolling down the hill. Chaney, in an effort to get out of the way of the log, stumbled and fell, and was crushed to death instantly. The log remained across the dead man's breast until Ockerman went some distance for help.

—The 3-year-old daughter of Wesley Penny was burned to death at Logansport. The father and mother were out milking, when the child complained of being cold, and went into the house to get warm. They were alarmed at her cries a few moments afterward, and, rushing to the house, found her clothing in flames. She died from her injuries after living about two hours in an unconscious condition. It is supposed her clothing caught from the stove, which she had opened.

—George Washington, an old citizen residing near Crawfordsville, committed suicide in rather an unusual manner. He would not accompany his wife to town, but as soon as she was gone he went to a well in the woods, hung his vest, coat and hat on the pump, put his boots in the trough, pried off a board of a platform, and slid down the pump into seven feet of water, where he remained three hours before his body was taken out. He left a note in his pocket, stating who he wanted to preach his funeral, the names of those who owed him money, and that he did not want much money expended in burying him. He was 70 years old.

—Henry Carney, a well-known young business man of Wabash, died of heart disease. He had been in bad health for some days, but his demise was unexpected. He was 30 years of age and leaves a family.

—Ira Garland, of Indianapolis, brakeman on the Indianapolis and Vincennes road, was severely injured about the shoulders while coupling cars at Paragon, by being caught between the bumpers. He was taken to Martinsville for treatment.

—John Piercy, a tramp aged 36, son of Patrick Piercy, a Philadelphia paper manufacturer, was found dead beside a log fire at Edinburg, about which he and six companions had been carousing the night before. Congestion of the lungs was the cause of death.

—Dr. Munhall, the evangelist, has closed a four weeks' session of revival meetings at the First Baptist Church of Shelbyville. His success was crowned with over three hundred accessions to the different churches. He was ably assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Lowe, of New York, two very fine vocalists.

WHY I AM NOT AN EDITOR.

BY BOB FORD.

I HAVE often been asked why I retired from the lucrative position of editor-in-chief of the Erie County Sky-Scraper, and, lest there might be some mistaken ideas regarding my discharging the paper from my employ, I will endeavor to explain away the clouds of doubt that seem to hover around my transactions with the aforesaid paper. I am aware that it may seem cruel and unkind of me to leave this paper in the flowery springtime of its youth, to struggle on with no master hand to guide it on to fame and a sheriff's sale, but I am not as strong as I used to be, nor as robust, and when some kind friend, who is more muscular than I am, takes exceptions to my style of personals and editorials, and emphasizes his arguments by standing me on the bald spot of my head until he makes pi of my false teeth and spectacles, and my face looks like an abnormal development of Hubbard squash, I seem to lose my old-time vigor and enthusiasm, and I pine for the good old times when I was unknown to fame and my creditors. I am naturally of a sensitive make-up, and such things grate harshly on my bilious temperament. There are other reasons why I have left the editorial chair, and allowed the Sky-Scraper to unconsciously meander on into obscurity, where it can darn its socks and pay its debts—reasons that a cold, calloused world might say reflected on my general good standing as a Presbyterian. The most obvious reason, however, was the peculiar style of communication that I daily received from the outside world. I herewith append a letter which is one of many which caused me to shuffle off the journalistic coil:

KORN FLATS POSTOFFICE, May 10, '87.

deer editer—It is with conflictin moshuns of sorrer and resignashun that I adres this epistol to you, in order to let the wurld at large kno the feelins that now are harrowin my buzzum. he has gone. he has departed. my consort has unfolded himself like the arabs do their camp meetin tents, and has fled to parts unknown, and left his relict to fite the visisertudes of a kold wurld single handed. The scaldin teers fall like the mity niagry, but they do not drown the thots of him who is now gone from my side. He is not ded; oh, no, the he had better be afore I lay eyes on him agin. He has skipped with another woman; a red-headed hussy, who lived nex door, with a wart on her nose. No longer can I find konsolashuns and komfort, in takin in washins, and talkin bout my nabers with widder Peabody. the wun great sorrer of my life is eacth up my soul; is knawin at my vitals; and I only wey a hundred and ninety. I am but the shadder of my former self. But I was not always so. I was once gay and frivolus; the only dautter of rich parents who run a cheese factory on shares.

Luxuries wer mine, but I gave them a l up to becom the wife and kumpanyun of Ebinezer Snickles; an this is my reward, this is my compensation for my grate sackrifise; left alone to pine an fade away like the last rose of summer, or the modest lily. Wurds fale to expres my feelins; my hart is broke, an my liar hangs tuneless on the dorenob. Why he shud flea frum me I kant tell, as I allers was kind to him, an allers allowed him to kule off his warm back on my kold feet. The fire burns cheeries on the herth, an no longer do I see the deer figger of my Ebinezer peelin the pertaters or my bunyuns. My sole cries out in angwish against its lot, an my very hands gro nervus to feel of my consort's locks, as they were wont to do. No more shal I find peace and komfort in rubbin his hed with the flat-iron, or layin him under the bed with the rollin-pin. My hart grows heavy under its birdin of greef. No more shal I see my beloved 'Neezer sneakin out behind the woodshed to smoke, or ringin the clothes while I talk with Widder Peabody. O, why shud he leve me? Why did he not stay and be happy as we used to be? Deer editer, I addres these lines to you, hopin that they may be the means of bringin him back to my lovin embrase. Ebenezer was a tall man, a trifle stupe sholdered, and rather leanish. You wud kno him by a skar jest over his rite eye, that I gave him wun day as a token of my esteam; his beerd, what is left of it, is kinder gray, and his frunt teeth are all gone. When last sene he wore a red flannel shurt an a vest with out eny buttins on it. The left leg of his pantalunes he wares in his bute, an the rite leg hangs down about his shew (i mene the rite leg of his pantalunes); he usuly walks a little lame, sometimes in wun leg and sometimes in tother, accordin to sirkumstances. I think it was the rite leg last time. hopin you may see him, and tell him how i am pinin to see him and love him as of yoar, I remain, yures in greef,

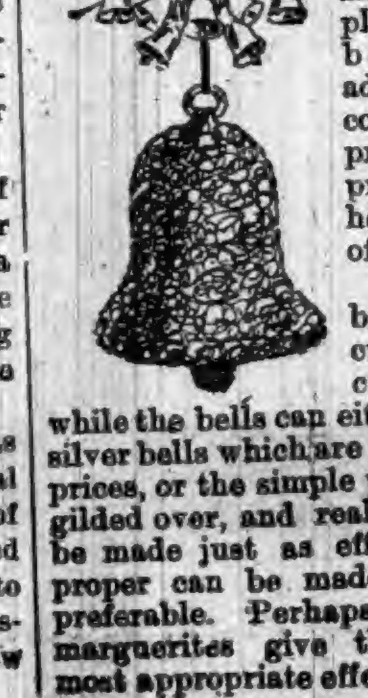
It is said that a vigorous motion of the jaws will cure the nose bleed. Think a minute. Did you ever know a woman to have the nose bleed!

A New Bridal Bell.

A clever English woman has conceived a new idea in floral bridal bells, says the Ladies' Home Journal, and as the simplest economy can be obtained in adopting it, the conceit becomes as practical as it is pretty. We give here an illustration of it.



The gnarled branch can be secured anywhere in city or country, while the bells can either be the pretty silver bells which are sold at reasonable prices, or the simple penny-cheap bells gilded over, and really the latter can be made just as effective. The bell proper can be made of any flowers preferable. Perhaps, white roses or marguerites give the prettiest and most appropriate effect.

Horse Hair.

The great bulk of the horse hair used in the United States is imported from the Argentine Republic and Uruguay. The hair sells in Buenos Ayres and Montevideo at from 26 to 32 cents per pound, and is packed in bales weighing about 1,000 pounds, and costing from $250 to $300 each. The total amount imported in 1882 was 4,082,000 pounds, of which 3,417,000 pounds came from South America, 193,000 pounds from Mexico, and 469,000 pounds from Russia. In the previous year the importation was 3,843,972 pounds, and in 1880 nearly 4,000,000 pounds; but in 1879 it was not quite 2,000,000 pounds. Assuming an average price of 28 cents per pound, the amount imported last year would reach a total value of about $1,150,000. The bulk of this hair is manufactured by four or five concerns, one of which is in Boston, one in New York, one in Philadelphia, and one in Baltimore.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

A Query About Fashions.

Why do the fashion magazines never show the styles of dresses for fat girls? In the fashion plates the bean-pole variety of young lady has exclusive possessions, and the common inference is that the fat girls are not worth dressing. This is a mistake. The fact is that fat girls do not require any information about fashions. They know it all, and it is the lean ones who have to go to the magazine to get posted.

The Christmas Number OF THE NEW YORK LEDGER

will have a cover beautifully printed in colors containing on its front title-page the original of the engraving here illustrated. It will also contain twenty pages of illustrations and reading matter contributed by the great writers of the day, and unexcelled in quality by that of any publication in the United States. This number will be one of the three numbers sent in response to our offer of Three Weeks for 10 cents

These three numbers will contain a larger number of illustrations and 50 per cent. more reading matter than that contained in any of the magazines, therefore our offer embraces both quantity and quality. The 3 numbers for 10 cts. contain:

(1) Mrs. Amelia E. Barr's new serial, "The Beads of Tasmer." Mrs. Barr is the author of that most successful serial, "Friend Olivia," just completed in The Century; but hereafter Mrs. Barr will write exclusively for The New York Ledger.

(2) Hon. George Bancroft's description of "The Battle of Lake Erie," beautifully illustrated.

(3) Margaret Deland's latest story, "To What End?"

(4) James Russell Lowell's poem, "My Brook," written expressly for The Ledger, beautifully illustrated by Wilson de Meza, and issued as a FOUR-PAGE SOUVENIR SUPPLEMENT.

(5) Mrs. Dr. Julia Holmes Smith starts a series of articles giving very valuable information to young mothers.

(6) Robert Grant's brilliant society novel, "Mrs. Harold Stagg."

(7) Harriet Prescott Spofford, Marion Harland, Marquise Lanza, Maurice Thompson, and George Frederic Parsons contribute short stories.

(8) James Parton, M. W. Hazeltine and Oliver Dyer (author of "Great Senators") contribute articles of interest.

In addition to the above, SPARKLING EDITORIALS, Illustrated Poems, HELEN MARSHALL NORTH's chatty column, and a variety of delightful reading of interest to all members of the household.

The foregoing is a sample of the matter which goes to make up the most perfect National Family Journal ever offered to the American people.

Send 10 cents for these three numbers and judge for yourself, or send only $2 for a year's subscription to

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENT FOR CHRISTMAS.

ROCHESTER EXTENSION LAMP FREE

WITH EMBOSSED ROCHESTER FONT

The Piano Extension (or floor-stand) Lamp is now the popular lamp. Such a lamp adds very much to the furnishings of any handsome parlor. Where there is a piano or an organ one of these handsome lamps is almost a necessity; it is certainly a very useful luxury.

This lamp we have made especially to meet all requirements. It is all solid brass, with brass relief finish—something no other manufacturer has attempted to furnish in a lamp of this price. The fount is the genuine Rochester Fount, richly embossed; it is equally as ornamental, and has the same burner as put on the richest and most costly lamps. The lamp is 5 feet high from floor to burner, when extended; and can be lowered to 3 feet 8 inches from floor.

We send with the lamp a large size umbrella silk fringe shade, with brass skeleton shade-holder and two chimneys. In ordering, please state color of shade desired—red, orange, yellow or pink.

To give full particulars how to obtain this lamp FREE takes too much space for an advertisement. We therefore have arranged with Godey's Lady's Book of Philadelphia to publish full information in their December and January numbers, either one of which will be sent on receipt of 15 CTS. sent to GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, Philadelphia, Pa.

EPPS'S COCOA BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1840.

Small as the village was, the inhabitants were alive to the need of educating their children and Mr. Sherlock, trustee went in search of a teacher. He found one in the person of Miss Jane Bailey, who engaged to teach a subscription school for the summer term. The school was held in a deserted, partly unfinished building which was, also, used for meetings. Sherlock complains of the scarcity of provisions which were brought up from Ft. Wayne. Himself and Ingman being in partnership in cabinet-making, received an order accompanied by $5.00. This money came very opportunely and it was, at once, given to Riley Jacobs who was going to the city, and he was directed to use it in buying flour, but it was not a question of price, there was none to be had and Jacobs invested the money in corn meal which was found to be musty and both families were out of meal in a week. The question of provisions was a serious one and those scarce of cash saw hard times. There was hunger and not much means on hand to satisfy its cravings. Greens were gathered on the bottom and boiled for use. Deer and pheasants could be killed with little difficulty and venison was plenty. Sherlock though laying no claim to skill in hunting, shot three deer one evening on what was later the Mader farm. It was the need of flour; meal and even potatoes were welcome provided they were to be had. Night after night the wolves assembled above the mill dam and their chorused howlings made darkness dismal to the few occupants of the village.

Sickness from ague became serious; aid from roots was sought and found fruitless and a Dr. Wheelock was sent for from Huntertown.

The records inform us that O. A. Parsons came in '40, applied for a license to sell merchandise which was granted him, and so a second stock of supplies was brought in while Freeman the pioneer in mercantile effort continued in the business. Their patronage as we have intimated was from the new comers on their entries miles away and their goods were of the kind in demand by those who were governed in choice by necessity.

The village can scarcely be said to have been growing. To be sure, lots changed owners, a school had been taught, a jail and a court house were contemplated, a few cabins went up and tradesmen sought to practice their callings, but life was lonely and monotonous and only the sonorous sighing of the sawmill broke the primitive stillness. Settlers coming along in their wagons temporarily left their families here till preparations could be made for shelter on their future farms and the women were glad when called to leave, and there are yet living those who perferred the loneliness of the woods in the company of infant children in a doorless, sashless cabin, to the little settlement of straggling houses to which the summer evening breeze wafted the paralyzing miasm rising from the milldam and along the timber obstructed bed of Cedar creek.

On September 5th '40 Sarah A. Sherlock was born. She is the wife of Mr. Cass, and is now the oldest native resident of the town of Auburn.

Nelson Payne, a blacksmith, by trade was living on a farm in Richland township, and early became identified with public affairs.

At the May session of the commissioners court, the county officers having determined to build a court house on the public square, appointed Messrs Freeman, Park and Payne superintendents to attend to the business.

Its dimensions were to be "thirty feet north and south, and forty feet, east and west, six feet of which shall be a portico, four feet to stairs and wood rooms, leaving the court house thirty feet square. Two front doors and an alley from each to circle fronting the judges bench which was to be elevated a few feet above the floor. The clerk's seat and table to be in front of the bench. The criminal's box to be also, in front of the bench. The rooms to be lighted by eleven 24-light windows above and below. The front of portico to be supported by four turned pillars fifteen inches in diameter." The cost of this contemplated building was to be defrayed by a sale of lots belonging to the county, excepting those required to pay for the jail, ten per cent set aside by law for a county library, and in-lot No. 12 which was not to be sold.

On the 9th of September Riley Jacobs succeeded Mr. Freeman as county agent and at this session the county levy was fixed at $2.00 on $100.00.

Initial measures were taken to destroy wolves by a bounty of two dollars a scalp for each wolf over six months old, and one dollar for each one under that age. The expected hunters were instructed to produce the scalps before a justice of the peace and to swear that they were the immediate cause of the death of the wolves, that they were killed within the bounds of the county and that they have not spared a she wolf when it was in their power to destroy her. The justice then destroyed the scalps and issued certificate of presentation which certificates brought before commissioners were valid authority for issue of county warrant for bounty.

Something over $50. was paid out in 1841 to the Goetschins brothers, James and Dewitt, John Mathews, Elias Smith, Samuel Warren, and Lyman Holbrook. From 1842 to 1849, about $285.00 was paid in bounties; the largest amount in any one year being $171.62 in 1849. After this date it became possible to raise sheep and not till late years has that domestic wolf—the dog become a terror to sheep raising. The bounty of early days has become the tax of the present and the surplus fund after paying for all sheep killed, is paid to the county treasurer and by the auditor apportioned to townships as school revenue. Wolf hunting was a lucrative business and called into action the best skill in the county.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

Wm. Fisher has gone to Rochester, N. Y.

Bob Burdett the lecturer was in town Tuesday.

Dr. McCaskey, of Ft. Wayne, was in town, Thursday.

Last week, Tuesday, Mr. Roth, of Kendallville, was in town.

Philip Morell and wife, returned from Ft. Wayne last week Monday.

Mrs. Young, who has been visiting friends in Angola, has returned home.

The members of the M. E. church are preparing to give the Sunday school an entertainment on Christmas eve.

Monday evening, A. D. Locke, Mr. Shuman and Mr. Fisher, started on their western trip. They will visit many important points before returning.

The new U. B. church in Smithfield will be dedicated on Sunday, Dec. 28th. Prominent ministers are expected to officiate, and the people are cordially invited to attend.

We have, in Waterloo, a family who have, during the last summer, raised forty-five chickens. They have given them excellent care and now will not kill or sell one of them, but keep them for pets. When they want to feast on chicken they go down street and buy what they want.

Miss Cora Faucett has entered into an engagement to teach until next September in Butte City. She receives sixty-five dollars per month—ten dollars more than heretofore. Butte City is ninety miles from her first location—a long, wearisome ride over the mountains. It is a place of forty thousand inhabitants. So much smelting is done here, that the smoke is so thick as to obscure the sun.

The sudden death of Mrs. Louis Henning, of the country, and the circumstances attending it, so far as is generally known, not only shocks, but casts a sadness over our community. Mrs Henning sometime during Sunday night shot herself in the head, killing herself almost instantly. Of course each person has a different version of the occurrence, but probably the one stating that she went to a bureau drawer for some medicine and accidently hit the trigger of a revolver, which shot her, is correct.

CONCORD.

Uncle John Wyatt has returned.

Remember the oyster supper, Dec. 20.

Charlie Koch has purchased a new sleigh.

The pioneer question will shortly be explained in full.

Trustee Woodcox dined with G. W. Draggoo, Monday.

Newton Wyatt has friends from Leo, visiting his family.

A carpet rag party was held at Mrs. Ella Baker's, last Thursday.

Mrs. Andrews, of Ashland, Ohio, is here visiting her many friends.

Frank Rhodes, of Spencerville, visited his cousin, Conny Gifford, last Sunday.

Miss Birdie Krise, of Mt. Hope, was the guest of Miss Lydia Wyatt last Sabbath.

Mrs. George and daughter, May, of Auburn, are the guests of Mrs. Henry Seibert.

Mrs. Rachel Draggoo, of Kendallville, is the guest of G. W. and J. B. Draggoo, this week.

Rev. S. S. Stanton is holding forth protracted efforts with a reasonable degree of success.

Mrs. Henry Jenkins and Mrs. Ed. Leighty, of St. Joe, were the guests of Mrs Tell Elson, last Friday.

Last Sabbath evening, J. B. Draggoo hitched up his fiery steeds and took a big load of young people over to Fairview.

Mrs. T. H. Murray and daughter, Goldie, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. D. W. Butler and daughter, Andree, of Spencerville, were the guests of Mrs. C. H. Brown, last Wednesday.

SPENCERVILLE.

Our merchants are displaying a fine line of holiday goods.

Mrs. McCartney is making her home with her son J. N. Hursh.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Baltz returned from Tiffin, Ohio, Tuesday.
